(a) there shall be deducted that proportion of the amount, if any, by which

(i) the increase, if any, as a result of the issue, in the paid-up capital in respect of all the shares of the capital stock of the purchaser, computed without reference to this subsection as it applies to the issue,

(a) the cost to the taxpayer of any property (other than shares of the capital stock of the acquiring affiliate) receivable by the taxpayer as consideration for the disposition shall be deemed to be the fair market value of the property at the time of the disposition;

(b) the cost to the taxpayer of any shares of any class of the capital stock of the acquiring affiliate receivable by the taxpayer as consideration for the disposition shall be deemed to be that proportion of the amount, if any, by which the total of the adjusted cost bases to the taxpayer, immediately before the disposition, of the shares disposed of exceeds the fair market value at that time of the consideration receivable for the disposition (other than shares of the capital stock of the acquiring affiliate) that

(i) the fair market value, immediately after the disposition, of those shares of the acquiring affiliate of that class

(4) Exception — Subsection (3) is not applicable in respect of a disposition at any time by a taxpayer of a share of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate, all or substantially all of the property of which at that time was excluded property (within the meaning assigned by subsection 95(1)), to another foreign affiliate of the taxpayer where the disposition is part of a series of transactions or events for the purpose of disposing of the share to a person who, immediately after the series of transactions or events, was a person (other than a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer) with whom the taxpayer was dealing at arm's length.

(4) Exception — Subsection (3) does not apply in respect of a disposition at any time by a taxpayer of property that is

(a) a share of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate, all or substantially all of the property of which at that time was excluded property (within the meaning assigned by subsection 95(1)), to another foreign affiliate of the taxpayer where the disposition is part of a series of transactions or events for the purpose of disposing of the share to a person who, immediately after the series of transactions or events, was a person (other than a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer) with whom the taxpayer was dealing at arm's length; or

(b) a specified participating interest.

Application: The October 30, 2003 Notice of Ways and Means Motion (NRTs and FIEs), subsec. 11(1), will amend subsec. 85.1(4) to read as above, applicable to dispositions and exchanges that occur in taxation years that begin after 2002.

Technical Notes: Subsection 85.1(3) permits a taxpayer to transfer, on a taxdeferred "rollover" basis, the shares of a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer to another foreign affiliate of the taxpayer. Subsection 85.1(5) provides a similar rollover for shareholders who exchange shares of a foreign corporation for shares of another corporation. Subsections 85.1(4) and (6), respectively, identify circumstances in which subsection 85.1(3) or (5) will not apply.

Subsection 85.1(4) is amended to provide that subsection 85.1(3) does not apply to a disposition at any time by a taxpayer of a property that is a specified participating interest. Subsection 85.1(6) is similarly amended so that subsection 85.1(5) does not apply to an exchanged share that is, immediately before the exchange, a specified participating interest. The concept of a specified participating interest is generally relevant in the context of the foreign investment entity rules in sections 94.1 to 94.4. For more information on the definition "specified participating interest" in subsection 248(1), see the commentary on that definition.

Related Provisions: 248(10) — Series of transactions.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-243R4: Dividend refund to private corporations; IT-291R3: Transfer of property to a corporation under subsection 85(1).

(5) Foreign share for foreign share exchange — Subject to subsections (3) and (6) and 95(2), where a corporation resident in a country other than Canada (in this section referred to as the "foreign purchaser") issues shares of its capital stock (in this section referred to as the "issued foreign shares") to a vendor in exchange for shares of the capital stock of another corporation resident in a country other than Canada (in this section referred to as the "exchanged foreign shares") that were immediately before the exchange capital property of the vendor, except where the vendor has, in the vendor's return of income for the taxation year in which the exchange occurred, included in computing the vendor's income for that year any portion of the gain or loss, otherwise determined, from the disposition of the exchanged foreign shares, the vendor is deemed

(a) to have disposed of the exchanged foreign shares for proceeds of disposition equal to the adjusted cost base to the vendor of those shares immediately before the exchange, and

(b) to have acquired the issued foreign shares at a cost to the vendor equal to the adjusted cost base to the vendor of the exchanged foreign shares immediately before the exchange, and where the exchanged foreign shares were taxable Canadian property of the vendor, the issued foreign shares so acquired by the vendor are deemed to be taxable Canadian property of the vendor.

Related Provisions: 85.1(6) — Where rollover does not apply; 86.1(1) — Foreign spinoff; 95(2)(f.6)(i) — No FAPI rollover where 85.1(5) applies; 107(2)(d.1)(iii), 107.4(3)(f) — Deemed taxable Canadian property retains status when rolled out of trust or into trust; 248(25.1) — Deemed taxable Canadian property retains status through trust-to-trust transfer.

History: Subsec. 85.1(5) added by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 63(2), applicable to exchanges that occur after 1995.

(6) Where subsection (5) does not apply — Subsection (5) does not apply where

(a) the vendor and foreign purchaser were, immediately before the exchange, not dealing with each other at arm's length (otherwise than because of a right referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b) that is a right of the foreign purchaser to acquire the exchanged foreign shares);

(b) immediately after the exchange the vendor, persons with whom the vendor did not deal at arm's length or the vendor together with persons with whom the vendor did not deal at arm's length

(i) controlled the foreign purchaser, or

(ii) beneficially owned shares of the capital stock of the foreign purchaser having a fair market value of more than 50% of the fair market value of all of the outstanding shares of the capital stock of the foreign purchaser;

(c) consideration other than issued foreign shares was received by the vendor for the exchanged foreign shares, notwithstanding that the vendor may have disposed of shares of the capital stock of the other corporation referred to in subsection (5) (other than the exchanged foreign shares) to the foreign purchaser for consideration other than shares of the capital stock of the foreign purchaser;

(d) the vendor

(i) is a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada at the end of the taxation year of the vendor in which the exchange occurred, and

(ii) has included any portion of the gain or loss, otherwise determined, from the disposition of the exchanged foreign shares in computing its foreign accrual property income for the taxation year of the vendor in which the exchange occurred; or

(e) the vendor is a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada at the end of the taxation year of the vendor in which the exchange occurred and the exchanged foreign shares are excluded property (within the meaning assigned by subsection 95(1)) of the vendor.

Proposed Addition — 85.1(6)(f)

(f) the exchanged foreign shares are, immediately before the exchange, specified participating interest.

Application: The October 30, 2003 Notice of Ways and Means Motion (NRTs and FIEs), subsec. 11(2), will add para. 85.1(6)(f), applicable to dispositions and exchanges that occur in taxation years that begin after 2002.

Technical Notes: See under 85.1(4).

History: Subsec. 85.1(6) added by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 63(2), applicable to exchanges that occur after 1995.

(b) the distribution consists solely of common shares of the capital stock of another corporation that were owned by the particular corporation immediately before their distribution to the taxpayer (in this section referred to as the "spin-off shares");

(b) an election referred to in para. 86.1(2)(f) is deemed to be filed on a timely basis if it is filed with the Minister of National Revenue before the 90th day after the day on which the amending legislation is assented to.

Technical Notes (December 20, 2002): Subsection 86.1(2) defines an "eligible distribution" for the purposes of the tax-deferral that applies with respect to distributions to Canadian resident shareholders of spin-off shares by a foreign corporation. Subsection 86.1(2) is amended in three respects.

First, subparagraph 86.1(2)(c)(ii) requires that a taxpayer's original shares be included in a class that is widely held and actively traded on a prescribed stock exchange in the United States at the time of the distribution (section 3201 of the Regulations prescribes certain U.S. stock exchanges). The condition that the share be actively traded on a U.S. stock exchange is amended effective after 1999 to require that the taxpayer's original shares of the foreign corporation be, at the time of the distribution, widely held and

- actively traded on a prescribed stock exchange in the United States, or
- required, under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 of the United States, to be registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission (and are so registered).

In general, a class of shares of a U.S. corporation must be registered under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 with the Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC") if more than 500 shareholders own shares of the class, the corporation has more than $10 million in assets and shares of the class will be traded on a national securities exchange. Thus this SEC registration requirement applies if it is expected that the shares will trade on a national securities exchange, with the SEC filing and public disclosure requirements thereafter applying to the corporation regardless of whether any of its issued shares trade in the future on the exchange.

Second, the references in subparagraphs 86.1(2)(c)(iii) and 86.1(2)(e)(vi) to the United States Internal Revenue Code are replaced by "the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 of the United States, as amended from time to time".

Letter from Dept. of Finance, June 11, 2001:

Dear [xxx]

This is in response to your letters of January 19, May 1 and May 22, 2001 concerning your request on behalf of your client, [xxx] regarding proposed section 86.1 of the Income Tax Act (the "Act"). In particular, you ask that consideration be given to extending proposed subparagraph 86.1(2)(c)(ii) to foreign spin-off distributions made by a corporation resident in the United States (the "U.S.") where shares of the corporation are not actively traded on a prescribed stock exchange but are registered by the corporation with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission (the "SEC") under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 of the U.S. (the "Exchange Act").

Based on our understanding of the facts as set out in your letters, in September 2000 [xxx] undertook a spin-off transaction in the U.S. that was tax deferred to its U.S. shareholders but taxable to its Canadian shareholders. At the time of the spin-off, shares of [xxx] (i.e., the "original shares") did not actively trade on a prescribed stock exchange in the U.S. However, because [xxx] had more than [xxx] shareholders and more than [xxx] in assets, it was required by the Exchange Act to register its shares with the SEC and to comply with extensive public filing and disclosure requirements. The original shares were also widely held by more than [xxx] employees with more than [xxx] of those employees being resident in Canada.

We agree that the required registration with the SEC, as described in your letters, and all the requisite disclosures mandated by such registration is analogous to the registration and disclosure requirements for a public company actively traded on a U.S. prescribed stock exchange. However, we are of the view that retention of the widely held requirement in proposed subparagraph 86.1(2)(c)(ii) is appropriate in cases where shares of a class are required to be registered with the SEC. In the case at hand, this widely held requirement would extend to a company such as [xxx] that is widely held by the employees of the company.

Given our understanding of the facts, we will recommend to the Minister of Finance that proposed subparagraph 86.1(2)(c)(ii) of the Act be extended to original shares issued by a U.S. corporation where the shares are widely held, required to be registered and are so registered with the SEC under the Exchange Act. We will also recommend that such an amendment apply to distributions made after 1999. If the recommendation is acted upon, we anticipate that the amendment would be included in a future technical bill.

Yours sincerely,
Len Farber

Proposed Amendment — Cross-border share-for-share exchange

Supplementary information, Economic Statement, October 18, 2000: Canadian/Foreign Share-for-Share Exchanges

Under the Income Tax Act, certain share-for-share exchanges can be effected on a tax-deferred basis where the corporations involved are all resident in Canada or are all non-residents. These rules do not apply, however, to a Canadian resident shareholder who exchanges shares of a domestic corporation for shares of a foreign corporation (or vice versa).

It is intended that a share-for-share exchange rollover rule be developed in consultation with the private sector to apply to cross-border share-for-share exchanges where a Canadian resident shareholder receives only share consideration on the exchange. To ensure the preservation of the Canadian income tax base, rules must be developed to provide for, among other things, cost base adjustments, paid-up capital adjustments, the preservation of taxable Canadian property status, and adjustments for tax benefits that could potentially arise because of the conversion of capital gains into dividends (or vice versa). Any such rollover rule would not take effect before the release of draft legislation for public discussion.

Federal budget, Supplementary Information, February 18, 2003: Cross-Border Share-For-Share Exchanges

Under the Income Tax Act, certain share-for-share exchanges can be undertaken on a tax-deferred basis where the corporations involved are all resident in Canada or are all non-residents. These rules do not apply, however, to a Canadian resident shareholder who exchanges shares of a domestic corporation for shares of a foreign corporation. While there may be other indirect means of accomplishing such an exchange on a tax-deferred basis, the resulting transactions can be complex and costly.

In the October 2000 Economic Statement and Budget Update, the Government undertook to consult with interested parties on a tax deferral provision that specifically address tax-deferred cross-border share-for-share exchanges. At the same time, the Government noted that a basic requirement for such a mechanism is that it protect Canada's tax base.

A draft of legislative proposals, designed to balance these objectives, will be released in the near future for public review and comment.

Federal budget, Supplementary Information, March 23, 2004: Cross-Border Share-For-Share Exchanges

Under the Income Tax Act, certain share-for-share exchanges can be undertaken on a tax-deferred basis where the corporations involved are all resident in Canada or are all non-residents. These rules do not apply, however, to a Canadian resident shareholder who exchanges shares of a domestic corporation for shares of a foreign corporation. While there may be other indirect means of accomplishing such an exchange on a tax-deferred basis, the resulting transactions can be complex and costly.

In the October 2000 Economic Statement and Budget Update, the Government undertook to consult with interested parties on the merits and technical design of a tax deferral provision that would, if implemented, apply in respect of cross-border share-for-share exchanges. Budget 2003 reiterated this plan.

It is intended that a detailed proposal be released for public comment in the coming months.

87. (1) Amalgamations — In this section, an amalgamation means a merger of two or more corporations each of which was, immediately before the merger, a taxable Canadian corporation (each of which corporations is referred to in this section as a "predecessor corporation") to form one corporate entity (in this section referred to as the "new corporation") in such a manner that

(a) all of the property (except amounts receivable from any predecessor corporation or shares of the capital stock of any predecessor corporation) of the predecessor corporations immediately before the merger becomes property of the new corporation by virtue of the merger,

(b) all of the liabilities (except amounts payable to any predecessor corporation) of the predecessor corporations immediately before the merger become liabilities of the new corporation by virtue of the merger, and otherwise than as a result of the acquisition of property of one corporation by another corporation, pursuant to the purchase of that property by the other corporation or as a result of the distribution of that property to the other corporation on the winding-up of the corporation.

(c) all of the shareholders (except any predecessor corporation), who owned shares of the capital stock of any predecessor corporation immediately before the merger, receive shares of the capital stock of the new corporation because of the merger,

Proposed Addition — 87(2)(g.5)

(g.5) patronage dividends — for the purpose of section 135, the new corporation is deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation;

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 35(1), will add para. 87(2)(g.5), applicable to amalgamations that occur, and windings-up that begin, after 1997.

Technical Notes (December 20, 2002): New paragraph 87(2)(g.5) deems a new corporation formed on an amalgamation to be the same corporation as and a continuation of each of the predecessor corporations for the purpose of section 135. This paragraph, which applies to amalgamations that occur after 1997, ensures that the rules in section 135 concerning the deduction for and inclusion in income of patronage dividends continue to apply where a cooperative corporation or a customer of a cooperative corporation amalgamates with one or more other corporations between the time a cooperative corporation makes an allocation in proportion to patronage and the time that the patronage dividend is paid. This amendment ensures that payments made under subsection 135(1) by the new corporation in satisfaction of allocations made by a predecessor corporation will be deductible by the new corporation. In addition, new paragraph 87(2)(g.5) ensures that the deductibility of an amount paid to a new corporation formed on the amalgamation of the cooperative corporation's customer and another corporation will not be affected by the amalgamation.

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 35(2), will amend para. 87(2)(j.91) to read as above, applicable to amalgamations that occur, and windings-up that begin, after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes (December 20, 2002): Subsection 88(1) sets out rules relating to the winding-up of a subsidiary into a parent corporation that owns at least 90% of each class of shares of the subsidiary. A number of the rules that apply to amalgamations under subsection 87(2) also apply to windings-up under subsection 88(1).

Paragraph 87(2)(j.91) allows a new corporation, or, in the case of a winding-up under subsection 88(1), a parent corporation, to be considered as a continuation of its predecessors or subsidiary, as the case may be, for the purposes of determining an amount deductible under subsection 181.1(4) or 190.1(3). Those provisions relate, respectively, to the deduction from a corporation's tax otherwise payable under Part I.3 of an amount in respect of its Canadian surtax, and the deduction from a financial institution's tax otherwise payable under Part VI of an amount in respect of its tax under Part I of the Act.

Paragraph 87(2)(j.91) is amended to clarify that it does not affect the fiscal period of, or tax payable by, any corporation for any taxation year that ends prior to an amalgamation, or, by virtue paragraph 88(1)(e.2), the commencement of a winding-up under subsection 88(1).

(j.95) non-resident trusts and foreign investment entities — for the purposes of sections 94 to 94.4, the new corporation is deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, each predecessor corporation;

Application: The October 30, 2003 Notice of Ways and Means Motion (NRTs and FIEs), s. 13, will add para. 87(2)(j.95), applicable to taxation years that begin after 2000.

Technical Notes: Section 87 sets out rules that apply on the amalgamation of two or more taxable Canadian corporations. The amalgamated corporation is generally treated as a continuation of the predecessor corporations for the purposes of the Act.

New paragraph 87(2)(j.95) provides that, where there has been an amalgamation of two or more taxable Canadian corporations, the amalgamated corporation is deemed to be a continuation of its predecessor corporations for the purposes of sections 94 to 94.4, which relate to foreign trusts and foreign investment entities. Thus, for example, an amalgamated corporation will be considered to be a "contributor" (as defined in subsection 94(1)) to a trust if any predecessor corporation was a contributor to the trust. In addition, the new corporation's "deferral amount" (as defined in subsection 94.2(1)) in respect of an interest in a foreign investment entity will be determined in the same manner as a predecessor's "deferral amount" in respect of the same interest.

Because of the operation of paragraph 88(1)(e.2), new paragraph 87(2)(j.95) also applies to windings-up to which section 88 applies.

Proposed Addition — 87(2.3)

(2.3) Quebec credit unions — For the purpose of applying this section to an amalgamation governed by section 689 of An Act respecting financial services cooperatives, R.S.Q., c. C-67.3, an investment deposit of a credit union is deemed to be a share of a separate class of the capital stock of a predecessor corporation in respect of the amalgamation the adjusted cost base and paid up capital of which to the credit union is equal to the adjusted cost base to the credit union of the investment deposit immediately before the amalgamation if

(a) immediately before the amalgamation, the investment deposit is an investment deposit to which section 425 of the Savings and Credit Unions Act, R.S.Q., c. C-4.1, applies to the investment fund of that predecessor corporation; and

(b) on the amalgamation the credit union disposes of the investment deposit for consideration that consists solely of shares of a class of the capital stock of the new corporation.

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 35(6), will add subsec. 87(2.3), applicable to amalgamations that occur after June 2001.

Technical Notes (December 20, 2002): New subsection 87(2.3) provides a special rule that applies to an "investment deposit" of a Quebec credit union in another Quebec credit union (the "predecessor corporation"). This rule applies where the credit union's investment deposit in the predecessor corporation is disposed of because of an amalgamation of credit unions that includes the predecessor corporation with that amalgamation being governed by section 689 of the Act Respecting Financial Services Cooperatives, R.S.Q., 2001, c. C-67.3. The credit union's investment deposit will, if certain conditions are met, be deemed to be a share of the capital stock of the predecessor corporation having an adjusted cost base and paid up capital equal to the adjusted cost base of the investment deposit to the credit union. The conditions that must be met are that

- immediately before the amalgamation the investment deposit must be an investment deposit (to which section 425 of the Savings and Credit Unions Act, R.S.Q., 2001, c. C-4.1 applies) in an investment fund of the predecessor corporation; and
- on the amalgamation the credit union disposes of the investment deposit for consideration that consists solely of shares of the capital stock of the new corporation.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, December 5, 2000:

La présente fait suite à votre lettre du 27 octobre 2000 et à la réponse que nous vous avions donnée en novembre 1999 (copie jointe) concernant la réorganisation proposée du [xxx]. Je crois savoir que vous avez discuté de la question avec Davine Roach et Kerry Harnish de cette division, le 16 novembre 2000.

Lors de votre rencontre du 10 octobre 2000 avec des représentants de la Direction de la politique de l'impôt, vous indiquiez que l'Agence des douanes et du revenu du Canada (« l'ADRC ») avait déterminé que les dépôts à participation ne constituent pas des actions aux fins de la Loi de l'impôt sur le revenu (la « Loi ») et qu'ils ne peuvent donc être transférés en franchise d'impôt au moment de la fusion (selon la définition au paragraphe 87(1) de la Loi) [xxx]. Dans votre lettre du 27 octobre 2000, vous demandez donc que la Loi soit modifiée:

- pour traiter chaque « dépôt à participation » d'un contribuable comme une « action » aux fins de la fusion,
- pour considérer que l'action réputée représentant le dépôt à participation a un prix de base rajusté et un capital versé équivalant au prix de base rajusté du dépôt par ailleurs déterminé pour le contribuable,
- pour mettre en place une règle spéciale relativement à l'attribution du coût d'une telle action à la nouvelle ou aux nouvelles actions en fonction du coût plutôt que de la juste valeur marchande. Selon la règle actuelle d'attribution des coûts prévue au paragraphe 87(4), un transfert de coûts pourrait donner lieu à des gains en capital non réalisés artificiels relativement à certaines des nouvelles actions acquises lors de la fusion.

Comme nous l'indiquions dans notre lettre de novembre 1999, nous sommes disposés à recommander au ministre des Finances que la Loi soit modifiée pour assurer le transfert libre d'impôt d'un dépôt à participation échangé pour une action lors de la fusion [xxx]. Plus précisément, nous sommes disposés à traiter un dépôt à participation comme s'il s'agissait d'une action aux fins de l'application des règles relatives aux fusions à l'article 87 de la Loi. Nous sommes aussi disposés à considérer que l'action réputée représentant le dépôt à participation a un prix de base rajusté et un capital versé équivalent au prix de base rajusté de la participation du contribuable dans un dépôt à participation en particulier.

Toutefois, nous ne sommes pas disposés à nous écarter de la formule d'attribution selon la juste valeur marchande prévue au paragraphe 87(4) de la Loi dans le cas des transactions réalisées dans le cadre de la fusion de [xxx]. La formule actuelle tient compte des cas où les nouvelles actions ne sont pas de la même categorie que les anciennes actions. Nous croyons toutefois savoir que l'ADRC a adopté une mesure administrative qui pourrait être utile dans votre cas.

Enfin, nous sommes aussi disposés à recommander que les changements susmentionnés (que nous acceptons de recommander au ministre) s'appliquent aux fusions réalisées après 1999. Si nos recommandations sont acceptées, on prévoit que les modifications seraient incluses plus tard dans un projet de loi technique.

Veuillez agréer, Monsieur, l'expression de mes sentiments les meilleurs.

Le directeur, Division de la législation de l'impôt, Direction de la politique de l'impôt

Brian Ernewein

(b) a predecessor corporation entered into an agreement with a person at a particular time for consideration given by the person to the predecessor corporation,

(c) a share of the predecessor corporation

(i) that was a flow-through share (in this subsection having the meaning that would be assigned by subsection 66(15) if the definition "flow-through share" in that subsection were read without reference to the portion after paragraph (b) of that definition) was issued to the person before the amalgamation, or

(ii) that would (if it were issued) be a flow-through share, was to be issued to the person for the consideration under the agreement, and

(d) the new corporation

(ii) a right was issued to the person before the amalgamation to acquire a share that would, if it were issued, be a flow-through share, and

(d) the new corporation

(i) issues, on the amalgamation and in consideration for the disposition of the old share, a share (in this subsection referred to as a "new share") of any class of its capital stock to the person (or to any person or partnership that subsequently acquired the old share) and the terms and conditions of the new share are the same as, or substantially the same as, the terms and conditions of the old share, or

(ii) is, because of the right referred to in subparagraph (c)(ii), obliged after the amalgamation to issue to the person a share of any class of the new corporation's capital stock that would, if it were issued, be a flow-through share,

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 35(7), will amend paras. 87(4.4)(c) and (d) to read as above, applicable to amalgamations that occur after 1997.

Technical Notes (December 20, 2002): Paragraph 87(4.4)(c) sets out certain conditions that must be satisfied for a new corporation to renounce expenses to a flow-through shareholder of a predecessor corporation. This paragraph is amended, effective for amalgamations that occur after 1997, to delete the unnecessary reference to the definition "flow-through share" in subsection 66(15) and to ensure that this paragraph is consistent with the amended definition "flow-through share" in subsection 66(15).

Paragraph 87(4.4)(d) sets out certain conditions that must be satisfied to qualify for the relief provided in subsection 87(4.4). Subparagraph 87(4.4)(d)(i) requires the new corporation to issue a new share to the flow-through share subscriber in consideration for the flow-through share. Current subparagraph 87(4.4)(d)(i) does not, however, contemplate the transfer of a flow-through share by the flow-through share subscriber ("original flow-through shareholder") prior to an amalgamation. Consequently, subsection 87(4.4) does not accommodate a renunciation by the new corporation to an original flow-through shareholder of expenses incurred by the new corporation if the original flow-through shareholder transferred those shares to another person. Subparagraph 87(4.4)(d)(i) is amended, effective for amalgamations that occur after 1997, to accommodate the issuance of a new share to a person other than the original flow-through shareholder. This amendment ensures that the new corporation may renounce resource expenses incurred after an amalgamation to an original flow-through shareholder on the same basis as if that person had owned the flow-through share at the time of the amalgamation.

for the purposes of subsection 66(12.66) and Part XII.6 and for the purposes of renouncing an amount under subsection 66(12.6), (12.601) or (12.62) in respect of Canadian exploration expenses or Canadian development expenses that would, but for the renunciation, be incurred by the new corporation after the amalgamation,

(e) the person shall be deemed to have given the consideration under the agreement to the new corporation for the issue of the new share,

(f) the agreement shall be deemed to have been entered into between the new corporation and the person at the particular time,

(g) the new share shall be deemed to be a flow-through share of the new corporation, and

(h) the new corporation shall be deemed to be the same corporation as, and a continuation of, the predecessor corporation.

(8.1) Definition of "foreign merger" — For the purposes of this section, "foreign merger" means a merger or combination of two or more corporations each of which was, immediately before the merger or combination, resident in a country other than Canada (each of which is in this section referred to as a "predecessor foreign corporation") to form one corporate entity resident in the country in which all the predecessor foreign corporations were resident (in this section referred to as the "new foreign corporation") in such manner that otherwise than as a result of the distribution of property to one corporation on the winding-up of another corporation.

Para. 87(8.1)(c) amended by 1999, c. 22, subsec. 24(2), applicable to a taxpayer in respect of a merger or combination of foreign corporations

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 87.

(9) Rules applicable in respect of certain mergers [triangular amalgamation] — Where there has been a merger of two or more taxable Canadian corporations to form a new corporation that was controlled, immediately after the merger, by a taxable Canadian corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "parent") and, on the merger, shares of the capital stock of the parent (in this subsection referred to as "parent shares") were issued by the parent to persons who were, immediately before the merger, shareholders of a predecessor corporation, the following rules apply:

(a) for the purposes of paragraph (1)(c), subsection (4) and the Income Tax Application Rules, any parent shares received by a shareholder of a predecessor corporation shall be deemed to be shares of the capital stock of the new corporation received by the shareholder by virtue of the merger;

(a.1) for the purposes of subsections (4.1) and (4.2), a parent share issued to a shareholder in consideration for the disposition of a share of a class of the capital stock of a predecessor corporation shall be deemed to be a share of a class of the capital stock of the new corporation that was issued in consideration for the disposition of a share of a class of the capital stock of a predecessor corporation by that shareholder;

(a.2) for the purposes of subsection (4.3), a right listed on a prescribed stock exchange to acquire a share of a class of the capital stock of the parent shall be deemed to be a right listed on a prescribed stock exchange to acquire a share of a class of the capital stock of the new corporation;

Proposed Addition — 87(9)(a.21)

(a.21) for the purpose of paragraph (4.4)(d)

(i) each parent share received by a shareholder of a predecessor corporation is deemed to be a share of the capital stock of the new corporation issued to the shareholder by the new corporation on the merger, and

(ii) any obligation of the parent to issue a share of any class of its capital stock to a person in circumstances described in subparagraph (4.4)(d)(ii) is deemed to be an obligation of the new corporation to issue a share to the person;

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 35(8), will add para. 87(9)(a.21), applicable to amalgamations that occur after 1997.

Technical Notes (December 20, 2002): New paragraph 87(9)(a.21), which is effective for amalgamations that occur after 1997, provides that a share of the parent issued to a shareholder on a triangular amalgamation is considered, for the purpose of paragraph 87(4.4)(d), to be a share issued by the new corporation and that a right to acquire a share of the parent issued to a person on a triangular amalgamation is deemed to be in consideration for a right to acquire a share of the new corporation. New paragraph 87(9)(a.21) therefore ensures that the requirements in subparagraph 87(4.4)(d)(i) and (ii) that the new corporation issue a share or right to a person are satisfied. As a result, a new corporation may renounce expenditures to a flow-through shareholder of a predecessor corporation in accordance with a flow-through share agreement concluded before the triangular amalgamation.

(a.3) for the purpose of applying subsection (5) in respect of the merger, the reference in that subsection to "the new corporation" shall be read as a reference to "the parent";

(a.4) for the purpose of paragraph (c), any shares of the new corporation acquired by the parent on the merger shall be deemed to be new shares;

(a.5) for the purpose of applying subsection (10) in respect of the merger,

(i) the reference in paragraph (10)(b) to "the new corporation" shall be read as a reference to "the new corporation or the parent, within the meaning assigned by subsection (9)", and

(ii) the references in paragraphs (10)(c) and (f) to "the new corporation" shall be read as references to "the public corporation described in paragraph (b)".

(b) in computing, at any particular time, the paid-up capital in respect of any particular class of shares of the capital stock of the parent that included parent shares immediately after the merger

(i) there shall be deducted that proportion of the amount, if any, by which the paid-up capital, determined without reference to this paragraph, in respect of all the shares of the capital stock of the parent immediately after the merger exceeds the total of all amounts each of which is the paid-up capital in respect of a share of the capital stock of the parent or a predecessor corporation (other than any share of a predecessor corporation owned by the parent or by another predecessor corporation and any share of a predecessor corporation owned by a shareholder other than the parent or another predecessor corporation that was not exchanged on the merger for parent shares) immediately before the merger that

(A) the paid-up capital, determined without reference to this paragraph, in respect of that particular class of shares of the capital stock of the parent immediately after the merger

(B) the paid-up capital, determined without reference to this paragraph, in respect of all the issued and outstanding shares of the classes of the capital stock of the parent that included parent shares immediately after the merger, and

(ii) there shall be added an amount equal to the lesser of

(A) the amount, if any, by which

(I) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount deemed by subsection 84(3), (4) or (4.1) to be a dividend on shares of the particular class paid by the parent before the particular time

exceeds

(II) the total that would be determined under subclause (I) if this Act were read without reference to subparagraph (i), and

(B) the amount required by subparagraph (i) to be deducted in computing the paid-up capital of shares of the particular class; and

(c) notwithstanding paragraph (4)(b), the parent shall be deemed to have acquired the new shares of any particular class of the capital stock of the new corporation at a cost equal to the total of

(i) the amount otherwise determined under paragraph (4)(b) to be the cost of those shares, and

(ii) in any case where the parent owned, immediately after the merger, all of the issued shares of the capital stock of the new corporation, such portion of

(A) the amount, if any, by which

(I) the amount by which the total of the money on hand of the new corporation and all amounts each of which is the cost amount to the new corporation of a property owned by it, immediately after the merger, exceeds the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of any debt owing by the new corporation, or of any other obligation of the new corporation to pay any amount, that was outstanding immediately after the merger,

exceeds

(II) the total of the adjusted cost bases to the parent of all shares of the capital stock of each predecessor corporation beneficially owned by it immediately before the merger

as is designated by the parent in respect of the shares of that particular class in its return of income under this Part for its taxation year in which the merger occurred, except that

(B) in no case shall the amount so designated in respect of the shares of a particular class exceed the amount, if any, by which the total fair market value, immediately after the merger, of the shares of that particular class issued by virtue of the merger exceeds the cost of those shares to the parent determined without reference to this paragraph, and

(C) in no case shall the total of the amounts so designated in respect of the shares of each class of the capital stock of the new corporation exceed the amount determined under clause (A).

> (ii) there shall be added to the amount determined for the description of C in the formula in paragraph 14(1)(b), one-half of the amount, if any, determined for the description of Q in that definition in respect of that business immediately before the disposition;

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 36(1), will amend para. 88(1)(c.1) to read as above, applicable in respect of dispositions that occur after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes (December 20, 2002): Subparagraph 88(1)(a)(iii) generally provides that property of a subsidiary corporation is deemed to have been disposed of on its winding-up for proceeds of disposition equal to its cost amount to the subsidiary immediately before the winding-up. Under subparagraph 88(1)(c)(ii), the cost of such property to the parent corporation is equal to such proceeds of disposition. Paragraph 88(1)(c.1) ensures that an amount that would have been recaptured depreciation to the subsidiary under subsection 14(1), if the subsidiary had instead disposed of the eligible capital property for fair market value proceeds, is subject to possible recapture in the hands of the parent upon a subsequent sale of the property.

Paragraph 88(1)(c.1) is renumbered as subparagraph 88(1)(c.1)(ii) and remains unchanged. Paragraph 88(1)(c.1) is further amended by the addition of new subparagraph (i), which ensures that eligible capital property deductions claimed under paragraph 20(1)(b) by the subsidiary after its "adjustment time" (as defined in subsection 14(5), i.e., generally the beginning of the first taxation year of the subsidiary that starts after June 30, 1988) are included in the amount subject to potential recapture.

Paragraph 88(1)(c.1) applies to a parent corporation similarly to the application of paragraphs 85(1)(d.1) and (d.11) to a transferee corporation. For additional information, refer to the commentary to those paragraphs for an example of that application.

History: Para. 88(1)(c.1) added by 1994, c. 7, Sch. VIII (1993, c. 24), subsec. 38(3), applicable to distributions of property on the winding-up of a subsidiary in a taxation year of the subsidiary beginning after June 1988.

(c.2) ["specified person" and "specified shareholder"] — for the purposes of this paragraph and subparagraph (c)(vi),

> (i) "specified person" at any time means the parent and each person that would, if this Act were read without reference to paragraph 251(5)(b), be related to the parent at that time and, for this purpose, a person shall be deemed not to be related to the parent where it can reasonably be considered that one of the main purposes of one or more transactions or events was to cause the person to be related to the parent so as to prevent a property that was distributed to the parent on the winding-up from being an ineligible property for the purpose of paragraph (c),
> (ii) where at any time a property is owned or acquired by a partnership or a trust, corporation and that has a significant direct or indirect interest in any issued shares of the capital stock of the corporation", and

(B) a corporation is deemed not to be a specified shareholder of itself;

Related Provisions: 88(1)(c.8) — Meaning of "specified class" for 88(1)(c.2)(iii)(A); 88(4) — Amalgamation deemed not to be acquisition of control.

History: Cl. 88(1)(c.2)(iii)(A) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 66(2), applicable to windings-up that begin after November 1994. The clause formerly read:

(A) the reference in the definition "specified shareholder" in subsection 248(1) to "or of any other corporation that is related to the corporation" shall be read as "or of any other corporation that is related to the corporation and that has a significant direct or indirect interest in any issued shares of the capital stock of the corporation", and

Subpara. 88(1)(c.2)(iii) added by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 118(5), applicable to windings-up that begin after November 1994.

Para. 88(1)(c.2) added by 1995, c. 3, subsec. 24(2), applicable to windings-up that begin after February 21, 1994.

(c.3) [substituted property] — for the purpose of clause (c)(vi)(B), property acquired by any person in substitution for particular property or properties distributed to the parent on the winding-up includes

(i) property (other than a specified property) owned by the person at any time after the acquisition of control referred to in clause (c)(vi)(A) the fair market value of which is, at that time, wholly or partly attributable to the particular property or properties, and

(ii) property owned by the person at any time after the acquisition of control referred to in clause (c)(vi)(A) the fair market value of which is, at that time, determinable primarily by reference to the fair market value of, or to any proceeds from a disposition of, the particular property or properties

but does not include

(iii) money,

(iv) property that was not owned by the person at any time after the acquisition of control referred to in clause (c)(vi)(A), or

(v) property described in subparagraph (i) if the only reason the property is described in that subparagraph is because a specified property described in any of subparagraphs (c.4)(i) to (iv) was received as consideration for the acquisition of a share of the capital stock of the subsidiary in the circumstances described in subparagraphs (c.4)(i) to (iv);

Proposed Addition — 88(1)(c.3)(vi), (vii)

(vi) a share of the capital stock of the subsidiary or a debt owing by it, if the share or debt, as the case may be, was owned by the parent immediately before the winding-up, or

(vii) a share of the capital stock of a corporation or a debt owing by a corporation, if the fair market value of the share or debt, as the case may be, was not, at any time after the beginning of the winding-up, wholly or partly attributable to property distributed to the parent on the winding-up;

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 36(2), will add subparas. 88(1)(c.3)(vi) and (vii), applicable to windings-up that begin after 1997.

Technical Notes (December 20, 2002): Paragraph 88(1)(c) generally provides that the cost to the parent of each property distributed to it on the winding-up of a subsidiary is equal to the subsidiary's proceeds of disposition plus, where the property is a capital property and is not an ineligible property, an amount determined under paragraph 88(1)(d) in respect of the property. "Ineligible property" is described in subparagraphs 88(1)(c)(iii) to (vi). Pursuant to subparagraph 88(1)(c)(vi), ineligible property includes any property distributed to the parent on the winding-up if, as part of the series of transactions or events that includes the winding-up, the property or property acquired in substitution for such property was acquired by a person or persons described in clause 88(1)(c)(vi)(B). Property acquired in substitution for property distributed on the winding-up ("substituted property") has its ordinary meaning and an extended meaning found in paragraph 88(1)(c.3).

Paragraph 88(1)(c.3) provides that substituted property includes property described in subparagraphs 88(1)(c.3)(i) and (ii) but excludes property described in subparagraphs 88(1)(c.3)(iii) to (v). Subparagraph 88(1)(c.3)(i) provides that, for the purpose of clause 88(1)(c)(vi)(B), substituted property includes property (other than a "specified property") owned by a person after the acquisition of control of the subsidiary where the fair market value of the property is wholly or partly attributable to property distributed to the parent on the winding-up. Subparagraph 88(1)(c.3)(iv) ensures that property that would be substituted property under the ordinary meaning of the term will not be substituted property if it is not owned by the person after the acquisition of control.

Example 1 of the explanatory notes to the introduction of paragraph 88(1)(c.3) [see the explanatory notes to 88(1)(c.3)–(c.7),S.C. 1998, c.19 (formerly Bill C-28)] describes a scenario under the heading Safe Income Crystallization that illustrates the application of subparagraph 88(1)(c.3)(iv) to a situation involving a safe income crystallization prior to a takeover. In that example, Sco, a taxable Canadian corporation, owns 15% of Tco, a publicly traded taxable Canadian corporation. Another corporation ("Pco") makes a takeover offer for all the shares of Tco. In anticipation of the sale of the Tco shares, Sco incorporates Newco and transfers, on a tax-deferred basis under section 85, all of its Tco shares to Newco in exchange for Newco shares. The adjusted cost base and the paid-up capital of the Newco shares are then increased by the amount equal to the so-called "safe income" attributable to the Tco shares. Immediately thereafter, Sco sells the Newco shares to Pco for cash and Newco is wound up into Pco.

In the example, subparagraph 88(1)(c.3)(iv) ensures that the Newco shares are not substituted property since Sco did not own the Newco shares after the acquisition of control of Newco by Pco. However, assuming that Tco is subsequently wound up into Pco, the non-depreciable capital property ("bump property") owned by Tco at the time of the acquisition of control of Tco would be ineligible property since, as part of the series of transactions or events that includes the winding up of Tco, property substituted for the bump property (i.e., the 15% of the Tco shares) would have been acquired by a specified shareholder of Tco (i.e., Newco) and would have been owned by Newco after the acquisition of control of Tco.

New subparagraphs 88(1)(c.3)(vi) and (vii), which apply to windings-up that begin after 1997, are enacted to ensure that certain shares or debt will not be substituted property even if they are owned by a specified shareholder after the acquisition of control of the subsidiary. Subparagraph 88(1)(c.3)(vi) provides that shares or debt of the subsidiary will not be substituted property if such shares or debt are owned by the parent immediately before the winding-up of the subsidiary. Thus, in the example discussed above, the Tco shares, which are owned by Pco immediately before the winding-up of Tco, would not be substituted property.

Subparagraph 88(1)(c.3)(vii) provides that a share or debt of a corporation will not be substituted property if the fair market value of the share or debt is not attributable, at any time after the winding-up process begins, to property acquired by the parent on the winding-up. This exemption would apply, for example, if an individual ("Mr. S"), who is a specified shareholder of Tco, incorporates Newco in contemplation of the takeover of Tco and transfers the Tco shares to Newco. Mr. S then transfers the Newco shares to Sco. Immediately after the increase in the adjusted cost base of the shares of Newco (i.e., following the safe income crystallization) Sco sells the Newco shares to Pco. In this scenario, the Sco shares owned by Mr. S after the sale would not be substituted property by reason of new subparagraph 88(1)(c.3)(vii).

Letter from Dept. of Finance, December 19, 2001:

Dear [xxx]:

Thank you for your letter of November 30, 2001 concerning the application of paragraph 88(1)(c.3) of the Income Tax Act in the context of a takeover of a taxable Canadian corporation ("Targetco") wherein a specified shareholder of Targetco ("SCo") proposes to transfer its shares in Targetco to a new corporation ("Newco") prior to the completion of the takeover, so as to access SCo's share of the safe income of Targetco. You believe that the application of this provision gives rise to unintended tax consequences, and ask that consideration be given to amending that paragraph to ensure the appropriate tax consequences in the circumstances.

In particular, you advised us that a Canadian corporation ("Buyco") owns 51% of the shares of Targetco, a public corporation. Another corporation ("SCo") owns 15% of the shares of Targetco and is a specified shareholder of Targetco for the purposes of subsection 88(1) of the Act. SCo was also a specified shareholder of Targetco before Buyco last acquired control of Targetco. Buyco decides to acquire all of the remaining shares of Targetco. To this end, Buyco incorporates a wholly-owned subsidiary ("PCo") and transfers its shares of Targetco to PCo, thus resulting in an acquisition of control of Targetco by PCo. PCo then makes a cash takeover bid for all of the remaining shares of Targetco.

In anticipation of the successful takeover bid, SCo incorporates Newco and transfers all of its Targetco shares to Newco in exchange for shares in Newco. The adjusted cost base and paid-up capital of the Newco shares are increased through a safe income crystallization transaction involving Newco and SCo. On the takeover bid, PCo directly or indirectly acquires all of the shares of Targetco for cash by acquiring all of the Targetco shares held by the public and by acquiring all of the Newco shares held by SCo. Newco is wound up into PCo and an election is made under paragraph 88(1)(d) of the Act to "bump" the cost base of the shares of Targetco distributed to PCo on the winding-up. Immediately thereafter, Targetco is wound up into PCo.

The technical concern arises out of the combined application of clause 88(1)(c)(vi)(B) of the Act and the definition of substituted property in paragraph 88(1)(c.3) of the Act. In particular, you are of the view that the Newco shares could be property that is substituted for property acquired by PCo on the winding-up of Targetco and that is acquired by a person (SCo) that was a specified shareholder of Targetco before the last acquisition of control of Targetco. Paragraph 88(1)(c.3)(iv) of the Act does not exclude the Newco shares owned by SCo from the definition of substituted property because the Newco shares are owned by SCo after PCo acquires control of Targetco. Therefore, if the safe income crystallization is viewed as part of the series of transactions or events that includes the winding-up of Targetco, then the "bump" may be denied with respect to eligible property of Targetco distributed to PCo on the winding-up of Targetco.

You submit that, from a tax policy perspective, there is no reason that the safe income crystallization should result in the denial of the bump on the winding-up of Targetco. You contend that the bump denial rules are intended to eliminate "backdoor" purchase butterflies, namely transactions whereby a significant shareholder of the target corporation uses the subsection 88(1) bump rules to achieve what is, in effect, a tax-deferred sale of certain corporate assets of the target while maintaining a continuing interest in other corporate assets of the target. In your view, a safe income crystallization, such as the one described above, does not constitute or facilitate a backdoor purchase butterfly.

We agree that the safe income crystallization described above should not, in and of itself, result in the denial of the bump on otherwise eligible property distributed by Targetco to PCo. Accordingly, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance an amendment to the Act the effect of which will be to ensure that the shares of Newco are not substituted property for the purposes of paragraph 88(1)(c) of the Act.

If the above recommendation were acted upon, I would anticipate that such amendments would be included in a future technical bill.

Yours sincerely,
Len Farber
General Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Proposed Amendment — 88(1)(c.3)

Letter from Dept. of Finance, April 22, 2002:

Dear [xxx]

Thank you for your letter of October 11, 2001 to Davine Roach of this Division concerning the application of the substituted property rules in paragraphs 88(1)(c.3) and (c.4) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act").

In particular, your concern relates to a series of proposed transactions wherein a taxable Canadian corporation ("Bidco") will acquire control of a public corporation ("Targetco"). Under the terms of the takeover, employees of Targetco will participate in the stock option plan of Bidco's parent corporation ("Parentco"). Parentco is a taxable Canadian corporation and owns all of the shares of Bidco. You indicate that a person ("Mr. X"), who is both an employee and specified shareholder of Targetco, holds options under Targetco's employee stock option plan. Concurrently with the closing of the takeover bid, Mr. X, along with other employees of Targetco, will exchange their Targetco options for Parentco options ("option exchange"). Mr. X is also a party to an arrangement with a trust that is governed by subsection 7(6) of the Act. Under that arrangement, Mr. X has an option to acquire Targetco shares ("trust option") from the trust. The trust will elect under the terms of the takeover bid to receive shares of Parentco and the trust option will be amended to reflect the substitution of the Targetco shares for Parentco shares. Following the takeover, Targetco will be wound-up into Bidco.

Your concern is that Mr. X may acquire property described in subparagraph 88(1)(c.3)(i) as a consequence of the option exchange and the amendment to the trust option. Accordingly, the addition to the adjusted cost base of certain non-depreciable capital property of Targetco provided in paragraphs 88(1)(c) and (d) (the "bump") may be unavailable on the winding-up of Targetco into Bidco.

You ask that we consider including, in the definition of specified property in paragraph 88(1)(c.4) of the Act, an option or right to acquire a share received in the circumstances described above. You argue that the option exchange and the amendment to the trust option is simply a proxy for an exchange of the underlying shares. Accordingly, you submit that there is no policy reason for treating the option exchange and the amendment to the trust option any differently from an exchange of Targetco shares for Parentco shares.

We agree that the option exchange and the amendment to the trust option described above, in and of themselves, should not result in the denial of the bump on the winding-up of Targetco into Bidco. Accordingly, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that the Act be amended to ensure that the rights to acquire shares of Parentco received by Mr. X will not be substituted property within the meaning of subparagraph 88(1)(c.3)(i). We are also prepared to recommend that the amendment apply to windings-up that begin after 2001. If the above recommendation were acted upon, we would anticipate that the amendment would be included in a future technical bill.

Yours sincerely,
Brian Ernewein

Technical Notes (December 20, 2002): Paragraph 88(1)(c.4) defines "specified property" for the purposes of subparagraphs 88(1)(c.3)(i) and (v). Specified property is excluded from the extended meaning of a substituted property found in subparagraph 88(1)(c.3)(i). Subparagraph 88(1)(c.4)(i) is amended to include, within the definition "specified property", shares of the parent issued for consideration that consists solely of money. This amendment, which applies to windings-up that begin after 1999, ensures that a specified shareholder that participates in a takeover by acquiring shares of the parent for cash consideration will not be considered to have acquired substituted property within the meaning assigned by subparagraph 88(1)(c.3)(i).

Letter from Dept. of Finance, September 28, 2000:

Dear [xxx]

This is in response to your letters of September 15 and 20, 2000, and further to your conversations with Davine Roach, regarding the application of the "specified property" rule in paragraph 88(l)(c.4) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act") to the proposed transactions described in your letter. You believe this application gives rise to unintended tax consequences and ask that consideration be given to amending the paragraph to ensure the appropriate tax results in the circumstances.

Based on our understanding of the facts of the proposed transactions as described in your letter, JB1 and JB2 will make a joint bid through Bidco to acquire all the shares of Target for cash, JB1 is a specified shareholder of the Target and JB2 is not a specified shareholder of Target. JB1 will, amongst other things, contribute cash to Bidco, which will issue shares to JB1 in consideration for that cash. JB1 will not control Bidco at the time Bidco acquires control of Target. Target will be wound-up into Bidco and Bidco will seek to bump the cost of certain non-depreciable capital property distributed to Bidco on the wind-up of Target pursuant to paragraph 88(1)(c) of the Act. Bidco shares acquired by JB1 as consideration for the cash contribution will not qualify as "specified property" for the purposes of 88(l)(c)(vi) and consequently the so called "bump denial rule" in 88(l)(c)(vi) will cause the property distributed to Bidco on the winding up of Target to be an "ineligible property" for the purposes of the 88(1)(c) bump.

As you know, paragraph 88(l)(c.4) of the Act excludes property that is "specified property" from the extended definition of substituted property in subparagraph 88(l)(c.3)(i), which applies for the purpose of the bump denial rule in subparagraph 88(1)(c)(vi) of the Act. The statutory exclusions from the bump denial rule do not, however, anticipate joint takeover bids by a specified shareholder of the subsidiary and a third party, where such bids result in the acquisition of a non-controlling interest in the parent by the specified shareholder who acquired shares of the parent for cash prior to the acquisition of control of the subsidiary by the parent.

In these circumstances, we agree that the bump denial rule in subparagraph 88(1)(c)(vi) of the Act should not apply. Consequently, we will recommend to the Minister of Finance that an amendment be introduced to the Act to ensure that, in the circumstances described in your letter, the bump denial rule does not apply solely because JB1 acquired shares of Bidco for consideration consisting only of cash prior to Bidco acquiring control of Target. We would also recommend that such an amendment be effective for windings-up that begin after 1999.

If the recommendation is acted upon, I would anticipate that such an amendment would be included in a future technical bill.

Yours sincerely,
Len Farber

Proposed Amendment — 88(1)(c.4)

Letter from Dept. of Finance, May 2, 2002:

Dear Mr. [xxx]

Thank you for your letters dated March 1 and 5, 2002 concerning the application of the substituted property rules in paragraphs 88(1)(c.3) and (c.4) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act").

In particular, your concern relates to a series of proposed transactions wherein a taxable Canadian corporation ("Bidco") acquires more than 66⅔% but less than 90% of the shares of another corporation ("Targetco") under a takeover bid. To complete the takeover, Bidco implements what is commonly referred to as an amalgamation squeeze out. On the amalgamation, a new corporation ("Amalco") will issue common shares to Bidco and redeemable preferred shares to the minority shareholders of Targetco. Amalco will redeem the redeemable preferred shares immediately after the amalgamation for consideration that includes common shares of Bidco, as required under the applicable securities law. Following the redemption, Amalco will be a wholly-owned subsidiary of Bidco. Amalco will then be wound-up into Bidco.

Your concern is that the redeemable preferred shares and the common shares of Bidco would not qualify as specified property as defined in paragraph 88(1)(c.4) of the Act and, therefore, such shares will be substituted property as defined in subparagraph 88(1)(c.3)(i) of the Act. Accordingly, the addition to the adjusted cost base of certain non-depreciable capital property of Amalco (the "bump") provided in paragraphs 88(1)(c) and (d) of the Act would be unavailable on the winding-up of Amalco into Bidco.

In your view, the redemption of the redeemable preferred shares for common shares of Bidco does not violate any policy objectives underlying the bump rules. You state that, if the minority shareholders had tendered their shares of Targetco to Bidco under the takeover bid, the Bidco common shares received by them would have been specified property and, as a result, would not have been substituted property for the purpose of subparagraph 88(1)(c.3)(i). Accordingly, you request that we consider amending the definition of specified property in paragraph 88(1)(c.4) to accommodate the redemption of the redeemable preferred shares of Amalco for common shares of Bidco.

We agree that the redemption of the redeemable preferred shares in consideration for common shares of Bidco should not, in the circumstances described above, affect the availability of the bump on the winding-up of Amalco into Bidco. Accordingly, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that the Act be amended to ensure that the redeemable preferred shares of Amalco and the common shares of Bidco be considered specified property within the meaning of paragraph 88(1)(c.4). We are also prepared to recommend that the amendment apply to windings-up that begin after 2001. If the above recommendation were acted upon, we would anticipate that the amendment would be included in a future technical bill.

Yours sincerely,

Proposed Amendment — 88(1)(c.4)

Letter from Dept. of Finance, June 24, 2003:

Dear [xxx]

Thank you for your letter of May 5, 2003 concerning the application of the substituted property rules in paragraphs 88(1)(c.3) and (c.4) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act").

In particular, your concern relates to the treatment of employee stock options in a series of proposed transactions wherein a taxable Canadian corporation that is a public corporation ("Acquireco") will acquire control of another taxable Canadian corporation that is also a public corporation ("Targetco").

Certain employees (including directors) of Targetco and other corporations related to Targetco (the "Optionholders") hold options to acquire Targetco Common Shares ("Targetco Options"). Under the terms of the takeover, Targetco Options that are unexercised on the date of the acquisition of Targetco will become options to acquire Acquireco common shares ("Acquireco Options") at a ratio that is consistent with the purchase price of the shares under the takeover transaction (the "Option Exchange"). Following the takeover, Targetco may be wound-up or amalgamated into Acquireco or a corporation related to Acquireco in circumstances where subsections 87(11) or 88(1) of the Act would apply. The Optionholders who receive Acquireco Options may in the aggregate be considered a "specified shareholder" of Targetco (as that term is applied in subparagraph 88(1)(c)(vi)).

Your concern is that the Optionholders may acquire "substituted property" as described in subparagraph 88(1)(c.3) as a consequence of the Option Exchange. Accordingly, the addition to the adjusted cost base of certain non-depreciable capital property of Targetco provided in paragraphs 88(1)(c) and (d) (the "bump") may be unavailable on the winding-up or amalgamation of Targetco into Acquireco or a corporation related to Acquireco.

You ask that we consider including, in the definition of specified property in paragraph 88(1)(c.4) of the Act, an option or right to acquire a share received in the circumstances described above. You argue that the Option Exchange is simply a proxy for an exchange of the underlying shares. Accordingly, you submit that there is no policy reason for treating the Option Exchange any differently from an exchange of Targetco shares for Acquireco shares.

Based on our understanding of the facts, we agree that the Option Exchange should not, in and of itself, result in the denial of the bump on the winding up of Targetco into Acquireco or a corporation related to Acquireco. Accordingly, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that the Act be amended to ensure that the rights to acquire shares of Acquireco received by the Optionholders will not be substituted property within the meaning of subparagraph 88(1)(c.3)(i). We are also prepared to recommend that the amendment apply to windings-up that begin after 2001. If the above recommendation were acted upon, we would anticipate that the amendment would be included in a future technical bill.

Yours very truly,

Brian Ernewein

(A) the amount of a dividend received on any share of the foreign affiliate (or any other share of the foreign affiliate for which that share is substituted property) held by the subsidiary immediately before the winding-up, that was deductible under section 113 in computing the income of the subsidiary or of a corporation with which the subsidiary was not dealing at arm's length (otherwise than because of a right referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b) in respect of the foreign affiliate),

exceeds

(B) the portion of that dividend that may reasonably be considered to have reduced the foreign affiliate's exempt or taxable surplus in respect of the subsidiary that arose after the acquisition of control of the subsidiary by the parent (determined on the assumption that a dividend is paid out of the foreign affiliate's exempt or taxable surplus, as the case may be, in respect of the subsidiary, in the reverse order to that in which it was added to the foreign affiliate's exempt or taxable surplus in respect of the subsidiary),

B is the fair market value of the particular share immediately before the winding-up, and

C is the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a share of the foreign affiliate held by the subsidiary immediately before the winding-up, and

(ii) if, at the time immediately before the winding-up, the subsidiary holds a partnership interest in a partnership (referred to in this subparagraph as a "holding partnership") which holds one or more shares of a foreign affiliate of the subsidiary, there shall be added to the cost amount, at that time, of the subsidiary's partnership interest in the holding partnership (referred to in this subparagraph as the "particular partnership interest"), the amount determined by the formula

D is the total of all amounts each of which is the amount, if any, by which

(A) the amount of a dividend received on any share of the foreign affiliate (or any other share of the foreign affiliate for which that share is substituted property) held by the holding partnership immediately before the winding-up, that was deductible under section 113 in computing the income of the subsidiary or of a corporation with which the subsidiary was not dealing at arm's length (otherwise than because of a right referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b) in respect of the foreign affiliate),

exceeds

(B) the portion of that dividend that may reasonably be considered to have reduced the foreign affiliate's exempt or taxable surplus in respect of the subsidiary that arose after the acquisition of control of the subsidiary by the parent (determined on the assumption that a dividend is paid out of the foreign affiliate's exempt or taxable surplus, as the case may be, in respect of the subsidiary, in the reverse order to that in which it was added to the foreign affiliate's exempt or taxable surplus in respect of the subsidiary),

E is the fair market value of the particular partnership interest immediately before the winding-up, and

F is the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a partnership interest in the holding partnership held by the subsidiary immediately before the winding-up;

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 130(1), will add para. 88(1)(d.4), applicable to amalgamations that occur, and to windings-up that begin, after February 27, 2004 and if the taxpayer so elects in writing and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day on which the amending legislation is assented to, the para. applies in respect of the taxpayer to all amalgamations that occur, and to all windings-up that begin, after December 20, 2002 and, notwithstanding subsecs. 152(4) to (5) of the Act, any assessment of the taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year that begins before February 28, 2004 shall be made that is necessary to take the election into account.

Technical Notes: Subsection 88(1) provides rules that apply where a subsidiary has been wound up into its parent corporation where both corporations are taxable Canadian corporations and the parent owns at least 90% of the issued shares of each class of the capital stock of the subsidiary.

Subsection 88(1) is amended by adding proposed new paragraph (d.4) effective for amalgamations that occur after February 27, 2004 and to windings-up that begin after February 27, 2004. Taxpayers may elect to have the provision apply to all amalgamations that occur, and all windings-up that begin, after December 20, 2002.

In general terms, proposed new paragraph 88(1)(d.4) applies for the purpose of subparagraph 88(1)(d)(ii) and increases, in certain circumstances, the cost amount to the subsidiary of a share of a foreign affiliate of the subsidiary or the cost amount of a partnership interest in a partnership that holds such a share, thereby limiting the amount of a increase in cost base of a property to the parent that is the share or the interest in the partnership that might otherwise occur on an amalgamation or a winding up of the subsidiary.

New paragraph 88(1)(d.4) provides that

- if, at the time immediately before the winding-up, the subsidiary holds one or more shares of a foreign affiliate of the subsidiary, there shall be added to the cost amount, at that time, of each of those shares (referred to here as the "particular share") the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the total of all amounts each of which is the amount, if any, by which

(A) the amount of a dividend received on any share of the foreign affiliate (or any other share of the foreign affiliate for which that share is substituted property) held by the subsidiary immediately before the winding-up, that was deductible under section 113 in computing the income of the subsidiary or of a corporation with which the subsidiary was not dealing at arm's length (otherwise than because of a right referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b) in respect of the foreign affiliate),

(B) the portion of that dividend that may reasonably be considered to have reduced the foreign affiliate's exempt or taxable surplus in respect of the subsidiary that arose after the acquisition of control of the subsidiary by the parent (determined on the assumption that a dividend is paid out of the foreign affiliate's exempt or taxable surplus, as the case may be, in respect of the subsidiary, in the reverse order to that in which it was added to the foreign affiliate's exempt or taxable surplus in respect of the subsidiary),

B is the fair market value of the particular share immediately before the winding-up, and

C is the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a share of the foreign affiliate held by the subsidiary immediately before the winding-up, and

- if, at the time immediately before the winding-up, the subsidiary holds a partnership interest in a partnership (a "holding partnership") which holds one or more shares of a foreign affiliate of the subsidiary, there shall be added to the cost amount, at that time, of the subsidiary's partnership interest in the holding partnership (referred to as the "particular partnership interest"), the amount determined by the formula

D is the total of all amounts each of which is the amount, if any, by which

(A) the amount of a dividend received on any share of the foreign affiliate (or any other share of the foreign affiliate for which that share is substituted property) held by a holding partnership immediately before the winding-up, that was deductible under section 113 in computing the income of the subsidiary or of a corporation with which the subsidiary was not dealing at arm's length (otherwise than because of a right referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b) in respect of the foreign affiliate),

(B) the portion of that dividend that may reasonably be considered to have reduced the foreign affiliate's exempt or taxable surplus in respect of the subsidiary that arose after the acquisition of control of the subsidiary by the parent (determined on the assumption that a dividend is paid out of the foreign affiliate's exempt or taxable surplus, as the case may be, in respect of the subsidiary, in the reverse order to that in which it was added to the foreign affiliate's exempt or taxable surplus in respect of the subsidiary),

E is the fair market value of the particular partnership interest immediately before the winding-up, and

F is the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a partnership interest in a holding partnership held by the subsidiary immediately before the winding-up.

Proposed Amendment — 88(1)(e.2) opening words — reference to 87(2)(l.21)

Letter from Dept. of Finance, March 6, 2003:

Mr. Mark D. Brender, Davies Ward Phillips & Vineberg LLP, Montreal

Dear Mr. Brender:

Thank you for your letter of November 5, 2002, concerning the application of the debt forgiveness rule in section 80.01(10) of the Income Tax Act (Canada) (the "Act") in circumstances involving the wind-up of a subsidiary into its parent in accordance with subsection 88(1).

In your letter, you suggest making a retroactive change to paragraph 88(1)(e.2) of the Act in order to incorporate a reference to paragraph 87(2)(l.21). You point out that the current operation of section 87 specifically allows for a deduction under subsection 80.01(10) to a successor corporation when a subsequent payment is made against a parked debt of one of the pre-amalgamation corporations. You further state that no corresponding rule appears to exist for a parent making a subsequent payment against a parked debt issued by its subsidiary after the subsidiary is wound up under subsection 88(1).

Based on your submissions and our own internal analysis, we have concluded that, although the tax policy underlying amalgamations under section 87 and wind-ups under subsection 88(1) may not always coincide, in this case we agree that there does not appear to be any policy reason why paragraph 87(2)(l.21) should not be incorporated in paragraph 88(1)(e.2). Accordingly, we intend to recommend to the Minister of Finance that paragraph 88(1)(e.2) of the Act be amended to include a reference to paragraph 87(2)(l.21) in order to provide for the continuation of a subsidiary to its parent for the purposes of subsection 80.01(10). It would be recommended that the amendment apply with respect to taxation years that end after 2001. If this recommendation is adopted, I would anticipate that the amendment would be included in a future technical bill and presented to Parliament for approval.

Thank you for writing.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein
Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(a) was not deducted in computing the taxable income of the subsidiary for any taxation year of the subsidiary, and

(b) would have been deductible in computing the taxable income of the subsidiary for any taxation year beginning after the commencement of the winding-up, on the assumption that it had such a taxation year and that it had sufficient income for that year, tion 110.5, be deemed, for the taxation year of the parent in which the subsidiary's loss year ended, to be a non-capital loss of the parent in respect of a claim made under section 110.5 that was not deductible by the parent in computing its taxable income for any taxation year that commenced before the commencement of the winding-up,

Proposed Amendment — 88(1.1)(e) opening words

(e) where control of the parent has been acquired by a person or group of persons at any time after the commencement of the windingup, or control of the subsidiary has been acquired by a person or group of persons at any time whatever, no amount in respect of the subsidiary's non-capital loss or farm loss for a taxation year ending before that time is deductible in computing the taxable income of the parent for a particular taxation year ending after that time, except that such portion of the subsidiary's non-capital loss or farm loss as may reasonably be regarded as its loss from carrying on a business and, where a business was carried on by the subsidiary in that year, such portion of the non-capital loss as may reasonably be regarded as being in respect of an amount deductible under paragraph 110(1)(k) in computing its taxable income for the year is deductible only

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 36(5), will amend the opening words of para. 88(1.1)(e) to read as above, applicable to windings-up that begin after May 1996.

Technical Notes: Subsection 88(1.1) allows a parent corporation under certain circumstances to use losses of a subsidiary corporation that has been wound up. Paragraph 88(1.1)(e) limits the use that can be made of the former subsidiary's non-capital losses and farm losses where either the parent or the subsidiary has undergone an acquisition of control. In its current form, the paragraph applies these limits regardless of when the acquisition of control took place. This can produce results that are unnecessarily restrictive. If, for example, a newly-acquired corporation is made the parent of an existing subsidiary that has losses, but the subsidiary itself has not undergone an acquisition of control since it incurred those losses, there is no reason for paragraph 88(1.1)(e) to limit the use that the parent corporation can make of the subsidiary's losses after the winding-up.

To ensure that it applies more appropriately, paragraph 88(1.1)(e) is amended to distinguish between acquisitions of control of the parent corporation and acquisitions of control of the subsidiary. In respect of the parent, the limits imposed by the provision will apply only where a person or group of persons has acquired control after the commencement of the winding-up. In respect of the subsidiary, those limits will continue to apply if control has been acquired at any time.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, October 26, 2001:

Dear [xxx]:

This is further to your discussions with officials of this Division and your letter of September 25, 2001 to Lawrence Purdy, in which you request our views on whether the tax consequences of the application of paragraph 88(1.1)(e) of the Income Tax Act (Act) to a series of transactions accord with the Department's income tax policies.

You describe a series of transactions that is comprised of three main steps and involves three corporations, Parentco, Lossco and Profitco. By way of background, Parentco controls Lossco, which has accumulated non-capital losses and has not been subject to a change of control since these losses arose. First, Parentco acquires control of Profitco, which is expected to continue to profit in future taxation years. Control of Lossco is then transferred to Profitco, after which the last step is to wind-up Lossco into Profitco.

It does seem that, as you suggest, the change in control of the parent, Profitco, would trigger the application of paragraph 88(1.1)(e). The effect would be to restrict the use of the losses of Lossco by Profitco following the winding-up. This would occur despite the fact that, as I have mentioned, the loss arose while Lossco was part of Parentco's corporate group. You express the view that this result is contrary to the policies that underlie the Act.

As you point out, an amalgamation, rather than a winding-up, of Profitco and Lossco would allow the newly formed company — which could in substance be Profitco — to use Lossco's losses without restrictions. This is so because subsection 87(2.1) of the Act stipulates that, for the purposes of subsections 111(3) to 111(5.4) of the Act, the new corporation is deemed to be a continuation of each predecessor corporation. Subsection 111(5) would apply only to restrict the losses, if any, of Profitco, since it, unlike Lossco, would have been subject to an acquisition of control.

In principle, we agree that the application of paragraph 88(1.1)(e) to transactions akin to that which you describe produces an anomalous result, since it restricts the use of losses where there has been no change in the ultimate control of the corporation that produced the losses. Further, the differential treatment in cases of this sort between windings-up and amalgamations is unintended.

Currently, paragraph 88(1.1)(e) may be triggered where at any time the parent has undergone a change of control. This aspect of the provision could be refined to apply to acquisitions of control of the parent subsequent to the winding-up. This would ensure that the paragraph would not apply to the type of situation discussed above. Further, its effect would be consistent with the present treatment of loss utilizations after a change in control: any winding-up of a subsidiary that had undergone even an indirect change in control prior to the winding-up would still trigger the application of paragraph 88(1.1)(e); and the parent's use of the losses of the subsidiary would be restricted if the parent were subject to an acquisition of control after the winding-up.

I am therefore prepared to recommend an amendment along the lines described above. I cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister of Finance or Parliament will agree with the recommendation that we intend to make in this regard. Nonetheless, I hope that this statement of our position is helpful.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Letter from Dept. of Finance, October 29, 2001:

Dear [xxx]:

I write further to my letter of October 26, 2001, which outlines our intention to recommend an amendment to paragraph 88(1.1)(e) of the Income Tax Act, and the request you subsequently made to Lawrence Purdy that we indicate as of what date we are prepared to recommend that the amendment come into force.

We intend to recommend that the amendment take effect for windings-up that commence after October 25, 2001. As you know, although we have no reason to believe that such an amendment would be controversial, I am not in a position to offer any assurance that either the Minister of Finance or Parliament will agree with this or any aspect of the recommendation.

I trust that the above will be of some assistance.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein, Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Letter from Dept. of Finance, July 2, 2003:

Dear [xxx]

Further to our meeting in December 2002, concerning the coming into force of a proposed amendment to subsection 88(1.1) of the Income Tax Act, I am writing to inform you of the results of our consideration of this matter.

As you know, we recently issued a letter stating our intention to recommend amending the rules concerning the treatment of losses where a company that is part of a winding-up transaction has undergone an acquisition of control. More specifically, paragraph 88(1.1)(e) of the Act would be amended to apply, in respect of a parent corporation, only to acquisitions of control that take place after the winding up has begun. In this way, the parent's use of losses incurred by the former subsidiary while it was a member of the group would not be restricted by subsection 88(1.1).

Your submission recommends that the proposed change apply to windings-up begun as early as June 1996. This would accommodate a particular transaction that was undertaken at that time. As you have noted in support of your request, the current rules produce a result that is not appropriate in policy terms, which would also be true in respect of a transaction occurring in 1996. Further, there have been no other requests or issues that have come to the attention of CCRA respecting the coming into force of the proposed amendment.

As a consequence, we are prepared to recommend that the proposed amendments to paragraph 88(1.1)(e) apply to windings-up begun after May 1996.

Of course, we cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister of Finance or Parliament will agree with the recommendations that we intend to make in this regard. Nonetheless, we trust that this statement of our position is helpful.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein

> (b) would have been deductible in computing the taxable income of the subsidiary for its first taxation year commencing after the commencement of the winding-up, on the assumption that it had such a taxation year and that it had sufficient income and taxable capital gains for that year, shall, for the purposes of paragraph 111(1)(b) and subsection 111(3), be deemed to be a net capital loss of the parent for the taxation year of the parent in which the particular taxation year of the subsidiary ended that was not deductible by the parent in computing its taxable income for any taxation year that commenced before the commencement of the winding-up, except that this subsection does not apply to permit the parent to deduct, for the purpose of computing its taxable income for a particular taxation year, the subsidiary's net capital loss for a taxation year if control of the parent or the subsidiary has been acquired, before the end of the parent's particular year, by a person or persons who did not, at the end of the subsidiary's loss year, control the parent or the subsidiary, as the case may be.

(3) Distributions of property of a foreign affiliate — If, at any time, a taxpayer resident in Canada receives a property from a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer (the property received and the foreign affiliate from which the property was received being referred to in this subsection as the "distributed property" and the "disposing foreign affiliate", respectively), on a dissolution and a liquidation of the disposing foreign affiliate, on a redemption of shares of the capital stock of the disposing foreign affiliate, as a payment of a dividend by the disposing foreign affiliate, or as a distribution of property by the disposing foreign affiliate,

(a) where the distributed property was, immediately before that time, a share of the capital stock of another foreign affiliate of the taxpayer and an excluded property of the disposing foreign affiliate, the distributed property

(i) is deemed to have been disposed of, at that time, by the disposing foreign affiliate to the taxpayer for proceeds of disposition that are equal to

(A) unless a valid election is made under clause (B), the adjusted cost base to the disposing foreign affiliate of the distributed property, immediately before that time, and

(B) the amount that the taxpayer elects in the prescribed manner and in the prescribed time in respect of the distributed property, which amount may not be less than the adjusted cost base to the disposing foreign affiliate of the distributed property immediately before that time and may not exceed the fair market value, at that time, of the distributed property, and

(ii) is deemed to have been acquired, at that time, by the taxpayer at a cost equal to the amount, determined under subparagraph (i), to be the disposing foreign affiliate's proceeds of disposition of the distributed property;

(b) where the distributed property is property to which paragraph (a) does not apply, the distributed property is deemed

(i) to have been disposed of, at that time, by the disposing foreign affiliate to the taxpayer for proceeds of disposition that are equal to the fair market value, at that time, of the distributed property, and

(ii) to have been acquired, at that time, by the taxpayer at a cost equal to the amount, determined under subparagraph (i), to be the disposing foreign affiliate's proceeds of disposition of the distributed property;

(c) where the taxpayer disposed of shares of the capital stock of the disposing foreign affiliate on the dissolution and liquidation of the disposing foreign affiliate or on the redemption, acquisition or cancellation of shares of the disposing foreign affiliate, as the case may be, the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition of the shares are deemed to be the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the total of all amounts each of which is the cost to the taxpayer of a distributed property received by the taxpayer as consideration for the disposition of the shares, and

B is the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of a debt owing by the disposing foreign affiliate, or of an obligation of the disposing foreign affiliate to pay an amount, (other than a dividend payable to the taxpayer or to persons with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length) that was assumed or cancelled by the taxpayer because of the dissolution and liquidation or because of the redemption, acquisition or cancellation;

(d) where the taxpayer received distributed property as a dividend or a distribution of property, the amount of the dividend paid by the disposing foreign affiliate or the amount of the distribution of property made by the disposing foreign affiliate to the taxpayer, as case may be, is deemed to be the amount determined by the formula

D is the total of all amounts each of which is the cost to the taxpayer of a distributed property received by the taxpayer from the disposing foreign affiliate as the payment of a dividend or as the distribution of property, as the case may be, and

E is the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of a debt owing by the disposing foreign affiliate or of an obligation of the disposing foreign affiliate to pay an amount (other than a dividend payable to the taxpayer or to persons with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length) that was assumed or cancelled by the taxpayer because of the payment of the dividend or because of the distribution;

(e) the amount of a distribution of property made, at that time, by the disposing foreign affiliate to the taxpayer, is to be deducted in computing the taxpayer's adjusted cost base of a particular share of the capital stock of disposing foreign affiliate held by the taxpayer, at that time, to the extent that it is reasonable to consider the distribution to be a payment made by the disposing foreign affiliate to the taxpayer as

(i) a return of an amount that was received by the disposing foreign affiliate as consideration for the issuance of the particular share, or

(ii) a return of an amount of contributed surplus that was received by the disposing foreign affiliate before that time, as a contribution of capital to the disposing foreign affiliate by the shareholder that held the particular share at the time of the contribution; and

(f) the amount of a distribution of property made, at that time, by the disposing foreign affiliate to the taxpayer is to be included in computing the taxpayer's income as income from property that is the shares of the capital stock of the disposing foreign affiliate held at that time by the taxpayer, to the extent that it is not deducted, under paragraph (e), in computing the adjusted cost base of a particular share of the capital stock of the disposing foreign affiliate held by the taxpayer.

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 130(2), will amend subsec. 88(3) to read as above, applicable to property received after February 27, 2004.

Technical Notes: Subsection 88(3) provides for rules that apply on the dissolution of a controlled foreign affiliate (a "disposing affiliate") of a taxpayer resident in Canada. For example, shares of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer that are transferred to the taxpayer on the dissolution of the disposing affiliate will be considered to have been disposed of by the controlled foreign affiliate, and to have been acquired by the taxpayer, for the adjusted cost base or such greater amount as the taxpayer claims not exceeding the fair market value of the shares. Also, in general terms, the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition of the taxpayer's shares of the capital stock of the controlled foreign affiliate disposed of on the dissolution are deemed to be the amount, if any, by which the total of all amounts each of which is the cost to the taxpayer of property received by the taxpayer from the controlled foreign affiliate on the dissolution exceeds the total of all debts of the controlled foreign affiliate that were assumed or cancelled by the taxpayer on the dissolution.

In general terms, subsection 88(3) is being amended to be applicable to property received, by a taxpayer resident in Canada from a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada, in the following circumstances:

- on a dissolution and liquidation of the foreign affiliate,
- on a redemption of shares by the foreign affiliate,
- as payment of a dividend by the foreign affiliate, or
- as a distribution of property by the foreign affiliate.

This amendment applies to property received after February 27, 2004.

Proposed subsection 88(3) provides for the following rules if, at any time (referred to in this commentary as the "distribution time"), a taxpayer resident in Canada receives, in the circumstances described above, a property from a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer (the property received and the foreign affiliate from which the property was received being referred to in this subsection as the "distributed property" and the "disposing foreign affiliate", respectively):

- If the distributed property was, immediately before the distribution time, a share of the capital stock of another foreign affiliate of the taxpayer and an excluded property of the disposing foreign affiliate,
  - — the distributed property is deemed to have been disposed of, at the distribution time, by the disposing foreign affiliate to the taxpayer for proceeds of disposition that are equal to
    - unless a valid election referred to below is made, the adjusted cost base to the disposing foreign affiliate of the distributed property, immediately before that time, and
    - the amount that the taxpayer elects in the prescribed manner and in the prescribed time (see proposed new section 5919 of the Income Tax Regulations) in respect of the distributed property, which amount may not be less than the adjusted cost base to the disposing foreign affiliate of the distributed property immediately before that time and may not exceed the fair market value, at that time, of the distributed property, and — the distributed property is deemed to have been acquired, at that time, by the taxpayer at a cost equal to the amount determined to be the disposing foreign affiliate's proceeds of disposition of the distributed property.

- If the distributed property is not, immediately before the distribution time, both a share of the capital stock of another foreign affiliate of the taxpayer and an excluded property of the disposing foreign affiliate,

  — the distributed property is deemed to have been disposed of, at that time, by the disposing foreign affiliate to the taxpayer for proceeds of disposition that are equal to the fair market value, at that time, of the distributed property, and

  — the distributed property is deemed to have been acquired, at that time, by the taxpayer at a cost equal to the amount determined to be the disposing foreign affiliate's proceeds of disposition of the distributed property.

- If the taxpayer disposed of shares of the capital stock of the disposing foreign affiliate on the dissolution and liquidation of the disposing foreign affiliate or on the redemption, acquisition or cancellation of shares of the disposing foreign affiliate, as the case may be, the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition of the shares are deemed to be the amount determined by the formula

A is the total of all amounts each of which is the cost to the taxpayer of a distributed property received by the taxpayer as consideration for the disposition of the shares, and

B is the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of a debt owing by the disposing foreign affiliate or of an obligation of the disposing foreign affiliate to pay an amount (other than a dividend payable to the taxpayer or to persons with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length) that was assumed or cancelled by the taxpayer because of the dissolution and liquidation or because of the redemption, acquisition or cancellation.

- If the taxpayer has received distributed property as a dividend or a distribution of property, the amount of the dividend paid by the disposing foreign affiliate or the amount of the distribution of property made by the disposing foreign affiliate to the taxpayer, as case may be, is deemed to be the amount determined by the formula

D is the total of all amounts each of which is the cost to the taxpayer of a distributed property received by the taxpayer from the disposing foreign affiliate as the payment of a dividend or as the distribution of property, as the case may be, and

E is the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of a debt owing by the disposing foreign affiliate or of an obligation of the disposing foreign affiliate to pay an amount (other than a dividend payable to the taxpayer or to persons with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length) that was assumed or cancelled by the taxpayer because of the payment of the dividend or because of the distribution.

- The amount of a distribution of property made, at the distribution time, by the disposing foreign affiliate to the taxpayer, is to be deducted in computing the taxpayer's adjusted cost base of a particular share of the capital stock of the disposing foreign affiliate held by the taxpayer, at that time, to the extent that it is reasonable to consider the distribution as a payment made by the disposing foreign affiliate to the taxpayer as — a return of an amount that was received by the disposing foreign affiliate as consideration for the issuance of the particular share, or — a return of an amount of contributed surplus that was received by the disposing foreign affiliate, before the distribution time, as a contribution of capital to the disposing foreign affiliate by the shareholder that held the particular share at that time of the contribution.

- The amount of a distribution of property made, at the distribution time, by the disposing foreign affiliate to the taxpayer is to be included in computing the taxpayer's income as income from property that is the shares of the capital stock of disposing foreign affiliate held at that time by the taxpayer, to the extent that it is not deducted in computing the adjusted cost base of a particular share of the capital stock of the disposing foreign affiliate held by the taxpayer.

"tax equity [para. 89(1)(h)]" — [Repealed under former Act]

"taxable Canadian corporation" means a corporation that, at the time the expression is relevant,

(a) was a Canadian corporation, and

(b) was not, by virtue of a statutory provision, exempt from tax under this Part;

Proposed Amendment — 89(1)"taxable Canadian corporation"(b)

(b) was not, by reason of a statutory provision other than paragraph 149(1)(t), exempt from tax under this Part;

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 37(3), will amend para. (b) of the definition "taxable Canadian corporation" in subsec. 89(1) to read as above, applicable in respect of taxation years that end after 1999.

Technical Notes (December 20, 2002): Paragraph (b) of the definition "taxable Canadian corporation" in subsection 89(1) is amended to clarify that a farming or fishing insurer to which paragraph 149(1)(t) applies is a taxable Canadian corporation.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, February 21, 2000:

Dear [xxx]

Thank you for your letter of November 8, 1999 regarding section 87 of the Income Tax Act (the "Act") and the treatment accorded thereunder to insurance corporations earning premium income in respect of the insurance of property used in farming or fishing.

In your letter you express concern that an amalgamation of insurers of farmers and fishermen partially, or totally, exempt from tax under paragraph 149(1)(t) of the Act could trigger significant tax consequences. You ask that I consider amending the Act so that insurers of farmers and fishermen can, on amalgamation, benefit from the tax rollover provisions contained in section 87.

There does not appear to be a policy reason for not allowing subsection 87(1) of the Act to apply to an amalgamation of two or more farmers' and fishermen's insurers described in paragraph 149(1)(t) of the Act. Consequently, I am prepared to support an amendment to the Act to provide that subsection 87(1) of the Act apply to amalgamations of insurers exempt, or partially exempt, from tax under paragraph 149(1)(t) occurring after 1999.

Thank you for your helpful advice on this matter.

Sincerely,
The Honourable Paul Martin, P.C., M.P.
Minister of Finance

89.1 [Repealed under former Act]

Subdivision i — Shareholders of Corporations Not Resident in Canada

90. Dividends received from non-resident corporation — In computing the income for a taxation year of a taxpayer resident in Canada, there shall be included any amounts received by the taxpayer in the year as, on account or in lieu of payment of, or in satisfaction of, dividends on a share owned by the taxpayer of the capital stock of a corporation not resident in Canada.

Related Provisions: 82(1) — Dividends received from corporation resident in Canada; 113(1) — Deduction for dividend received from foreign affiliate; 139.1(4)(f), (g) — Deemed dividend on demutualization of insurance corporation; 139.2 — Deemed dividend on distribution by mutual holding corporation.

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-451R: Deemed disposition and acquisition on ceasing to be or becoming resident in Canada.

91. (1) Amounts to be included in respect of share of foreign affiliate — In computing the income for a taxation year of a taxpayer resident in Canada, there shall be included, in respect of each share owned by the taxpayer of the capital stock of a controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, as income from the share, the percentage of the foreign accrual property income of any controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, for each taxation year of the affiliate ending in the taxation year of the taxpayer, equal to that share's participating percentage in respect of the affiliate, determined at the end of each such taxation year of the affiliate.

Proposed Amendment — 91(1)

91. Amounts to be included in respect of share of foreign affiliate — (1) In computing the income for a taxation year of a taxpayer resident in Canada, there shall be included, in respect of each share owned by the taxpayer of the capital stock of a controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, as income from the share, the percentage of the foreign accrual property income of any controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, for each taxation year of the affiliate that ends in the taxation year of the taxpayer, equal to the amount that would be that share's participating percentage in respect of the affiliate, determined at the end of each such taxation year of the affiliate if paragraph (a) of the definition "equity percentage" in subsection 95(4) did not take into account each share that would be subject to subsection 94.2(9) in respect of the taxpayer for the year if the taxpayer held the share throughout the year.

Application: The October 30, 2003 Notice of Ways and Means Motion (NRTs and FIEs), subsec. 14(1), will amend subsec. 91(1) to read as above, applicable to taxation years that begin after 2002.

Technical Notes: Subsection 91(1) provides that a taxpayer that is resident in Canada must include in computing income an amount in respect of each share owned by the taxpayer of the capital stock of a controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer.

Subsection 91(1) is amended so that it does not result in additional income for a taxpayer arising because of the ownership by the taxpayer (or by a controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer) of shares that are participating interests in a "tracking entity" to which the imputed income regime under section 94.1 or the mark-to-market regime under section 94.2 applies by reason of the application of subsection 94.2(9). The shares of a taxpayer in the capital stock of a corporation that is a controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer will generally be treated as "exempt interests" (as defined in new subsection 94.1(1)), and therefore not subject to the income inclusions under subsections 94.1(4) or 94.2(4). However, if subsection 94.2(9) applies in respect of those shares (in particular, note that paragraph 94.2(9)(b) does not exclude the application of subsection 94.2(9) to an exempt interest that is an interest in a controlled foreign affiliate) either of subsections 94.1(4) or 94.2(4) will apply generally to require an amount to be included in computing the income of the taxpayer. Because of subparagraph 94.3(2)(b)(i), the accrual regime in section 94.3 will not apply in respect of an interest to which subsection 94.2(9) applies.

For more details on the application of sections 94.1 to 94.4, see the commentary on those provisions.

(2) Reserve where foreign exchange restriction — Where an amount in respect of a share has been included in computing the income of a taxpayer for a taxation year by virtue of subsection (1) or (3) and the Minister is satisfied that, by reason of the operation of monetary or exchange restrictions of a country other than Canada, the inclusion of the whole amount with no deduction for a reserve in respect thereof would impose undue hardship on the taxpayer, there may be deducted in computing the taxpayer's income for the year such amount as a reserve in respect of the amount so included as the Minister deems reasonable in the circumstances.

(3) Reserve for preceding year to be included — In computing the income of a taxpayer for a taxation year, there shall be included each amount in respect of a share that was deducted by virtue of subsection (2) in computing the taxpayer's income for the immediately preceding year.

(4) Amounts deductible in respect of foreign taxes — Where, by virtue of subsection (1), an amount in respect of a share has been included in computing the income of a taxpayer for a taxation year or for any of the 5 immediately preceding taxation years (in this subsection referred to as the "income amount"), there may be deducted in computing the taxpayer's income for the year the lesser of

(a) the product obtained when

(i) the portion of the foreign accrual tax applicable to the income amount that was not deductible under this subsection in any previous year is multiplied by

(ii) the relevant tax factor, and

Proposed Amendment — 91(4)(a)(ii)

(ii) the taxpayer's relevant tax factor for the year, and

Application: The October 30, 2003 Notice of Ways and Means Motion (NRTs and FIEs), subsec. 14(2), will amend subpara. 91(4)(a)(ii) to read as above, applicable to 2002 et seq.

Technical Notes: Subsection 91(4) provides for a deduction in computing the income of a taxpayer resident in Canada. The deduction is available where the taxpayer has included an amount under subsection 91(1) in computing income in respect of a share of the capital stock of a controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer. The deduction is generally determined with reference to foreign taxes payable by the affiliate and a "relevant tax factor". The "relevant tax factor" for a resident taxpayer is designed to permit a deduction for the resident taxpayer that will result in tax relief that is a proxy for a foreign tax credit in respect of foreign taxes payable by a controlled foreign affiliate of the resident taxpayer.

Subsection 91(4) is amended to explicitly link the "relevant tax factor" to the resident taxpayer and the taxation year for which the deduction under subsection 91(4) is claimed. For more detail on the definition "relevant tax factor" in subsection 95(1), see the commentary on that provision.

(b) the amount, if any, by which the income amount exceeds the total of the amounts in respect of that share deductible under this subsection in any of the 5 immediately preceding taxation years in respect of the income amount.

(5) Amounts deductible in respect of dividends received — Where in a taxation year a taxpayer resident in Canada has received a dividend on a share of the capital stock of a corporation that was at any time a controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, there may be deducted, in respect of such portion of the dividend as is prescribed to have been paid out of the taxable surplus of the affiliate, in computing the taxpayer's income for the year, the lesser of

(a) the amount by which that portion of the dividend exceeds the amount, if any, deductible in respect thereof under paragraph 113(1)(b), and

(b) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of all amounts required by paragraph 92(1)(a) to be added in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the share before the dividend was so received by the taxpayer

exceeds

(ii) the total of all amounts required by paragraph 92(1)(b) to be deducted in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the share before the dividend was so received by the taxpayer.

(6) Idem — Where a share of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer that is a taxable Canadian corporation is acquired by the taxpayer from another corporation resident in Canada with which the taxpayer is not dealing at arm's length, for the purpose of subsection (5), any amount required by section 92 to be added or deducted, as the case may be, in computing the adjusted cost base to the other corporation of the share shall be deemed to have been so required to be added or deducted, as the case may be, in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the share.

(7) Shares acquired from a partnership — For the purpose of subsection (5), where a taxpayer resident in Canada acquires a share of the capital stock of a corporation that is immediately after the acquisition a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer from a partnership of which the taxpayer, or a corporation resident in Canada with which the taxpayer was not dealing at arm's length at the time the share was acquired, was a member (each such person referred to in this subsection as the "member") at any time during any fiscal period of the partnership that began before the acquisition,

(a) that portion of any amount required by subsection 92(1) to be added to the adjusted cost base to the partnership of the share of the capital stock of the foreign affiliate equal to the amount included in the income of the member because of subsection 96(1) in respect of the amount that was included in the income of the partnership because of subsection (1) or (3) in respect of the foreign affiliate and added to that adjusted cost base, and

(b) that portion of any amount required by subsection 92(1) to be deducted from the adjusted cost base to the partnership of the share of the capital stock of the foreign affiliate equal to the amount by which the income of the member from the partnership under subsection 96(1) was reduced because of the amount deducted in computing the income of the partnership under subsection (2), (4) or (5) and deducted from that adjusted cost base is deemed to be an amount required by subsection 92(1) to be added or deducted, as the case may be, in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the share.

(1.1) Where subsection (1.3) applies — Subsection (1.3) applies to a holder of a share (referred to in this subsection and subsections (1.2) and (1.3) as the "relevant share") of a foreign affiliate (referred to in this subsection and subsection (1.2) as the "relevant foreign affiliate") of a particular corporation resident in Canada in computing at any time (referred to in this subsection and subsections (1.2) and (1.3) as the "computation time") the adjusted cost base to the holder of the relevant share, if, at the computation time, there is a specified section 93 election related to the relevant share.

Technical Notes: New subsection 92(1.1) provides that new subsection 92(1.3) will apply to the holder of a share of a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada in computing at any time the adjusted cost base of the share if there is a "specified section 93 election" related to the share. Subsection 92(1.1) defines that share as the "relevant share", and defines such a time as the "computation time", for the purposes of subsections 92(1.2) and (1.3). Also, subsection 92(1.1) defines that foreign affiliate as the "relevant foreign affiliate", for the purpose of subsection 92(1.2).

For information regarding the coming-into-force of this subsection, refer to the commentary regarding new subsection 92(1.4).

Related Provisions: 92(1.2) — Specified section 93 election.

(1.2) Specified section 93 election — An election made by the particular corporation resident in Canada under subsection 93(1) or (1.2), as the case may be, in respect of a share of a particular foreign affiliate of the particular corporation that is disposed of at a time (referred to in this subsection as the "election time") before the computation time is, at the computation time, a specified section 93 election related to the relevant share if

(a) the particular foreign affiliate has, at the election time, an equity percentage in the relevant foreign affiliate;

(b) the relevant foreign affiliate was, at the election time, a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation;

(c) throughout the period that begins at the election time and ends at the computation time,

(i) the holder held the relevant share, and

(ii) the holder was

(A) a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation,

(B) a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada that was related to the particular corporation,

(C) a partnership of which a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation was a member, or

(D) a partnership of which a foreign affiliate, of a corporation resident in Canada that was related to the particular corporation, was a member;

(d) the relevant share was, at the election time, excluded property of the holder (or would have been, at the election time, excluded property of the holder if the holder had been a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation); and

(e) the relevant share is, at the computation time, excluded property of the holder (or would have been, at the computation time, excluded property of the holder if the holder had been a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation or of a corporation resident in Canada that is related to the particular corporation).

Technical Notes: New subsection 92(1.2) establishes, for the purposes of subsections 92(1.1) and (1.3), whether an election made under subsection 93(1) or (1.2) by a particular corporation resident in Canada in respect of a share of a particular foreign affiliate of the particular corporation that is disposed of at a time before the computation time is, at the computation time, a "specified section 93 election" related to the relevant share. The time of that disposition is referred to in subsection 92(1.2) as the "election time".

Such an election is, at the computation time, a "specified section 93 election" related to the relevant share for the purposes of subsections 92(1.1) and (1.3) if

- the particular foreign affiliate has, at the election time, an equity percentage in the relevant foreign affiliate;
- the relevant foreign affiliate was, at the election time, a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation;
- throughout the period that begins at the election time and ends at the computation time;
  - — the holder held the relevant share, and
  - — the holder was
    - a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation,
    - a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada that was related to the particular corporation,
    - a partnership of which a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation was a member, or
    - a partnership of which a foreign affiliate, of a corporation resident in Canada that was related to the particular corporation, was a member;
- the relevant share was, at the election time, excluded property of the holder (or would at that time have been excluded property of the holder if the holder had been a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation); and
- the relevant share is, at the computation time, excluded property of the holder (or would at that time have been excluded property of the holder if the holder had been a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation or of a corporation resident in Canada that is related to the particular corporation).

For information regarding the coming-into-force of this subsection, refer to the commentary regarding new subsection 92(1.4).

(1.3) Adjustments to adjusted cost base — If this subsection applies, the following rules apply in determining the adjusted cost base to the holder of the relevant share for the purposes described in subsection (1.4):

(a) there shall be added, to the adjusted cost base to the holder of the relevant share, the amount prescribed in respect of the relevant share in respect of the specified section 93 election, and

(b) there shall be deducted, from the adjusted cost base to the holder of the relevant share, the amount prescribed in respect of the relevant share in respect of the specified section 93 election.

Technical Notes: New subsection 92(1.3) contains rules that require adjustments to the adjusted cost base to the holder of the "relevant share". See the commentary to new subsection 92(1.1) for information regarding the circumstances that make subsection 92(1.3) apply. The adjustments are for the purposes described in subsection 92(1.4).

Under the rules contained in subsection 92(1.3), there is to be added to, or deducted from, as the case may be, the adjusted cost base to the holder of the relevant share the amount prescribed in new section 5911 of the Income Tax Regulations in respect of the specified section 93 election related to the relevant share.

Related Provisions: 92(1.1) — Conditions for 92(1.3) to apply.

Regulations: 5911(1) (amount prescribed for 92(1.3)(a)); 5911(2) (amount prescribed for 92(1.3)(b)).

(1.4) Applicability of subsection (1.3) — The purposes described in this subsection are

(a) the computation, at any time after the election time, of the exempt surplus or deficit, the taxable surplus or deficit, and the underlying foreign tax, of the holder, in respect of the particular corporation resident in Canada or in respect of any other person that would, at the time after the election time, and if the taxpayer referred to in subparagraphs 95(2)(f)(iv) to (vii) were the particular corporation, be described by any of those subparagraphs; and

(b) the application, at any time after the election time, of paragraphs 95(2)(c.1) to (e.6).

Technical Notes: New subsection 92(1.4) sets out the purposes for which the adjustments described in new subsection 92(1.3) are applicable.

Those purposes are

- the computation of the exempt surplus or deficit, the taxable surplus or deficit, and the underlying foreign tax, of the holder, in respect of the corporation resident in Canada, or in respect of any other person referred to in subparagraphs 95(2)(f)(iv) to (vii) on the assumption that the taxpayer referred to in those subparagraphs were the particular corporation resident in Canada, and

- the application of paragraphs 95(2)(c.1) to (e.6), at any time after the time of the election.

Coming-into-Force

(c) that occurs after February 27, 2004 if that disposition is required to be made under an agreement in writing made by the vendor before February 28, 2004 and if none of paras. 88(3)(a), 95(2)(c.2) and 95(2)(d) to (e.5) applies to the disposition.

(b) the adjusted cost base to a foreign affiliate (in this subsection referred to as an "owner") of a person resident in Canada of any share of the capital stock of another foreign affiliate of that person, there shall be deducted, in respect of any dividend received on the share before that time by the owner of the share, an amount equal to the amount, if any, by which

(c) such portion of the amount of the dividend so received as was deductible by virtue of paragraph 113(1)(d) from the income of the owner for the year in computing the owner's taxable income for the year or as would have been so deductible if the owner had been a corporation resident in Canada, the member that began before that time in respect of any portion of a dividend received by the partnership, or would have been so deductible if the member were a corporation resident in Canada,

exceeds

(b) the total of all amounts each of which is the portion of any income or profits tax paid by the partnership or the member of the partnership to a government of a country other than Canada that can reasonably be considered as having been paid in respect of the member's share of the dividend described in paragraph (a);

(b) the proceeds of disposition of the share

shall be deemed to have been a dividend received on the share from the affiliate by the disposing corporation or disposing affiliate, as the case may be, immediately before the disposition and not to have been proceeds of disposition.

(1.1) Idem — Where at any time shares of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada that are excluded property are disposed of by another foreign affiliate of the corporation (other than a disposition to which paragraph 95(2)(c), (d) or (e) applies), the corporation shall be deemed to have made an election at that time under subsection (1) in respect of each such share disposed of and in the election to have designated an amount equal to such amount as is prescribed.

(1.1) Deemed election — If at any time shares of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada are disposed of by another foreign affiliate of the corporation, the corporation is deemed

(a) to have made an election at that time under subsection (1) in respect of each of those shares; and

(b) to have designated, in the election, the amount prescribed in respect of each of those shares.

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 132(2), will amend subsec. 93(1.1) to read as above, applicable on the same basis as the addition of subsecs. 92(1.1)–(1.4) above.

Technical Notes: Subsection 93(1.1) provides that the rules in subsection 93(1) will automatically apply in respect of a disposition of a share of a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada by another foreign affiliate of the corporation, without the need for an election, where the share disposed of was "excluded property" (as defined in subsection 95(1)) of the vendor (other than a disposition, of a share that is excluded property, to which paragraph 95(2)(c), (d) or (e) applies). The amount of the deemed election in respect of the proceeds of disposition of the share is determined by the Regulations but will not in any event exceed the vendor's capital gain otherwise determined in respect of the disposition.

Subsection 93(1.1) is amended

- to remove the requirement that the shares be excluded property of the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada that disposed of the share, and
- to remove the rule that made the deemed election apply in respect of a disposition, of a share that is an excluded property, to which paragraph 95(2)(c), (d) or (e) applies. (Such a rule is no longer needed, as the excluded property requirement has been removed altogether.)

History: Subsec. 93(1.2) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 70(4) to replace the reference to the expression "4/3 of" with a reference to the word "twice", applicable to taxation years that end after February 27, 2000.

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, s. 127, will amend the application of the amendment made to subsec. 93(1.2) by S.C. 2001, c. 17, subsec. 70(4) to read as follows, deemed in force on June 14, 2001:

> Subsec. 93(1.2) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 70(4) to replace the reference to the expression "4/3 of" with a reference to the word "twice", applicable to taxation years that end after February 27, 2000 except that, for a taxation year of a taxpayer that includes February 28, 2000 or October 17, 2000, or began after February 28, 2000 and ended before October 17, 2000, the reference to the word "twice" shall be read as a reference to the expression "the fraction that is the reciprocal of the fraction in para. 38(a), as amended by 2001, c. 17, that applies to the taxpayer for the year, multiplied by".

Technical Notes (December 20, 2002): Section 93 contains a number of rules relating to the disposition of shares of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada.

Subsection 93(1.2) provides that, where a particular corporation resident in Canada or a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation (each of which is referred to as the "disposing corporation") would, but for this subsection, have a taxable capital gain from a partnership from the disposition by the partnership of shares of a class of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the corporation, and the disposing corporation so elects in prescribed manner in respect of the gain, the amount designated will reduce the taxable capital gain and will be grossed up and recharacterized as a dividend received on the share by the disposing corporation.

Paragraph 93(1.2)(a) provides that twice the amount designated by the disposing corporation in respect of the shares (or where subsection 93(1.3) applies, twice the amount determined under that subsection) will be treated as a dividend received on the shares by the disposing corporation from the foreign affiliate.

Before the present amendment, subsection 93(1.2) was applicable to taxation years that end after February 27, 2000. This amendment ensures that, for a taxation year of a taxpayer that includes either February 28, 2000 or October 17, 2000 or began after February 28, 2000 and ended before October 17, 2000, the reference to the word "twice" is to read as references to the reciprocal of the capital gains inclusion rate applicable to the corporation resident in Canada or to the foreign affiliate for the taxation year. This amendment corrects a technical deficiency.

Subsec. 93(1.2) added by the said c. 17, subsec. 70(2), applicable to dispositions that occur after November 1999.

Regulations: 5902 (prescribed manner, prescribed time).

(1.3) Deemed election — Where a foreign affiliate of a particular corporation resident in Canada has a gain from the disposition by a partnership at any time of shares of a class of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation that are excluded property, the particular corporation is deemed to have made an election under subsection (1.2) in respect of the number of shares of the foreign affiliate which shall be determined as the amount, if any, by which the number of those shares that the disposing corporation was deemed to own for the purposes of subsection 93.1(1) immediately before the disposition exceeds the number of those shares that the disposing corporation was deemed to own for those purposes immediately after the disposition.

Related Provisions: Reg. 5902(7) — Deemed amount designated.

History: Subsec. 93(1.3) added by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 70(2), applicable to dispositions that occur after November 1999.

Proposed Addition — 93(1.4)

(1.4) No election — Notwithstanding subsections (1) to (1.3), no election may be made under subsection (1) or (1.2) by a corporation in respect of a disposition of a share of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the corporation if any of paragraph 88(3)(a) and subparagraphs 95(2)(d)(i), (d.1)(i), (e)(i), (e.1)(i), (e.2)(i), (e.3)(i), (e.4)(i) and (e.5)(i) applies to the disposition.

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 132(5), will add subsec. 93(1.4), applicable to dispositions that occur after February 27, 2004.

Technical Notes: New subsection 93(1.4) provides that, notwithstanding subsections 93(1) to (1.3), no election may be made under subsection 93(1) or (1.2) by a corporation in respect of a disposition of a share of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the corporation if any of paragraph 88(3)(a) and subparagraphs 95(2)(d)(i), (d.1)(i), (e)(i), (e.1)(i), (e.2)(i), (e.3)(i), (e.4)(i) and (e.5)(i) applies to the disposition.

Refer to the coming-into-force commentary below to determine the coming-into-force dates for this new subsection.

Coming-into-Force (ITA 93(1)(a), (1.1), (1.2), (1.3) and (1.4))

The amendments to paragraph 93(1)(a), to subsection 93(1.1) and to subparagraph 93(1.2)(a)(i) apply to dispositions that occur after December 20, 2002.

However, those amendments will not apply in respect of dispositions by a vendor if one of the following conditions are met:

- the disposition is required to be made under an agreement in writing made by the vendor on or before December 20, 2002,
  - the disposition occurs on or before February 27, 2004 and either
  - a valid election was made by the taxpayer to have new paragraphs 95(2)(c.1) to (c.6) not apply (and to have a modified version of the draft paragraphs 93(1.4) to (1.6) that were announced on December 20, 2002 apply) to dispositions made after December 20, 2002 and on or before February 27, 2004, or
  - none of new paragraphs 88(3)(a), 95(2)(c.2), and 95(2)(d) to (e.5) of the Act applies to the disposition, or
  - the disposition occurs after February 27, 2004, that disposition is required to be made under an agreement in writing made by the vendor on or before February 27, 2004 and none of new paragraphs 88(3)(a), 95(2)(c.2) and 95(2)(d) to (e.5) applies to the disposition.

For information about the aforementioned election and the aforementioned modified version of subsections 93(1.4) to (1.6), refer to the commentary to new paragraphs 95(2)(c.1) to (c.6).

The amendment to the preamble of subsection 93(1.2) applies to dispositions that occur after November 1999.

New subsection 93(1.4) applies to dispositions that occur after February 27, 2004.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, October 20, 2003:

Dear [xxx]

I am writing in response to your three letters dated August 18, 2003 in connection with subsection 93(1.4) of the Income Tax Act, as proposed in the Legislative Proposals and Explanatory Notes Relating to Income Tax that were announced on December 20, 2002. In each of those letters, you highlighted transactions that involve the disposition of shares, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada, that are excluded property. You expressed your concern that, if proposed subsection 93(1.4) is enacted as drafted, those dispositions could result in foreign accrual property income (FAPI) to the taxpayer resident in Canada, and you requested that the Act not be amended to introduce subsection 93(1.4) as proposed.

It is our intention to recommend the introduction of amendments to the Act (the "new rule") which, in general terms, would provide that where a specified vendor in respect of a taxpayer resident in Canada makes a disposition (including, for greater certainty, a disposition arising on a redemption, acquisition or cancellation of a share) of a share of a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, that is excluded property, to a specified purchaser in respect of the taxpayer, no gain would be recognized at the time of that disposition. However, a taxpayer would be permitted to elect an amount of proceeds of disposition, up to the fair market value of the share disposed of, which could result in a gain. In the case of such an election, any such gain would be included in computing FAPI. Therefore, the only FAPI that could arise on such a disposition would be self-imposed.

The new rule would apply only in respect of a disposition of a share of a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that is excluded property of the specified vendor (or would be excluded property of the specified vendor if the specified vendor were a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer) and only where the disposition would otherwise result in a gain being realized by the specified vendor.

Should our recommendation be acted upon, it is contemplated that the new rule would apply to dispositions occurring after draft implementing legislation is made public. The proposed subsection 93(1.4), with some modifications, would apply to dispositions occurring before that time; however, taxpayers would be given the alternative of applying, in respect of all foreign affiliates of the taxpayer, the new rule to all relevant dispositions occurring after December 20, 2002. For a taxpayer that wishes to apply the new rule to dispositions occurring before its announcement date, certain other related changes to the foreign affiliate regime may also apply with respect to those dispositions.

I trust that this letter addresses your concerns.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein
Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(2) Loss limitation on disposition of share — Where

(a) a corporation resident in Canada has a loss from the disposition by it at any time of a share of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "affiliate share"), or

(b) a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada has a loss from the disposition by it at any time of a share of the capital stock of another foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada that is not excluded property (in this subsection referred to as the "affiliate share"), the amount of the loss is deemed to be the amount determined by the formula

Proposed Amendment — 93(2) formula

$$A - (B - C) + D$$

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 132(6), will amend the formula in subsec. 93(2) to read as above, applicable to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after February 27, 2004, except that if the taxpayer so elects in writing and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day on which the amending legislation is assented to, the amendment applies to taxation years, of the taxpayer and of all the taxpayer's foreign affiliates, that begin after 1994, and, notwithstanding subsecs. 152(4) to (5), any assessment of the taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any of those taxation years that begin on or before February 27, 2004 shall be made that is necessary to take the election into account.

Technical Notes: Subsection 93(2) provides rules for the purpose of determining the loss of a corporation resident in Canada from the disposition of a share of a foreign affiliate of the corporation or the loss of a foreign affiliate of the corporation from a disposition of a share of the capital stock of another foreign affiliate of the corporation that is not excluded property to the foreign affiliate that disposed of the share.

The amount of the loss, determined without reference to this subsection, is reduced by exempt dividends received, on the share or a share for which the share was substituted, by the corporation resident in Canada, by another corporation resident in Canada that is related to the corporation or by a foreign affiliate of either of those corporations resident in Canada (to the extent that the exempt dividends have not already reduced losses or allowable capital losses of those corporations or foreign affiliates under subsection 93(2), (2.1), (2.2) or (2.3)). The term "exempt dividend" is defined in subsection 93(3).

Subsection 93(2) is being amended to permit the corporation resident in Canada or its foreign affiliate to restore a loss from a disposition of a share of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada to the extent of the lesser of two amounts.

- The first amount is the reduction of that loss which is attributable to exempt dividends.
- The second amount is the total of the following gains determined in respect of the corporation resident in Canada or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be, that disposed of the share:
  - The foreign exchange gain arising on the settlement or extinguishment of an obligation issued or incurred to acquire the share.
  - The foreign exchange gain arising on the redemption, acquisition or cancellation of shares issued to acquire the share.
  - The gain arising under an agreement that provides for the purchase, sale or exchange of a currency, or from the disposition of a currency, that was entered into or acquired for hedging the foreign exchange exposure arising in connection with the acquisition of the share.

First, the formula in subsection 93(2) is amended by adding the new variable "D" and will read as follows:

$$A - (B - C) + D$$

where

A is the amount of the loss determined without reference to this subsection,

B is the total of all amounts each of which is an amount received before that time, in respect of an exempt dividend on the affiliate share or on a share for which the affiliate share was substituted, by

(a) the corporation resident in Canada,

(b) a corporation related to the corporation resident in Canada,

(c) a foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, or

(d) a foreign affiliate of a corporation related to the corporation resident in Canada,

C is the total of

(a) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount by which a loss (determined without reference to this section), from another disposition at or before that time by a corporation or foreign affiliate described in the description of B of the affiliate share or a share for which the affiliate share was substituted, was reduced under this subsection in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B,

(b) the total of all amounts each of which is twice the amount by which an allowable capital loss (determined without reference to this section), of a corporation or foreign affiliate described in the description of B from a previous disposition by a partnership of the affiliate share or a share for which the affiliate share was substituted, was reduced under subsection (2.1) in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B,

(c) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount by which a loss (determined without reference to this section), from a disposition at or before that time by a corporation or foreign affiliate described in the description of B of an interest in a partnership, was reduced under subsection (2.2) in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B, and

(d) the total of all amounts each of which is twice the amount by which an allowable capital loss (determined without reference to this section), of a corporation or foreign affiliate described in the description of B from a disposition at or before that time by a partnership of an interest in another partnership, was reduced under subsection (2.3) in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B.

D is the lesser of

(a) the amount, if any, by which the amount determined for B exceeds the amount determined for C, and

(b) the total of the following amounts determined in respect of the corporation resident in Canada or the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, as the case may be,

(i) the amount of the capital gain determined under paragraph 39(2)(a) for the taxation year that includes that time in respect of

(A) the settlement or extinguishment of an obligation of the corporation resident in Canada or of the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, as the case may be, that can reasonably be considered to have been issued or incurred in relation to the acquisition of the affiliate share by the corporation resident in Canada or by the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, as the case may be, or

(B) the redemption, acquisition or cancellation of a share of the capital stock of a corporation resident in Canada or of the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, as the case may be, that can reasonably be considered to have been issued in relation to the acquisition of the affiliate share by the corporation resident in Canada or by the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, as the case may be, and

(ii) the amount of any gain realized by the corporation resident in Canada or by the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, as the case may be, under an agreement that provides for the purchase, sale or exchange of currency, or from the disposition of a currency, which agreement or currency, as the case may be, can reasonably be considered to have been entered into or acquired, by the corporation resident in Canada or by the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, as the case may be, for the principal purpose of hedging the foreign exchange exposure arising in connection with the acquisition of the affiliate share.

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 132(7), will add the description of D to subsec. 93(2), applicable on the same basis as the amendment to the formula above.

Technical Notes: Second, the addition to the loss under new variable "D" will be determined as the lesser of

- The reduction of the loss in respect of exempt dividends (determined as (B - C) in the formula), and
- The total of the following amounts determined in respect of the corporation resident in Canada or the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, as the case may be:
  - the amount of the capital gain determined under paragraph 39(2)(a) for the taxation year that includes that time in respect of
    - the settlement or extinguishment of an obligation of the corporation resident in Canada or of the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, as the case may be, that can reasonably be considered to have been issued or incurred in relation to the acquisition of the affiliate share by the corporation resident in Canada or by the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, as the case may be, or
    - the redemption, acquisition or cancellation of a share of the capital stock of a corporation resident in Canada or of the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, as the case may be, that can reasonably be considered to have been issued in relation to the acquisition of the affiliate share by the corporation resident in Canada or by the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, as the case may be, and
  - the amount of any gain realized by the corporation resident in Canada or by the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, as the case may be, under an agreement that provides for the purchase, sale or exchange of currency, or from the disposition of a currency, which agreement or currency, as the case may be, can reasonably be considered to have been entered into or acquired, by the corporation resident in Canada or by the foreign affiliate resident in Canada, as the case may be, for the principal purpose of hedging the foreign exchange exposure arising in connection with the acquisition of the affiliate share.

The amendments to subsections 93(2), 93(2.1), 93(2.2) and (2.3) apply to taxation years, of foreign affiliates of a taxpayer, that begin after February 27, 2004. However, if the taxpayer so elects in writing and files that election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxation year in which these amendments are assented to, the amendments will apply taxation years of the taxpayer and all foreign affiliates of the taxpayer that begin after 1994.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, February 12, 2001:

Angelo Nikolakakis, Stikeman Elliott, Toronto

Dear Mr. Nikolakakis:. . .

Relationship between 93(2) and 39(2)

Finally you have submitted that subsection 93(2) should not apply to deny a loss on the disposition of the shares of a foreign affiliate where the loss results from the fluctuation in the value of a foreign currency, particularly where subsection 39(2) also applies to require the recognition of a corresponding gain.

Although we will wish to give further consideration to the issue of how best to identify both gains and losses related to such shares, we are prepared to recommend that an amendment be made to subsection 93(2) of the Act to address your concerns.

Effective Date

It will be recommended that the amendments be made effective for taxation years commencing after announcement date. It will also be recommended that taxpayer be permitted to elect to have the amendments apply to the 1994 and subsequent taxation years of foreign affiliates where the taxpayer so elects in respect of all the taxpayer's foreign affiliates ...

Yours sincerely,
Brian Ernewein

(2.1) Loss limitation — disposition of share by partnership — Where

(a) a corporation resident in Canada has an allowable capital loss from a disposition at any time by a partnership of a share of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the corporation (in this subsection referred to as the "affiliate share"), or

(b) a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada has an allowable capital loss from a disposition at any time by a partnership of a share of the capital stock of another foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada that would not be excluded property of the affiliate if the affiliate owned the share immediately before it was disposed of (in this subsection referred to as the "affiliate share"), the amount of the allowable capital loss is deemed to be the amount determined by the formula

Proposed Amendment — 93(2.1) formula

$$A - (B - C) + D$$

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 132(8), will amend the formula in subsec. 93(2.1) to read as above, applicable on the same basis as the amendment to the formula in 93(2).

Technical Notes: Subsection 93(2.1) provides rules for the purpose of determining the allowable capital loss of a corporation resident in Canada from the disposition by a partnership of a share of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the corporation and for the purpose of determining the allowable capital loss of a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada from a disposition by a partnership of a share of the capital stock of another foreign affiliate of the corporation that would not be excluded property of the foreign affiliate if the foreign affiliate owned the share immediately before it was disposed of.

The amount of the allowable capital loss otherwise determined is reduced by ½ of the exempt dividends received, on the share or a share for which the share was substituted, by the corporation resident in Canada, by another corporation resident in Canada that is related to the corporation resident in Canada, or by a foreign affiliate of either of those corporations resident in Canada (to the extent that the exempt dividends have not already reduced losses or allowable capital losses of those corporations or foreign affiliates under subsection 93(2), (2.1), (2.2) or (2.3)). The term "exempt dividend" is defined in subsection 93(3) of the Act.

Subsection 93(2.1) is being amended to permit the corporation resident in Canada or its foreign affiliate to restore an allowable capital loss from a disposition by a partnership of a share of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada to the extent of the lesser of two amounts.

The addition to the loss under new variable "D" will be determined as the lesser of

- The first amount is the reduction of that allowable capital loss which is attributable to exempt dividends.

- The second amount is ½ of the total of the following gains determined in respect of the corporation resident in Canada or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be,
  - The foreign exchange gain arising on the settlement of an obligation issued or incurred to acquire the share.
  - The foreign exchange gain arising on the redemption, acquisition or cancellation of shares issued to acquire the share.
  - The gain arising under an agreement that provides for the purchase, sale or exchange of a currency, or from the disposition of a currency, that was entered into or acquired for hedging the foreign exchange exposure arising in connection with the acquisition of the share.

First, the formula in subsection 93(2.1) is amended by adding the new variable "D" and will read as follows:

$$A - (B - C) + D$$

where

A is the amount of the allowable capital loss determined without reference to this subsection,

B is ½ of the total of all amounts each of which was received before that time, in respect of an exempt dividend on the affiliate share or on a share for which the affiliate share was substituted, by

(a) the corporation resident in Canada,

(b) a corporation related to the corporation resident in Canada,

(c) a foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, or

(d) a foreign affiliate of a corporation related to the corporation resident in Canada, and

(a) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount by which an allowable capital loss (determined without reference to this section), of a corporation or foreign affiliate described in the description of B from a disposition at or before that time by a partnership of the affiliate share or a share for which the affiliate share was substituted, was reduced under this subsection in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B,

(b) the total of all amounts each of which is ½ of the amount by which a loss (determined without reference to this section), of a corporation or foreign affiliate described in the description of B from another disposition at or before that time of the affiliate share or a share for which the affiliate share was substituted, was reduced under subsection (2) in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B,

(c) the total of all amounts each of which is ½ of the amount by which a loss (determined without reference to this section), from a disposition at or before that time by a corporation or foreign affiliate described in the description of B of an interest in a partnership, was reduced under subsection (2.2) in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B, and

(d) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount by which an allowable capital loss (determined without reference to this section), of a corporation or foreign affiliate described in the description of B from a disposition at or before that time by a partnership of an interest in another partnership, was reduced under subsection (2.3) in respect of exempt dividends referred to in the description of B.

D is the lesser of

(a) the amount, if any, by which the amount determined for B exceeds the amount determined for C, and

(b) one-half of the total of the following amounts determined in respect of the corporation resident in Canada or the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, as the case may be,

(i) the amount of the capital gain of the corporation resident in Canada, of the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, or of the partnership (to the extent that such a gain is reasonably attributable to the corporation resident in Canada, or to the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, as the case may be) determined under paragraph 39(2)(a) for the taxation year that includes that time in respect of

(A) the settlement or extinguishment of an obligation of the corporation resident in Canada, of the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, or of the partnership, as the case may be, that can reasonably be considered to have been issued or incurred in relation to the acquisition of the affiliate share by the partnership, or

(B) the redemption, acquisition or cancellation of a share of the capital stock of the corporation resident in Canada or of the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, as the case may be, that can reasonably be considered to have been issued in relation to the acquisition of the affiliate share by the partnership, and

(ii) the amount of any gain realized by the partnership (to the extent that the gain is reasonably attributable to the corporation resident in Canada or to the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, as the case may be), by the corporation resident in Canada or by the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, as the case may be, under an agreement that provides for the purchase, sale or exchange of currency, or from the disposition of a currency, which agreement or currency, as the case may be, can reasonably be considered to have been entered into or acquired, by the partnership, by the corporation resident in Canada or by the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, as the case may be, for the principal purpose of hedging the foreign exchange exposure arising in connection with the acquisition of the affiliate share.

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 132(9), will add the description of D to subsec. 93(2.1), applicable on the same basis as the amendment to the formula in 93(2).

Technical Notes: Second, the addition to the allowable capital loss under new variable "D" will be determined as the lesser of:

- The reduction of the allowable capital loss in respect of exempt dividends (determined as (B - C) in the formula), and
- ½ of the total of the following amounts determined in respect of the corporation resident in Canada or the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, as the case may be,
  - the amount of the capital gain of the corporation resident in Canada, of the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, or of the partnership (to the extent that such a gain is reasonably attributable to the corporation resident in Canada, or to the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, as the case may be) determined under paragraph 39(2)(a) for the taxation year that includes that time in respect of
    - the settlement or extinguishment of an obligation of the corporation resident in Canada, of the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, or of the partnership, as the case may be, that can reasonably be considered to have been issued or incurred in relation to the acquisition of the affiliate share by the partnership, or
    - the redemption, acquisition or cancellation of a share of the capital stock of a corporation resident in Canada or of the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, as the case may be, that can reasonably be considered to have been issued in relation to the acquisition of the affiliate share by the partnership, and
  - the amount of any gain realized by the partnership (to the extent that the gain is reasonably attributable to the corporation resident in Canada or to the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, as the case may be), by the corporation resident in Canada or by the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, as the case may be, under an agreement that provides for the purchase, sale or exchange of currency, or from the disposition of a currency, which agreement or currency, as the case may be, can reasonably be considered to have been entered into or acquired, by the partnership, by the corporation resident in Canada or by the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, as the case may be, for the principal purpose of hedging the foreign exchange exposure arising in connection with the acquisition of the affiliate share.

(b) a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada has a loss from the disposition by it at any time of an interest in a partnership (in this subsection referred to as the "partnership interest"), which has a direct or indirect interest in shares of the capital stock of another foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada that would not be excluded property if the shares were owned by the affiliate (in this subsection referred to as "affiliate shares"),

the amount of the loss is deemed to be the amount determined by the formula

Proposed Amendment — 93(2.2) formula

$$A - (B - C) + D$$

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 132(10), will amend the formula in subsec. 93(2.2) to read as above, applicable on the same basis as the amendment to the formula in 93(2).

Technical Notes: Subsection 93(2.2) provides rules for the purpose of determining the loss of a corporation resident in Canada from the disposition of an interest in a partnership that holds interests in shares of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada or the loss of a foreign affiliate of the corporation from a disposition of an interest in a partnership that holds interests in shares of the capital stock of another foreign affiliate of the corporation that would not be excluded property of the foreign affiliate if the foreign affiliate owned the share immediately before it was disposed of.

The amount of the loss otherwise determined is reduced by exempt dividends received on the shares, or shares for which the shares were substituted, by the corporation resident in Canada, by another corporation resident in Canada that is related to the corporation, or a by foreign affiliate of either of those corporations resident in Canada (to the extent that the exempt dividends have not already reduced losses or allowable capital losses of those corporations or foreign affiliates under subsection 93(2), (2.1), (2.2) or (2.3)). The term "exempt dividend" is defined in subsection 93(3) of the Act.

Subsection 93(2.2) is being amended to permit the corporation resident in Canada or its foreign affiliate to restore a loss arising on the disposition of an interest in a partnership that holds interests in shares of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada to the extent of the lesser of two amounts.

- The first amount is the reduction of the loss attributable to exempt dividends.
- The second amount is the sum of the following gains determined in respect of the corporation or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be, that disposed of the partnership interest
  - The foreign exchange gain arising on the settlement of an obligation issued or incurred to acquire the share interests held by the partnership.

  - The gain arising under an agreement that provides for the purchase, sale or exchange of a currency, or from the disposition of a currency, that was entered into or acquired for hedging the foreign exchange exposure arising in connection with the acquisition of the share interests held by the partnership.

First, the formula in subsection 93(2.2) is being amended by adding the new variable "D" and will read as follows:

(d) a foreign affiliate of a corporation related to the corporation resident in Canada, and

(a) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount by which a loss (determined without reference to this section), from another disposition at or before that time by a corporation or foreign affiliate described in the description of B of affiliate shares or shares for which affiliate shares were substituted, was reduced under subsection (2) in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B,

(b) the total of all amounts each of which is twice the amount by which an allowable capital loss (determined without reference to this section), of a corporation or foreign affiliate described in the description of B from another disposition at or before that time by a partnership of affiliate shares or shares for which affiliate shares were substituted, was reduced under subsection (2.1) in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B,

(c) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount by which a loss (determined without reference to this section), from a disposition at or before that time by a corporation or foreign affiliate described in the description of B of an interest in a partnership, was reduced under this subsection in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B, and

(d) the total of all amounts each of which is twice the amount by which an allowable capital loss (determined without reference to this section), of a corporation or foreign affiliate described in the description of B from a disposition at or before that time by a partnership of an interest in another partnership, was reduced under subsection (2.3) in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B.

D is the lesser of

(a) the amount, if any, by which the amount determined for B exceeds the amount determined for C, and

(b) the total of the following amounts determined in respect of the corporation resident in Canada or the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, as the case may be,

(i) the amount of the capital gain of the corporation resident in Canada, of the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, or of the partnership (to the extent that such a gain is reasonably attributable to the corporation resident in Canada, or to the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, as the case may be) determined under paragraph 39(2)(a) for the taxation year that includes that time in respect of

(A) the settlement or extinguishment of an obligation of the corporation resident in Canada, of the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, or of the partnership, as the case may be, that can reasonably be considered to have been issued or incurred in relation to the acquisition of the affiliate shares, or

(B) the redemption, acquisition or cancellation of a share of the corporation resident in Canada or of the foreign affiliate resident in Canada, as the case may be, or of an interest in the partnership that can reasonably be considered to have been issued in relation to the acquisition of the affiliate shares, and

(ii) the amount of any gain realized by the corporation resident in Canada or by the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, as the case may be, under an agreement that provides for the purchase, sale or exchange of currency, or from the disposition of a currency, which agreement or currency, as the case may be, can reasonably be considered to have been entered into or acquired by the corporation resident in Canada, by the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, or by the partnership, as the case may be, for the principal purpose of hedging the foreign exchange exposure arising in connection with the acquisition of the affiliate shares.

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 132(11), will add the description of D to subsec. 93(2.2), applicable on the same basis as the amendment to the formula in 93(2).

Technical Notes: Second, the addition to the loss under new variable "D" will be determined as the lesser of

- The reduction of the loss in respect of exempt dividends (determined as (B - C) in the formula), and

- The total of the following amounts determined in respect of the corporation resident in Canada or the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, as the case may be,

  — the amount of the capital gain of the corporation resident in Canada, of the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, or of the partnership (to the extent that such a gain is reasonably attributable to the corporation resident in Canada, or to the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, as the case may be) determined under paragraph 39(2)(a) for the taxation year that includes that time in respect of

  - the settlement or extinguishment of an obligation of the corporation resident in Canada, of the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, or of the partnership, as the case may be, that can reasonably be considered to have been issued or incurred in relation to the acquisition of the affiliate shares, or

  - the redemption, acquisition or cancellation of a share of the corporation resident in Canada or of the foreign affiliate resident in Canada, as the case may be, or of an interest in the partnership that can reasonably be considered to have been issued in relation to the acquisition of the affiliate shares, and

— the amount of any gain realized by the corporation resident in Canada or by the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, as the case may be, under an agreement that provides for the purchase, sale or exchange of currency, or from the disposition of a currency, which agreement or currency, as the case may be, can reasonably be considered to have been entered into or acquired by the corporation resident in Canada, by the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, or by the partnership, as the case may be, for the principal purpose of hedging the foreign exchange exposure arising in connection with the acquisition of the affiliate shares.

Refer to the coming-into-force commentary [under 93(2)D] to determine the coming-into-force dates for this new subsection.

(b) a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada has an allowable capital loss from a partnership from a disposition at any time by a partnership of an interest in another partnership that has a direct or indirect interest in shares of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada that would not be excluded property of the affiliate if the affiliate owned the shares immediately before the disposition (in this subsection referred to as "affiliate shares"), the amount of the allowable capital loss is deemed to be the amount determined by the formula

Proposed Amendment — 93(2.3) formula

$$A - (B - C) + D$$

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 132(12), will amend the formula in subsec. 93(2.3) to read as above, applicable on the same basis as the amendment to the formula in 93(2).

Technical Notes: Subsection 93(2.3) provides rules for the purpose of determining the allowable capital loss of a corporation resident in Canada from the disposition by a partnership of an interest in another partnership that has interests in shares of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada and for determining the allowable capital loss of a foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada from a disposition by a partnership of an interest in another partnership that has interests in shares of the capital stock of another foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada that would not be excluded property if the shares were owned by the foreign affiliate.

The amount of the allowable capital loss otherwise determined is reduced by ½ of the exempt dividends received, on the share or a share for which the share was substituted, by the corporation resident in Canada, by another corporation resident in Canada that is related to the corporation, or by a foreign affiliate of either of those corporations resident in Canada (to the extent that the exempt dividends have not already reduced losses or allowable capital losses of those corporations or foreign affiliates under subsection 93(2), (2.1), (2.2) or (2.3)). The term "exempt dividend" is defined in subsection 93(3).

Subsection 93(2.3) is being amended to permit the corporation resident in Canada or its foreign affiliate to restore an allowable capital loss from a disposition by a partnership of an interest in another partnership that has interests in shares of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada to the extent of the lesser of two amounts.

- The first amount is the reduction of the allowable capital loss attributable to exempt dividends.
- The second amount is one-half of the total of the following gains determined in respect of the corporation resident in Canada or the foreign affiliate, as the case may be,
  - — The foreign exchange gain arising on the settlement of an obligation issued or incurred to acquire the share.
  - — The foreign exchange gain arising on the redemption, acquisition or cancellation of shares issued to acquire the share.
  - — The gain arising under an agreement that provides for the purchase, sale or exchange of a currency, or from the disposition of a currency, that was entered into or acquired for hedging the foreign exchange exposure arising in connection with the acquisition of the share.

First, the formula in subsection 93(2.3) is being amended by adding the new variable "D" and will read as follows:

$$A - (B - C) + D$$

where

A is the amount of the allowable capital loss determined without reference to this subsection,

B is ½ of the total of all amounts each of which was received before that time, in respect of an exempt dividend on affiliate shares or on shares for which affiliate shares were substituted, by

(a) the corporation resident in Canada,

(b) a corporation related to the corporation resident in Canada,

(c) a foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, or

(d) a foreign affiliate of a corporation related to the corporation resident in Canada, and

C is the total of

(a) the total of all amounts each of which is ½ of the amount by which a loss (determined without reference to this section), of a corporation or foreign affiliate described in the description of B from another disposition at or before that time of affiliate shares or shares for which affiliate shares were substituted, was reduced under subsection (2) in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B,

(b) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount by which an allowable capital loss (determined without reference to this section), of a corporation or foreign affiliate described in the description of B from a disposition at or before that time by a partnership of affiliate shares or shares for which affiliate shares were substituted, was reduced under subsection (2.1) in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B,

(c) the total of all amounts each of which is ½ of the amount by which a loss (determined without reference to this section), from a disposition at or before that time by a corporation or foreign affiliate described in the description of B of an interest in a partnership, was reduced under subsection (2.2) in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B, and

(d) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount by which an allowable capital loss (determined without reference to this section), of a corporation or foreign affiliate described in the description of B from a disposition at or before that time by a partnership of an interest in another partnership, was reduced under this subsection in respect of the exempt dividends referred to in the description of B.

D is the lesser of

(a) the amount, if any, by which the amount determined for B exceeds the amount determined for C, and

(b) one-half of the total of the following amounts determined in respect of the corporation resident in Canada or the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, as the case may be,

(i) the amount of the capital gain of the corporation resident in Canada, of the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, or of the partnership (to the extent that such a gain is reasonably attributable to the corporation resident in Canada, or to the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, as the case may be) determined under paragraph 39(2)(a) for the taxation year that includes that time in respect of

(A) the settlement or extinguishment of an obligation of the corporation resident in Canada, of the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, of the partnership or of the other partnership, as the case may be, that can reasonably be considered to have been issued or incurred in relation to the acquisition of the affiliate shares, or

(B) the redemption, acquisition or cancellation of a share of the corporation resident in Canada or of the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, as the case may be, or of an interest in the partnership or in the other partnership, as the case may be, that can reasonably be considered to have been issued in relation to the acquisition of the affiliate shares, and

(ii) the amount of any gain realized by a partnership (to the extent that such gain is reasonably attributable to the corporation resident in Canada or to the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, as the case may be), by the corporation resident in Canada or by the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, as the case may be, under an agreement that provides for the purchase, sale or exchange of currency, or from the disposition of a currency, which agreement or currency, as the case may be, can reasonably be considered to have been entered into or acquired by the partnership, by the corporation resident in Canada or by the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, as the case may be, for the principal purpose of hedging the foreign exchange exposure arising in connection with the acquisition of the affiliate shares.

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 132(13), will add the description of D to subsec. 93(2.3), applicable on the same basis as the amendment to the formula in 93(2).

Technical Notes: Second, the addition to the allowable capital loss under new variable "D" will be determined as the lesser of:

- The reduction of the allowable capital loss in respect of exempt dividends (determined as (B - C) in the formula), and
- ½ of the total of the following amounts determined in respect of the corporation resident in Canada or the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, as the case may be,
  - — the amount of the capital gain of the corporation resident in Canada, of the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, or of the partnership (to the extent that such a gain is reasonably attributable to the corporation resident in Canada, or to the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, as the case may be) determined under paragraph 39(2)(a) for the taxation year that includes that time in respect of

Technical Notes [Oct. 30, 2003]: OVERVIEW

Existing Rules

Section 94 sets out rules that tax the passive income earned by certain non-resident trusts. Section 94 generally applies if a person resident in Canada has transferred or loaned property to a non-resident trust that has one or more beneficiaries that are resident in Canada.

Section 94 uses two different methods to impose tax, depending on whether the trust is a discretionary trust. A discretionary trust is a trust under which a person has a discretionary power to determine the amount of the income or capital of the trust that one or more beneficiaries will receive.

If the non-resident trust is a discretionary trust, paragraph 94(1)(c) deems the trust to be resident in Canada for the purposes of Part I of the Act and deems its income for tax purposes to be the total of its Canadian source income and its foreign accrual property income, if any. Each beneficiary is jointly and severally liable to pay the Canadian tax of the trust. However, the liability can be enforced against a particular beneficiary only to the extent that the beneficiary has received a distribution from the trust or proceeds from the sale of an interest in the trust.

If the non-resident trust is not a discretionary trust, paragraph 94(1)(d) provides that it is to be treated in much the same manner that a nonresident corporation is treated. If a Canadian resident beneficiary holds an interest in the trust with a fair market value equal to 10% or more of the total fair market value of all beneficial interests in the trust, the trust is deemed to be a controlled foreign affiliate of the beneficiary. Consequently, the foreign accrual property income rules apply to the trust and the beneficiary, requiring the beneficiary to include a portion of the foreign accrual property income of the trust in income. On the other hand, beneficiaries whose beneficial interests are less than 10% of the total fair market value of all interests in the trust may be subject to tax under the offshore investment fund rules in section 94.1. If section 94.1 does not apply, such beneficiaries are taxed only if trust income becomes payable to them in the year in which it arises.

New Rules

New section 94 takes a different approach to the taxation of non-resident trusts (NRTs). In general, if a Canadian resident contributes property to a NRT, the contributor, the NRT and certain Canadian resident beneficiaries of the trust may all become jointly and severally, or solidarily, liable to pay Canadian tax on the world-wide income of the trust. (The English-language expression "jointly and severally" no longer exists in the civil law of the province of Quebec and has been replaced in that civil law with the expression "solidarily". In the English-language version of section 94, the expression "solidarily" is added to the expression "jointly and severally", which latter expression is maintained for common-law purposes. The Frenchlanguage version of new section 94 uses only the expression "solidaire" as this expression is appropriate for both the civil and common-law. These changes ensure that the Act appropriately reflects both the civil law of the province of Quebec and the law of other provinces.)

Except as indicated otherwise, the amendments to section 94 apply to trust taxation years that begin after 2002. In addition,

- a trust created in 2001 may elect in writing (by filing the election with the Minister on or before the trust's filing-due date for the trust's taxation year in which the amending legislation is assented to) to have new section 94 apply to its taxation years that begin in 2001 and 2002, and

- a trust created in 2002 may elect in writing (by filing the election with the Minister on or before the trust's filing-due date for the trust's taxation year in which the amending legislation is assented to) to have new section 94 apply to its taxation years that begin in 2002.

The table below briefly summarizes section 94 and related rules.

Issue	Summary	References
1. Which trusts are subject to the new NRT rules?	A. In general, a trust (other than an exempt foreign trust) will be subject to tax for a taxation year as a trust resident in Canada if a contribution was made to the trust by an entity (other than a recent immigrant to Canada) that is resident in Canada at a specified time (generally, the end of the year).	S. 94(3) "entity", "exempt foreign trust", "resident contributor", "specified time" — s. 94(1) "contribution" — s. 94(1) and (2)
	B. In addition, a trust (other than an exempt foreign trust) will generally be subject to Canadian tax for a taxation year if there is a resident beneficiary under the trust. More specifically if: • the contribution was made by an entity when the entity was resident in Canada (or generally within a 60-month period before the entity became resident in Canada or within a 60-month period after the entity ceased to be resident in Canada), • where the contributing entity is an individual (other than a trust), at the specified time the individual had been resident in Canada for more than 60 months, and • at the specified time there is an entity (other than a specified charity or testamentary beneficiary) that is resident in Canada and is a beneficiary under the trust.	S. 94(3) and (10) "beneficiary", "connected contributor", "entity", "non-resident time", "resident beneficiary", "specified charity", "specified time", "testamentary beneficiary" — s. 94(1) "contribution" — s. 94(1) and (2)
2. Who is responsible for the tax payable by an NRT?	The trust is required to pay tax. If it fails to do so, each contributor referred to in 1(A) and/or each beneficiary referred to in 1(B) is jointly and severally or solidarily liable with the trust for the tax. However, the amount recoverable from an entity that is simply a beneficiary is limited to the beneficiary's recovery limit. Relief is also available in some cases for a contributor whose contribution to the trust is insignificant relative to other contributions made to the trust.	Jointly and severally, or solidarily, liable: paragraph 94(3)(d) Limit to amount recoverable — 94(7) Recovery limit — 94(8) Determination of fair market value — 94(9) Definitions — 94(1)
3. Where the NRT rules apply to a trust for a taxation year, how will the trust's tax liabilities be calculated?	A. Canadian rules generally apply to the trust as if the trust were resident in Canada throughout the year for the purpose of computing the trust's income.	s. 94(3)
	B. Explicit rule treats the trust as becoming resident in Canada, with resulting adjustment to cost amount of property.	s. 94(3)(c); 94(4)(d), 128.1(1)
	C. Parts XII.2 and XIII do not apply to the trust. Explicit exemption from Part XIII tax on amounts distributed to the trust, although payer must still withhold.	s. 94(3)(a)(vii) and (viii) and (4)(c) and 215 and 216(4.1)
	D. Flow-through of income to resident and non-resident beneficiaries permitted, subject to special rules in the event that Canadian-source income is distributed to non-residents.	s. 94(3)(a)(viii) and 104(7.01) — special rules

Department of Finance news release, December 17, 2001: Non-Resident Trusts and Foreign Investment Entities

Finance Minister Paul Martin today announced a one-year delay of the effective date of income tax proposals affecting non-resident trusts and foreign investment entities.

Draft income tax legislation to implement these proposals, which were first put forward in the 1999 budget, was released for comment on August 2, 2001. Several detailed submissions have recently been received by the Department concerning the proposed legislation. Minister Martin noted that it is important to carefully consider these submissions before finalizing changes in this complex area of the income tax system.

Accordingly, it is proposed that the effective date for the new income tax rules affecting non-resident trusts and foreign investment entities be delayed by one year, generally to take effect for taxation years that begin after 2002. This delay will allow for full consideration, in the first part of next year, of all of the submissions that have been received, in order to finalize and implement these proposals before the end of 2002.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, May 31, 2001:

Dear [xxx]

I an responding to your letter to Len Farber dated May 1, 2001 concerning the Legislative Proposals and Explanatory Notes on Taxation of Non-Resident Trusts and Foreign Investment Entities (the "Legislative Proposals") released by the Department of Finance by way of Finance Canada News Release number 2000-050, dated June 22, 2000. As you know, Finance Canada News Release number 2000-064, dated September 7, 2000, states that the implementation date for the Legislative Proposals will be delayed by one year, to taxation years that begin after 2001.

Firstly, you suggested that the Legislative Proposals should be revised to allow a trust to elect to have the rules in proposed amended section 94 of the Income Tax Act (the "Act") apply to the trust in respect of trust taxation years that begin after 2000. You noted that such a revision would be especially useful in cases such as where the trust is formed in 2001 and that the availability of such an election would obviate the need for the trust to report for the 2001 taxation year under the rules in existing subsection 94(1) of the Act and then to switch over to the rules in proposed new section 94 for the 2002 and subsequent taxation years.

We have no objections to this suggestion and we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance a revision to the implementation provision for proposed new section 94. The recommended implementation provision would provide that

- in general, proposed new section 94 would apply to trust taxation years that begin after 2001, and
- proposed new section 94 would apply to taxation years of the trust that begin after 2000, if the trust was formed in 2001 and has, on or before the trust's filing-due date for the taxation year of the trust that includes the day on which the Act implementing proposed new section 94 receives Royal Assent, notified the Minister of National Revenue in writing of its election to have proposed new subsection 94 apply to taxation years of the trust that begin after 2000.

Secondly, you made suggestions concerning paragraph (h) of the proposed new definition "exempt foreign trust" in proposed new subsection 94(1) of the Act. That paragraph essentially results in a trust described in paragraph (c) of the definition "exempt trust" in subsection 233.2(1) (i.e., a unit trust that has at least 150 beneficiaries in respect of the same class of units of the trust and meets the other conditions prescribed by section 4801.1 of the Income Tax Regulations) being an "exempt foreign trust" for the purpose of proposed new section 94. A unit trust that would not be subject to the rules in proposed new section 94 relating to non-resident trusts (the "new NRT rules") could, however, be subject to the rules in proposed new sections 94.1 and 94.2 relating to foreign investment entities (the "new FIE rules"). You pointed out that paragraph (h) of the proposed definition "exempt foreign trust" (as presently worded in the Legislative Proposals) could result in a situation where a unit trust would be subject to the new NRT rules in a particular taxation year of the trust if the trust did not, at the end of the particular year, have at least 150 beneficiaries, but would become subject to the new FIE rules in the subsequent year if, at the end of that subsequent year, the trust had at least 150 beneficiaries. You suggested that the Legislative Proposals should be revised to allow a trust to have the right to make an election, applicable to a current taxation year of the trust and all subsequent taxation years, to have the definition "exempt foreign trust" read without reference to paragraph (h).

We have no objections to this suggestion and we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance a revision to paragraph (h) of the definition "exempt foreign trust" in proposed new subsection 94(1). The recommended revision would provide that a non-resident trust that is, at the particular time, a trust described in paragraph (c) of the definition "exempt trust" in subsection 233.2(1) will not be a trust described in paragraph (h) of the definition "exempt foreign trust" in proposed new subsection 94(1) for the trust's taxation year that includes the particular time (referred to in this letter as the trust's "current year") if it meets all the following conditions:

- the trust has, on or before the trust's filing-due date for the taxation year of the trust that is the later of — the "electing year" (as defined below) of the trust,

  and

  — the taxation year of the trust that includes the day on which the Act implementing new section 94 receives Royal Assent, notified the Minister of National Revenue in writing that the trust is electing to have the definition "exempt foreign trust" read without reference to paragraph (h) of the definition "exempt foreign trust" for the "electing year" of the trust and for all subsequent taxation years of the trust, and

- throughout the period that begins at the beginning of the trust's "electing year" and ends at the end of the trust's current year (referred to in this letter as the "specified period"), all of the income of the trust for Canadian income tax purposes in any particular taxation year of the trust was paid, or became payable, in the particular year to a beneficiary under the trust.

For this purpose, the trust's "electing year" means the first particular taxation year of the trust in respect of which both of the following conditions are met:

- the trust is an "exempt foreign trust" (as defined in new subsection 94(1)) at the end of the particular year and would, but for paragraph (h) of the definition "exempt foreign trust" in new subsection 94(1), have been deemed by new subsection 94(3) to be resident in Canada in the particular year, and
- the trust was, because of new subsection 94(3) or existing subsection 94(1) of the Act, deemed to be resident in Canada in the trust's taxation year immediately preceding the particular year.

Thirdly, you made a suggestion for a change to paragraph (a) of the definition "foreign investment entity" in proposed new subsection 94.1(1) with a view to simplification of the drafting. While we will continue to consider your suggestion, we cannot at this time recommend the adoption of your suggestion.

Thank you for writing.

Yours sincerely,
Brian Ernewein
Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

94. Treatment of trusts with Canadian contributors — (1) Definitions — The following definitions apply in this section.

"arm's length transfer", at any time by an entity (referred to in this definition as the "transferor") means a transfer or loan (which transfer or loan is referred to in this definition as the "transfer") of property (other than a restricted property) that is made at that time (referred to in this definition as the "transfer time") by the transferor to a particular entity (referred to in this definition as the "recipient") where

(a) it is reasonable to conclude that none of the reasons (determined by reference to all the circumstances including the terms of a trust, an intention, the laws of a country or the existence of an agreement, a memorandum, a letter of wishes or any other arrangement) for the transfer is the acquisition at any time by any entity of an interest as a beneficiary under a non-resident trust; and

(b) the transfer

(i) is a payment of interest, of a dividend, of rent, of a royalty or of any other return on investment, or any substitute for such a return on investment, in respect of a particular property held by the recipient, if

(A) the transfer is not a transfer described in paragraph (2)(g), or the transfer is a transfer described in paragraph (2)(g) that is an acquisition by the recipient of

(I) a unit of a mutual fund trust or of a trust that would be a mutual fund trust if section 4801 of the Regulations were read without reference to paragraph 4801(b),

(II) a share of the capital stock of a mutual fund corporation, or

(III) a particular share of the capital stock of a corporation (other than a closely-held corporation) which particular share is identical to a share that is, at the transfer time, of a class that is listed on a prescribed stock exchange, and

(B) the fair market value of the property, at the transfer time, is not more than the amount that the transferor would have transferred at the transfer time in respect of the particular property to the recipient if the transferor dealt at arm's length with the recipient,

(ii) is a payment made by a corporation on a reduction of the paid-up capital in respect of shares of a class of its capital stock held by the recipient, if

(A) the transfer is not a transfer described in paragraph (2)(g), and

(B) the amount of the payment is not more than the lesser of the amount of the reduction and the consideration for which the shares were issued,

(iii) is a refund in whole or in part of a gift that the recipient made to the transferor, if the recipient is a trust and the transferor is at the transfer time a specified charity in respect of the recipient,

(iv) is a transfer

(A) in exchange for which, the recipient transfers or loans property (other than a restricted property) to the transferor, or becomes obligated to transfer or loan property (other than a restricted property), and

(B) for which it is reasonable to conclude

(I) having regard only to the transfer and the exchange that the transferor would have been willing to make the transfer if the transferor dealt at arm's length with the recipient, and

(II) that the terms and conditions, and circumstances, under which the transfer was made would have been acceptable to the transferor if the transferor dealt at arm's length with the recipient,

(v) is made in satisfaction of an obligation that arose because of a transfer to which subparagraph (iv) applied, if

(A) the transfer is not a transfer described in paragraph (2)(g),

(B) the transferor would have been willing to make the transfer if the transferor dealt at arm's length with the recipient, and

(C) the terms and conditions, and circumstances, under which the transfer was made would have been acceptable to the transferor if the transferor dealt at arm's length with the recipient,

(vi) is a payment of an amount owing by the transferor under a written agreement the terms and conditions of which, when entered into, were terms and conditions that, having regard only to the amount owing and the agreement, persons dealing at arm's length would have entered into, if the transfer is not a transfer described in paragraph (2)(g),

(vii) is a payment made before 2002 to a trust (or to a corporation controlled by the trust or to a partnership of which the trust is a majority interest partner, together referred to in this subparagraph as "the specified person or partnership") in repayment of or otherwise in respect of a particular loan made by the trust (or by the specified person or partnership, as the case may be) to the transferor, or

(viii) is a payment made after 2001 to a trust (or to a corporation controlled by the trust or to a partnership of which the trust is a majority interest partner, together referred to in this subparagraph as "the specified person or partnership") in repayment of or otherwise in respect of a particular loan made by the trust (or by the specified person or partnership, as the case may be) to the transferor and either

(A) they would have been willing to enter into the particular loan if they dealt at arm's length with each other and the payment is not a transfer described in paragraph (2)(g), or

(B) the payment is made before 2005 in accordance with fixed repayment terms agreed to before June 23, 2000.

Technical Notes: A loan or transfer of property by an "entity" in respect of a trust will generally not be considered a "contribution" to the trust where the loan or transfer is an "arm's length transfer". In these circumstances, the transferor entity will not, because of that loan or transfer, be considered to be a "contributor" to the trust. Accordingly, subsection 94(3) does not apply to a non-resident trust as a consequence only of an "arm's length transfer" in respect of the trust. (For more information on the definitions "contribution", "contributor" and "entity" in subsection 94(1), see the commentary on those definitions.)

The definition "arm's length transfer" also is relevant in applying the rules in new paragraphs 94(2)(a) and (c). Under those rules, a loan or transfer of property made to an entity other than a particular trust may, in specified circumstances, result in a transfer of property being considered to have been made to the particular trust. (For more information, see the commentary on new subsection 94(2).)

If property transferred or loaned is "restricted property", the transfer or loan will not be an arm's length transfer. (For more information on the definition "restricted property", see the commentary on that definition.)

Under paragraph (a) of the definition, a transfer or loan will be an arm's length transfer only if it is reasonable to conclude that none of the reasons (determined by reference to all the circumstances including the terms of a trust, an intention, the laws of a country or the existence of an agreement, a memorandum, a letter of wishes or any other arrangement) for the transfer is the acquisition at any time by any entity of an interest as a beneficiary under a non-resident trust.

Under subparagraphs (b)(i) and (ii) of the definition, an arm's length transfer includes, in general terms, an arm's length return on investment (conferred by the entity in which the investment is made) and certain payments made by a corporation on a reduction of the paid up capital in respect of shares of a class of the corporation's capital stock.

Under subparagraph (b)(iii) of the definition, an arm's length transfer includes a transfer to a trust by a "specified charity" (as defined in new subsection 94(1)) in respect of the trust that is made by the specified charity for the purpose of refunding in whole or in part a gift previously made to the specified charity entity by the trust. For more information on the definition "specified charity", see the commentary on that definition.

Under subparagraph (b)(iv) of the definition, an arm's length transfer includes a transfer in exchange for which, the recipient transfers or loans property (other than a restricted property) to the transferor, or becomes obligated to so transfer or loan such property, and for which it is reasonable to conclude

- having regard only to the transfer and the exchange that the transferor would have been willing to make the transfer if the transferor dealt at arm's length with the recipient, and
- that the terms and conditions, and circumstances, under which the transfer was made would have been acceptable to the transferor if the transferor dealt at arm's length with the recipient,

Under subparagraph (b)(v) of the definition, an arm's length transfer includes a transfer that is made in satisfaction of an obligation that arose because of a transfer to which subparagraph (b)(iv) applied, if

- the transfer is not a transfer described in paragraph 94(2)(g),
- the transferor would have been willing to make the transfer if the transferor dealt at arm's length with the recipient, and
- the terms and conditions, and circumstances, under which the transfer was made would have been acceptable to the transferor if the transferor dealt at arm's length with the recipient.

Under subparagraph (b)(vi) of the definition, an arm's length transfer includes a transfer that is a payment of an amount owing by the transferor under a written agreement the terms and conditions of which, when entered into, were terms and conditions that, having regard only to the amount owing and the agreement, persons dealing at arm's length would have entered into, if the transfer is not a transfer described in paragraph 94(2)(g).

Under subparagraph (b)(vii) of the definition, an arm's length transfer includes a transfer that is a payment made before 2002 to a trust (or to a corporation controlled by the trust or to a partnership of which the trust is a majority interest partner, together referred to in this subparagraph as "the specified person or partnership") in repayment of or otherwise in respect of a particular loan made by the trust (or by the specified person or partnership, as the case may be) to the transferor.

Finally, under subparagraph (b)(viii) of the definition, an arm's length transfer includes a transfer that is a payment made after 2001 to a trust (or to a corporation controlled by the trust or to a partnership of which the trust is a majority interest partner, together referred to in this subparagraph as "the specified person or partnership") in repayment of or otherwise in respect of a particular loan made by the trust (or by the specified person or partnership, as the case may be) to the transferor in circumstances where either

- they would have been willing to enter the particular loan if they dealt at arm's length with each other and the payment is not a transfer described in paragraph 94(2)(g), or
- the payment is made before 2005 in accordance with fixed repayment terms agreed to before June 23, 2000.

The definition "arm's length transfer" generally applies to trust taxation years that begin after 2002. However, where a trust elects, by notifying the Minister in writing on or before its filing-due date for its taxation year that includes the day on which this Act is assented to, the definition "arm's length transfer" will be read without reference to a loan or transfer of property that is made before 2003 and identified in the election. This electing provision recognizes that the definition "arm's length transfer" in the new rules does not have an equivalent under existing subsection 94(1). In particular, a non-resident trust now considered resident by reason of existing subsection 94(1) might not be described in new subsection 94(3) and would no longer be considered resident, which would result in the change in residency rules in subsection 128.1(4) applying. The election, which is found in the coming-into-force provision of the amending legislation, effectively permits a trust to continue to be deemed resident.

Related Provisions: 87(2)(j.95) — Amalgamations — continuing corporation; 94(4)(c) [proposed] — Deeming non-resident trust to be resident in Canada does not apply.

Regulations: 3200, 3201 (prescribed stock exchange for subcl. (b)(i)(A)(III)).

"beneficiary", under a trust, includes

(a) an entity that is beneficially interested in the trust; and

(b) an entity that would be beneficially interested in the trust if

(i) the entity were a person, and

(ii) the reference in subparagraph 248(25)(b)(ii) to

(A) the expression "any arrangement in respect of the particular trust" were read as a reference to the expression "any arrangement (including the terms or conditions of a share, or any arrangement in respect of a share, of the capital stock of a corporation that is beneficially interested in the particular trust) in respect of the particular trust", and

(B) the expression "the particular person or partnership might" were read as a reference to the expression "the particular person or partnership becomes (or could become on the exercise of any discretion by any entity), directly or indirectly, entitled to any amount derived, directly or indirectly, from the income or capital of the particular trust or might".

Technical Notes: Under paragraph (a) of the new definition "beneficiary" in subsection 94(1), a beneficiary under a trust includes an entity beneficially interested in the trust.

Under paragraph (b) of that definition, a beneficiary under a trust also includes an entity that would be beneficially interested in the trust if

- the entity were a person, and
- the reference in subparagraph 248(25)(b)(ii) to

(A) "any arrangement in respect of the particular trust" were read as a reference to "any arrangement (including the terms or conditions of a share, or any arrangement in respect of a share, of the capital stock of a corporation that is beneficially interested in the particular trust) in respect of the particular trust", and

(B) "the particular person or partnership might" were read as a reference to "the particular person or partnership becomes (or could become on the exercise of any discretion by any entity), directly or indirectly, entitled to any amount derived, directly or indirectly, from the income or capital of the particular trust or might".

For the purposes of the Act, the expression "beneficially interested" has the meaning assigned by subsection 248(25).

Related Provisions: 94.1(1)"beneficiary" — Application of definition to foreign investment entities; 248(25) — Meaning of "beneficially interested".

"closely-held corporation", at any time, means a corporation other than a corporation in respect of which

(a) there are one or more classes of shares of its capital stock that are not a specified class within the meaning assigned by subsection 256(1.1); and

(b) it is reasonable [to] conclude that at that time

(i) the shares of those classes (other than such a specified class) are held by at least 150 entities

each of whom holds shares that have a total fair market value of at least $500, and

(ii) the total number of issued and outstanding shares of a class (other than such a specified class) held by a particular entity or by any other entity with whom the particular entity does not deal at arm's length is not more than 10% of the total number of the issued and outstanding shares of that class.

Technical Notes: The definition "closely-held corporation" is relevant in applying subparagraph (b)(i) of the definition "arm's length transfer" and the definition "restricted property". (For more information on the definitions "arm's length transfer" and "restricted property" in subsection 94(1), see the commentary on those definitions.)

A closely-held corporation at any time, means a corporation, other than a corporation in respect of which

- there is at least one class of shares of its capital stock that class is not a specified class (within the meaning assigned by subsection 256(1.1),
- it is reasonable conclude that at that time the shares of those classes (other than such a specified class) are held by at least 150 entities each of whom holds shares that have a total fair market value of at least $500, and
- it is reasonable conclude that the total number of issued and outstanding shares of a class (other than such a specified class) held by a particular entity or by any other entity with whom the particular entity does not deal at arm's length is not more than 10% of the total number of the issued and outstanding shares of that class.

"connected contributor", to a trust at a particular time, means an entity (including an entity that has ceased to exist) that is a contributor to the trust at the particular time, other than an entity

(a) that is an individual (other than a trust) who was, at or before the particular time, resident in Canada for a period of, or periods the total of which is, not more than 60 months (but not including an individual who, before the particular time, was never non-resident); or

(b) whose only contributions to the trust were made at a non-resident time of the entity.

Technical Notes: The definition "connected contributor" is relevant in determining whether a beneficiary is, at a particular time, a "resident beneficiary" (as defined in new subsection 94(1)) under a non-resident trust. Under new paragraph 94(3)(d), such a resident beneficiary can, to an extent, be liable for the trust's income tax. For more information, see the commentary on subsections 94(3) and (7) to (10), subparagraph 152(4)(b)(vi) and subsections 160(2.1) and (3).

A connected contributor at a particular time is any entity, including an entity that has ceased to exist, that is a "contributor" (as defined in new subsection 94(1)) to the trust at that time, other than

- an individual who was resident in Canada for a period of, or periods the total of which is, not more than 60 months (but not including a trust or an individual who before that time was never non-resident), or
- an entity that is a contributor only because of one or more transactions that occurred at a "non-resident time" (as defined in new subsection 94(1)) of the entity.

For more information on the definitions "contributor", "resident beneficiary" and "non-resident time" in subsection 94(1), see the commentary on those definitions.

In the context of the definition "connected contributor", reference should also be made to new paragraphs 94(2)(a) to (m) (which extend the circumstances in which a transfer is considered to occur for the purposes of section 94), new paragraphs 94(2)(n) to (q) and subsections 94(11) to (13) (which generally extend the circumstances in which a contribution is considered to be made for the purposes of section 94) and paragraphs 94(2)(r) to (u) (which generally narrow the circumstances in which a contribution is considered to be made for the purposes of section 94). Reference should also be made to new subsection 94(10), which applies where a contributor becomes resident in Canada within 60 months after making a contribution to a trust.

Related Provisions: 87(2)(j.95) — Amalgamation — continuing corporation; 94(10) [proposed] — Where contributor becomes resident in Canada within 60 months; 94(13) [proposed] — Deemed connected contributor to transferee trust.

"contribution", to a trust by a particular entity, means

(a) a transfer or loan (other than an arm's length transfer) of property to the trust by the particular entity;

(b) if a particular transfer or loan (other than an arm's length transfer) of property is made by the particular entity as part of a series of transactions or events that includes another transfer or loan (other than an arm's length transfer) of property to the trust by another entity, that other transfer or loan to the extent that it can reasonably be considered to have been made in respect of the particular transfer or loan; and

(c) if the particular entity becomes obligated to make a particular transfer or loan (other than a transfer or loan that would, if it were made, be an arm's length transfer) of property as part of a series of transactions or events that includes another transfer or loan (other than an arm's length transfer) of property to the trust by another entity, that other transfer or loan to the extent that it can reasonably be considered to have been made in respect of the obligation.

Technical Notes: Where a "contribution" is made at or before a particular time to a nonresident trust by an entity, that entity will be considered to be a "contributor" at the particular time and, in certain cases, will be jointly and severally or solidarily liable under subsection 94(3) for the trust's income taxes. (For more detail on the expression "solidarily", please refer to the introductory commentary above on new section 94.) For more information on subsection 94(3), see the commentary on that subsection.

Under paragraph (a) of the definition, a "contribution" to a trust by a particular entity means a loan or transfer of property (in this commentary referred to as a "transfer") by the entity to the trust (other than an "arm's length transfer", as defined in new subsection 94(1)).

Under paragraphs (b) and (c) of the definition "contribution", a contribution is also considered to have been made by a particular entity where

- the particular entity makes a particular transfer (other than an "arm's length transfer") as part of a series of transactions or events that includes another transfer (other than an arm's length transfer), to the trust, by another entity; or
- the particular entity becomes obligated to make a particular transfer (other than a transfer that would, if it were made, be an "arm's length transfer") as part of a series of transactions or events that includes another transfer (other than an arm's length transfer), to the trust, by another entity.

In these circumstances, the other transfer is considered to be a contribution to the trust by the particular entity only to the extent that the other transfer can reasonably be considered to have been made in respect of the particular transfer or the particular entity's obligation to make the particular transfer, as the case may be. In either case, a contribution is considered to be made at the time of the other transfer.

There are a number of rules that have the effect of applying the definition "contribution" more broadly than would otherwise be the case. See the commentary on new paragraphs 94(2)(a) to (m) (which extend the circumstances in which a transfer is considered to occur for the purposes of section 94), new paragraphs 94(2)(n) to (q) and subsections 94(11) to (13) (which generally extend the circumstances in which a contribution is considered to be made for the purposes of section 94) and paragraphs 94(2)(r) to (u) (which generally narrow the circumstances in which a contribution is considered to be made for the purposes of section 94).

The definition "contribution" applies to all loans and transfers, irrespective of when made.

Related Provisions: 94(2)(s)–(u) [proposed] — Certain transfers deemed not to be contribution; 94(9) [proposed] — Determination of contribution amount.

"contributor", to a trust at any time, means an entity (including an entity that has ceased to exist) that, at or before that time, has made a contribution to the trust.

Technical Notes: A "contributor" to a trust at any time means an "entity" (as defined in new subsection 94(1)), including an entity that has ceased to exist, that at or before that time has made a "contribution" (as defined in new subsection 94(1)) to the trust. The definition "contributor" is significant primarily for the purposes of the definitions "resident contributor" and "connected contributor" in new subsection 94(1). For more information, see the commentary on those definitions.

Reference should be made in this context to new paragraphs 94(2)(a) to (m) (which extend the circumstances in which a transfer is considered to occur for the purposes of section 94), new paragraphs 94(2)(n) to (q) and subsections 94(11) to (13) (which generally extend the circumstances in which a contribution is considered to be made for the purposes of section 94) and paragraphs 94(2)(r) to (u) (which generally narrow the circumstances in which a contribution is considered to be made for the purposes of section 94).

Related Provisions: 75(3)(c.2) — Reversionary trust rules do not apply to non-resident trust even with Canadian resident contributor; 94(13) [proposed] — Deemed contributor to transferee trust; 233.2(4) — Annual information return by contributor to non-resident trust.

(d) a trust governed by a salary deferral arrangement;

(e) a trust operated for the purpose of administering or providing uperannuation, pension, retirement or employee benefits;

(f) a trust that at or before that time was a personal trust; or

(g) a trust that has elected in writing filed with the Minister, on or before the trust's filing-due date for the particular taxation year of the trust that includes that time (or for an earlier taxation year that ended before that time), that the definition "exempt foreign trust" not apply to it for the particular taxation year (or for the earlier taxation year) and for all of its subsequent taxation years.

Technical Notes: An "eligible non-resident trust" can qualify as an exempt foreign trust under paragraph (h) of the definition "exempt foreign trust" where it meets the conditions imposed by that paragraph.

An eligible non-resident trust at any time means a trust other than a trust that

- is created or maintained for charitable purposes,
- is governed by an employee benefit plan,
- is described in paragraph (a.1) of the definition "trust" in subsection 108(1),

Related Provisions: 94(1)"exempt foreign trust"(h) — Eligible non-resident trust can be EFT.

"entity" includes an association, a corporation, a fund, a natural person, a joint venture, an organization, a partnership, a syndicate and a trust.

Technical Notes: The expression "entity" is defined to include an association, a corporation, a fund, a natural person, a joint venture, an organization, a partnership, a syndicate and a trust.

(i) each beneficiary under the trust at the particular time is

(A) an individual who, at the time that the trust was created, was, because of mental or physical infirmity, dependent on an individual who is a contributor to the trust or on an individual related to such a contributor (which beneficiary is referred to in this paragraph as an "infirm beneficiary"), or

(B) a person who is entitled, only after the particular time, to receive or otherwise obtain the use of any of the trust's income or capital,

(ii) at the particular time there is at least one infirm beneficiary who suffers from a mental or physical infirmity that causes the beneficiary to be dependent on a person,

(iii) each infirm beneficiary is non-resident at any time in the trust's taxation year that includes the particular time, and

(b) a non-resident trust, if

(i) the trust was created after the breakdown of a marriage or common-law partnership of two particular individuals to provide for the maintenance of a beneficiary under the trust who is a child of

(d) a non-resident trust

(i) that, throughout the particular period that began at the time it was created and ends at the particular time, would be non-resident if this Act were read without reference to subsection (1) as that subsection read in its application to taxation years that began before 2003,

(ii) that was created exclusively for charitable purposes and has been operated, throughout the particular period, exclusively for charitable purposes,

(iii) if the particular time is more than 24 months after the day on which the trust was created, in respect of which, there is at the particular time a group of at least 20 persons (other than trusts) each of whom at the particular time

(ii) the plan or the specified trust is maintained primarily for the benefit of non-resident individuals,

(iii) the trust holds no restricted property, and

(iv) the plan or the specified trust provides no benefits, other than benefits in respect of

(A) services rendered to an employer by an employee of the employer, which employee was non-resident throughout the period during which the services were rendered,

(B) services rendered to an employer by an employee of the employer, other than services that were primarily

(I) rendered in Canada,

(II) rendered in connection with a business carried on by the employer in Canada, or

(III) a combination of services described in subclauses (I) and (II),

(C) services rendered to an employer by an employee, of the employer, in a particular calendar month where

(I) the employee was resident in Canada throughout no more than 60 of the 72 calendar months ending with the particular month, and

(II) the employee became a member of, or a beneficiary under, the plan or the specified trust (or a similar plan or specified trust for which the plan or the specified trust was substituted) before the end of the calendar month following the month in which the employee became resident in Canada, or

(D) any combination of services described by clauses (A) to (C);

(h) an eligible non-resident trust

(i) under which the interest of each beneficiary (in this subparagraph, determined without reference to subsection 248(25)) under the trust is, at all times that the interest exists during the trust's taxation year that includes the particular time, a specified fixed interest of the beneficiary in the trust, if at the particular time

(A) there are at least 150 beneficiaries each of whom holds a specified fixed interest in the trust with a fair market value of at least $500, and

(B) where in respect of a class of interests as a beneficiary under the trust, the total fair market value of interests of that class held by a resident contributor or by any other entity with whom the resident contributor does not deal at arm's length is more than 10% of the total fair market value of interests of that class, it is reasonable to conclude (determined by reference to all the circumstances including the terms of the trust, an intention, the laws of a country or the existence of an agreement, a memorandum, a letter of wishes or any other arrangement) that that resident contributor is a specified contributor to the trust, or

(ii) under which the interest of each beneficiary under the trust is, at all times that the interest exists during the trust's taxation year that includes the particular time, a specified fixed interest of the beneficiary in the trust, if in respect of the trust

(A) a prescribed form and a copy of the terms of the trust that apply at the particular time have been filed with the Minister by or on behalf of the trust on or before its filing due date for its taxation year that includes the particular time (or a later date that is acceptable to the Minister), and

(B) it is reasonable to conclude (determined by reference to all the circumstances including the terms of the trust, an intention, the laws of a country or the existence of an agreement, a memorandum, a letter of wishes or any other arrangement) that each resident contributor to the trust at the particular time is a specified contributor to the trust at the particular time; or

(i) a trust that is, at the particular time, a prescribed trust or included in a prescribed class of trusts.

Technical Notes: An "exempt foreign trust" includes a number of different types of non-resident trusts that are exempt from the application of new subsection 94(3). The expression refers to the following types of non-resident trusts:

(a) a non-resident trust the current income (determined with reference to amended subsection 108(3)) or capital from which can be provided only to one or more physically or mentally infirm dependent individuals, provided that these individuals are non-resident and that any property settled on the trust could reasonably be considered, at the time it was settled, to be necessary for the maintenance of those individuals;

(b) a non-resident trust created after the breakdown of a marriage or common-law partnership of two individuals, the current income (determined with reference to amended subsection 108(3)) or capital from which can be provided only to non-resident children of one of the individuals, if the children are under 21 years of age (or under 31 years of age and enrolled in a specified educational institution) and each "contribution" to the trust (as defined in subsection 94(1)) was to provide for the maintenance of those children;

(c) certain non-resident trusts that own or administer a university described in paragraph (f) of the definition "total charitable gifts" in subsection 118.1(1) and that could qualify under that definition as a recipient permitted for the purposes of the tax credit for charitable gifts;

(d) certain non-resident trusts established exclusively for charitable purposes (as those purposes are defined in the laws of Canada);

(e) a non-resident trust that is governed by an employee profit sharing plan (as defined in subsection 248(1)), by a retirement compensation arrangement (as defined in subsection 248(1), or by a foreign retirement arrangement (as defined in subsection 248(1));

(f) a non-resident trust that is governed by an employee benefit plan (as defined in subsection 248(1)) or a trust described in paragraph (a.1) of the definition trust in subsection 108(1), if

(i) it is maintained primarily for the benefit of non-resident individuals,

(ii) it holds no restricted property,

(iii) it provides no benefits, other than benefits in respect of services described in clauses (iv)(A) to (D) of the definition;

(g) a non-resident trust that has been operated exclusively for the purpose of administering or providing superannuation, pension, retirement or employee benefits, if it meets the conditions stipulated under paragraph (g) of the definition regarding its beneficiaries (and their rights), its property, its jurisdiction of residence, and its liability for tax under the laws of that jurisdiction.

(h) a non-resident trust that is an eligible non-resident trust if the only beneficial interests in the trust are "specified fixed interests" (as defined in subsection 94(1)) and, in general terms,

(i) where there are at least 150 beneficiaries (determined without reference to subsection 248(25)) under the trust each of whom holds a specified fixed interest in the trust worth at least $500, the only "resident contributors" (as defined in subsection 94(1)) to the trust that hold more than 10% of the issued interests of any class of beneficial interests in the trust are "specified contributors" (as defined in subsection 94(1)) to the trust, or

(ii) in any other case, each resident contributor to the trust is a specified contributor to the trust and a copy of the current terms of the trust (and any other required information in prescribed form) has been filed with the Minister of National Revenue by or on behalf of the trust,

(i) a prescribed trust or prescribed class of trusts. (At the present time, it is not anticipated that any trust or class of trusts will be prescribed for this purpose).

Paragraph (h) is intended to apply to non-resident investment trusts that are legitimately commercial. Such a trust is intended to be treated as a foreign investment entity under sections 94.1 to 94.4. A Canadian resident investor (other than an "exempt taxpayer" within the meaning assigned by subsection 94.1(1)) in the trust would be expected to be a taxpayer to whom subsection 94.1(3) or 94.2(9) applies for a taxation year of the investor in respect of their investment in the trust.

Information Circulars: 84-3R5: Gifts to certain charitable organizations outside Canada.

Regulations: 3503 (prescribed universities outside Canada, for para. (c)(ii)). The Department of Finance technical notes of Oct. 11/02 stated that it is not currently anticipated that any trusts or class of trusts will be prescribed under what is now para. (i). (The technical notes of Oct. 30/03 do not mention this issue.).

"exempt service" means a service rendered at any time by an entity (referred to in this definition as the "service provider") to, for or on behalf of, another entity (referred to in this definition as a "recipient") if

(a) the recipient is at that time a trust and the service relates to the administration of the trust; or

(b) the following conditions apply in respect of the service, namely

(i) the service is rendered in the service provider's capacity at that time as an employee or agent of the recipient,

(ii) in exchange for the service the recipient transfers or loans property, or becomes obligated to transfer or loan property, and

(iii) it is reasonable to conclude

(A) having regard only to the service and the exchange that the service provider would have been willing to carry out the service if the service provider had dealt at arm's length with the recipient, and

(B) that the terms and conditions, and circumstances, under which the service was provided would have been acceptable to the service provider if the service provider had dealt at arm's length with the recipient.

Technical Notes: The definition "exempt service" is relevant to new paragraph 94(2)(f), which deems the provision of certain services (other than exempt services) to be a transfer of property.

An exempt service means a service rendered at any time by an entity (the "service provider") to, for or on behalf of, another entity (a "recipient") if either

- the recipient is at that time a trust and the service relates to the administration of the trust, or
- the following conditions apply in respect of the service, namely

(i) the service is rendered in the service provider's capacity at that time as an employee or agent of the recipient,

(ii) in exchange for the service the recipient transfers or loans property, or becomes obligated to transfer or loan property, and

(iii) it is reasonable to conclude

(A) having regard only to the service and the exchange that the service provider would have been willing to carry out the service if the service provider had dealt at arm's length with the recipient, and

(B) that the terms and conditions, and circumstances, under which the service was provided would have been acceptable to the service provider if the service provider had dealt at arm's length with the recipient.

Related Provisions: 94(2)(f) — Exempt service excluded from service being a deemed transfer of property.

"exempt taxpayer", for a taxation year of the taxpayer, means

(a) a person whose taxable income for the taxation year is exempt from tax under this Part because of subsection 149(1) (otherwise than because of paragraph 149(1)(q.1), (t) or (z)); and

(b) a trust (other than a personal trust) if

(i) the only beneficiaries (in this paragraph, determined without reference to subsection 248(25)) under the trust are persons,

(ii) the interest of each beneficiary under the trust is, at all times that the interest exists during the taxation year, a specified fixed interest of the beneficiary in the trust,

(iii) each beneficiary under the trust at any time in the taxation year is a person whose taxable income, for the period that includes all of those times in the taxation year, is exempt from tax under this Part because of subsection 149(1) (otherwise than because of paragraph 149(1)(q.1), (t) or (z)), and

(iv) the trust is resident in Canada at the end of the taxation year.

Technical Notes: The definition "exempt taxpayer" is relevant in determining whether a taxpayer is a "specified contributor" to a trust.

Except as indicated below, tax-exempt persons to which subsection 149(1) applies are generally exempt taxpayers. However, retirement compensation arrangements and qualifying environmental trusts for which alternative income tax rules are provided under Parts XI.3 and XII.4, and insurers to which paragraph 149(1)(t) applies, are not exempt taxpayers.

An exempt taxpayer also includes a Canadian resident pooled fund trust under which the only beneficiaries (determined without reference to subsection 248(25)) are the tax-exempt persons described above that would qualify as exempt taxpayers with respect to another entity if they held their interests directly in that other entity. However, such a pooled fund trust will qualify as an exempt taxpayer only if all of the interests in the trust are "specified fixed interests".

Related Provisions: 94(1)"specified contributor"(d)(ii) — Exclusion from definition of specified contributor; 94(4)(a) [proposed] — Deeming non-resident trust to be resident in Canada does not apply.

"non-resident time", of an entity in respect of a particular time, means a time (referred to in this definition as the "contribution time") at which the entity made a contribution to a trust that is before the particular time and at which the entity was non-resident, where the entity was non-resident or not in existence throughout the period that began 60 months before the contribution time (or, if the entity is an individual and the trust arose on and as a consequence of the death of the individual, 18 months before the contribution time) and ends at the earliest of

(a) the time that is 60 months after the contribution time,

(b) if the entity is an individual, the date of death of the individual, and

(c) the particular time.

Technical Notes: The definition "non-resident time" is relevant in determining whether a contributor to a trust is a "connected contributor" and whether the "look-through" rule in paragraph 94(2)(l) applies in determining whether an entity has made a contribution (i.e., is a contributor).

The "non-resident time" of an entity in respect of a particular time means a time (referred to in this commentary as the "contribution time") at which the entity made a contribution to a trust, that is before the particular time and at which the entity was non-resident, provided that the entity was non-resident (or not in existence) throughout a specified period.

As indicated into the coming-into-force provision for new section 94, where the contribution time occurs before June 23, 2000, the specified period is the period that begins 18 months before the end of the trust's taxation year that includes the contribution time and ends at the earliest of

- 60 months after the contribution time;
- where the entity is an individual, the date of the individual's death; and
- the particular time.

Where the contribution time occurs after June 22, 2000 and the trust arose on and as a consequence of the death of an individual, the specified period is the period that begins 18 months before the contribution time and ends at the earliest of

- 60 months after the contribution time;
- where the entity is an individual, the date of the individual's death; and
- the particular time.

Where the contribution time occurs after June 22, 2000 and the trust did not arise on and as a consequence of the death of an individual, the specified period is the period that begins 60 months before the contribution time and ends at the earliest of

- 60 months after the contribution time;
- where the entity is an individual, the date of the individual's death; and
- the particular time.

The measurement of the specified period by reference to any particular time is to ensure that the contributing entity and the trust may treat the contribution time as a "non-resident time" for the purposes of applying subsection 94(3) at a "specified time" in respect of the trust for a taxation year of the trust (generally, the end of that taxation year) if at the end of that particular year the contributor still has not become resident in Canada within the 60-month period after the contribution time.

However, new subsection 94(10) ensures that such a contributor will, for the purposes of the definition "connected contributor", be considered to have made the contribution at a time other than a "non-resident time" if the contributor becomes resident in Canada within the 60-month period after the contribution time. As a result, at each "specified time" in respect of the trust for taxation year of the trust (generally, the end of that taxation year) following the contribution, there would be a connected contributor to the trust and, if there were a resident beneficiary under the trust, subsection 94(3) would also apply in respect of those years.

Amended subparagraph 152(4)(b)(vi) ensures that a reassessment of a taxpayer arising out of the application of subsection 94(10) may be undertaken by the Canada Customs and Revenue Agency within 3 years after the end of the taxpayer's normal reassessment period for the taxpayer's relevant taxation year.

For more information on new subsection 94(10) and amended subparagraph 152(4)(b)(vi), see the commentary on those provisions.

Related Provisions: 94(2)(j) — Where trust acquires property as a consequence of death of individual; 94(10) [proposed] — Where contributor becomes resident in Canada within 60 months; 248(8) — Occurrences as a consequence of death.

"promoter" of a trust at any time, means an entity that on or before that time establishes, organizes or substantially reorganizes the undertakings of the trust.

Technical Notes: The definition "promoter" is relevant in applying new paragraph 94(2)(s), which provides that a transfer to a trust will not be considered a contribution where certain conditions, described in that paragraph, are met. For this purpose a promoter means an entity that establishes, organizes or substantially reorganizes the undertakings of the trust. For more information on paragraph 94(2)(s), see the commentary on that paragraph.

Related Provisions: 94(2)(s) — Where promoter required by securities law to acquire interest in commercial investment trust.

"resident beneficiary", at any time under a particular trust, means an entity (other than an entity that is at that time a specified charity, or a testamentary beneficiary, in respect of the particular trust) that is, at that time, a beneficiary under the particular trust where, at that time

(a) the entity is resident in Canada; and

(b) there is a connected contributor to the particular trust.

Technical Notes: Under new subsection 94(3), a particular trust is generally treated as resident in Canada for a particular taxation year of the trust if there is a "resident beneficiary" under the particular trust at a "specified time" (generally, the end of the particular year). Under new paragraph 94(3)(d), each "resident beneficiary" can be jointly and severally or solidarily liable with the particular trust for the particular trust's income tax liabilities under the Act for the particular year. (For further information with respect to the expression "solidarily", please refer to the introductory commentary on new section 94.) See also the commentary on subsection 94(3).

A "resident beneficiary" at a particular time under a trust is an entity (other than an entity that is at that time a "specified charity" or a "testamentary beneficiary" in respect of the trust) that, at that time, is a beneficiary under the trust, if, at that time,

- the entity is resident in Canada; and
- there is a "connected contributor" to the trust.

The expressions "connected contributor", "specified charity" and "testamentary beneficiary" are defined in new subsection 94(1). For further information, see the commentary on those definitions.

Related Provisions: 94(1)"beneficiary" — Extended meaning of "beneficiary"; 94(3)(a) — Trust with resident beneficiary deemed resident in Canada for certain purposes; 94(3)(d)(i) — Liability of resident beneficiary for trust's tax.

"resident contributor", to a particular trust at any time, means an entity that is, at that time, resident in Canada and a contributor to the particular trust, but does not include

(a) an individual (other than a trust) who has not, at that time, been resident in Canada for a period of, or periods the total of which is, more than 60 months (other than an individual who, before that time, was never non-resident); or

(b) an individual (other than a trust), if

(i) the particular trust is an inter vivos trust that was created before 1960 by a person who was non-resident when the trust was created, and

(ii) the individual has not, after 1959, made a contribution to the particular trust.

Technical Notes: Under new subsection 94(3), a trust is generally treated as resident in Canada for a particular taxation year of the trust if there is a "resident contributor" to the trust at a "specified time" in respect of the trust for the particular taxation year (generally, the end of the particular year). Under new paragraph 94(3)(d), a "resident contributor" can be jointly and severally or solidarily liable with the trust for the trust's income tax liabilities under the Act for the particular year. (For further information with respect to the expression "solidarily", please refer to the introductory commentary above on new section 94.)

A "resident contributor" at any time means an entity that is, at that time, resident in Canada and a "contributor" (as defined in new subsection 94(1)) to the trust. However, an exemption from treatment as a resident contributor is provided for a contributor who is:

- an individual who was resident in Canada for a period of, or periods the total of which is, not more than 60 months (but not including a trust or an individual who before that time was never non-resident); and
- an individual, if the trust is an inter vivos trust that was created before 1960 by a person who was non-resident when the trust was created and the individual made no contribution after 1959 to the trust.

In the context of this definition, reference should also be made to new paragraphs 94(2)(a) to (m) (which extend the circumstances in which a transfer is considered to occur for the purposes of section 94), new paragraphs 94(2)(n) to (q) and subsections 94(11) to (13) (which generally extend the circumstances in which a contribution is considered to be made for the purposes of section 94) and paragraphs 94(2)(r) to (u) (which generally narrow the circumstances in which a contribution is considered to be made for the purposes of section 94).

Letter from Dept. of Finance, September 22, 2000:

Dear [xxx]

I am responding to your faxed memo to me dated August 25, 2000 concerning the Legislative Proposals and Explanatory Notes on Taxation of Non-Resident Trusts and Foreign Investment Entities (the "Legislative Proposals") released by the Department of Finance by way of Finance Canada News Release number 2000-050, dated June 22, 2000.

In your memo, you referred to the grandfathering provision in existing clause 94(l)(b)(i)(D) of the Income Tax Act in relation to inter vivos trusts created at any time before 1960 by a person who at that time was a non-resident person. In this connection, you have suggested that a grandfathering rule be introduced in the Legislative Proposals. In particular, you have suggested that the definition "resident contributor" in new proposed subsection 94(1) of the Act be revised to exclude from that definition an individual, in the case of a particular trust, where

(i) the particular trust is an inter vivos trust that was created at any time before 1960 by a person who at that time was a non-resident person, and

(ii) no contribution is made to the particular trust by the individual at any time after 1959.

We are prepared to recommend to the Minister your suggested revision to that definition.

We confirm that the effect of this revision would be to save a non-resident trust from the application of the rule in proposed paragraph 94(3)(a) (which deems the trust to be resident in Canada for tax purposes) in any particular trust taxation year only if all the following conditions are met:

1. the trust is an inter vivos trust that was created at any time before 1960 by a person who at that time was a non-resident person,

2. no contribution is made to the trust at any time after 1959 by any individual who, at the end of the particular year, is both resident in Canada and a contributor to the trust (except an individual (other than a trust) who has not, at the end of the particular year, been resident in Canada for a period of, or periods the total of which is, more than 60 months), and

3. there are no resident beneficiaries (as defined in the Legislative Proposals) under the trust at the end of the particular year.

Thank you for writing.

Yours sincerely,

Len Farber
General Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

"restricted property" means

(a) a particular share (or a particular right to acquire a share) of the capital stock of a particular closely-held corporation if the particular share (or the particular right), or a property for which the particular share (or the particular right) was substituted, was at any time acquired as part of a transaction or series of transactions or events under which a specified share of the capital stock of a closely-held corporation was acquired by any entity in exchange for, as consideration for, or upon conversion of, any property;

(b) an indebtedness (or a right to acquire an indebtedness) owing by another entity if

(i) the other entity is a closely-held corporation,

(ii) the indebtedness (or the right), or a property for which the indebtedness (or the right) was substituted, was at any time acquired as part of a transaction or series of transactions or events under which a specified share of the capital stock of a closely-held corporation was acquired by any entity in exchange for, as consideration for, or upon conversion of, any property, and

(iii) the amount of any payment (under a right to receive, in any manner whatever and from any entity, amounts in respect of the indebtedness), or the value of such a right, is, directly or indirectly, determined primarily by one or more of the following criteria in respect of one or more properties of the other entity (or an entity with which the other entity does not deal at arm's length):

(A) the fair market value of the property, production from the property or use of the property,

(B) gains or profits from the disposition of the property,

(C) income from the property, profits from the property, revenue from the property or cash flow from the property, or

(D) any other criterion similar to a criterion referred to in any of clauses (A) to (C); and

(c) any property the fair market value of which is derived in whole or in part, directly or indirectly, from a particular share, an indebtedness or a right described in paragraph (a) or (b).

Technical Notes: The expression "restricted property" is relevant in applying a number of provisions in respect of non-resident trusts, including the definitions in subsection 94(1) of "arm's length transfer" and "exempt foreign trust". The definition "restricted property" is intended to serve as an anti-avoidance provision.

More specifically, restricted property means

- under paragraph (a) of the definition, a particular share (or a right to acquire a share) of the capital stock of a particular closely-held corporation if the particular share (or right), or a property for which the particular share (or right) was substituted, was at any time acquired as part of a transaction or series of transactions under which a specified share of the capital stock of a closely-held corporation was acquired by any entity in exchange for, as consideration for, or upon conversion of any property;

- under paragraph (b) of the definition, an indebtedness (or a right to acquire indebtedness) owing by another entity if — the other entity is a closely-held corporation,

  — the indebtedness (or right), or a property for which the indebtedness (or right) was substituted, was at any time acquired as part of a transaction or series of transactions under which a specified share of the capital stock of a closely-held corporation was acquired by any entity in exchange for, as consideration for, or upon conversion of any property, and — the amount of any payment (under a right to receive, in any manner whatever and from any entity, amounts in respect of the indebtedness), or the value of such a right, is, directly or indirectly, determined primarily by reference to any one or more of the criteria, in respect of one or more properties of the other entity (or an entity with which the other entity does not deal at arm's length), identified in any of clauses (b)(iii)(A) to (D) of the definition; and

- under paragraph (c) of the definition, any property the fair market value of which is derived in whole or in part, directly or indirectly, from a particular share, indebtedness or right described in paragraph (a) or (b)of the definition.

New subsection 94(14) may apply in some circumstances to suspend a property's characterization as restricted property. For more details, see the commentary on that provision.

Related Provisions: 87(2)(j.95) — Amalgamation — continuing corporation; 94(14) — Restricted property — exception.

"specified charity", in respect of a trust at any particular time, is any person (referred to in this definition as the "charity") that at the particular time is a person described in any of paragraphs (a) to (e) and (g.1) of the definition "total charitable gifts" in subsection 118.1(1) other than

(a) a charity that does not, at the particular time, deal at arm's length with a specified entity in respect of the trust, and

(b) a charity that did not, at any specified prior time, deal at arm's length with a specified entity in respect of the trust,

where

(c) "specified prior time" in respect of a charity means any time, before the particular time, at which

(i) an amount was payable to the charity as a beneficiary under the trust,

(ii) an amount was received by the charity on the disposition of all or part of its interest as a beneficiary under the trust, or

(iii) a benefit was received or enjoyed by the charity from or under the trust, and

(d) "specified entity" in respect of a trust at any time means

(i) an entity that is at that time

(A) a beneficiary under the trust,

(B) a contributor to the trust,

(C) a person related to a contributor to the trust,

(D) a trustee of the trust,

(E) an entity that could reasonably be considered to have influence over the operation of the trust or the enforcement of its terms, or

(F) an entity that could reasonably be considered to have influence over the selection or appointment of an entity referred to in any of clauses (A), (D) and (E), or

(ii) any group of entities at least one of which is described in subparagraph (i).

Technical Notes: The expression "specified charity" is used in the definitions "arm's length transfer" and "resident beneficiary" in new subsection 94(1). An arm's length transfer includes a refund, from a specified charity in respect of a trust to the trust, of a gift previously made by the trust to the charity. A resident beneficiary under a trust does not include a specified charity. For more information, see the commentary on those definitions.

A specified charity in respect of a trust at any particular time means a person (in this commentary referred to as a "charity") that at that time is described in any of paragraphs (a) to (e) and

(g.1) of the definition "total charitable gifts" in subsection 118.1(1). However, a specified charity does not include:

- a charity that does not, at a particular time, deal at arm's length with a "specified entity" in respect of the trust; or
- a charity that did not, at any "specified prior time" in respect of the charity, deal at arm's length with a specified entity in respect of the trust.

For this purpose, a "specified prior time" in respect of a charity is defined in paragraph (c) of the definition "specified charity" as meaning any time, before the particular time, at which

- an amount was payable to the charity as a beneficiary under the trust,
- an amount was received by the charity on the disposition of then charity's interest in the trust, or
- a benefit was received or enjoyed by the charity from or under the trust.

Paragraph (d) of the definition "specified charity" defines a "specified entity" in respect of a trust at any time to mean

- an entity that is at that time beneficially interested in the trust, a contributor to the trust, a person related to a contributor to the trust, a trustee of the trust, an entity that could reasonably be considered to have influence over the operation of the trust or the enforcement of its terms, or an entity that could reasonably be considered to have influence over the selection or appointment of an entity referred to above, or
- any group at least one of the members of which is described immediately above.

Related Provisions: 94(1)"resident beneficiary" — Specified charity is not a resident beneficiary; 104(24) — Whether amount payable to beneficiary.

"specified contributor", to a trust at a particular time in a taxation year of a particular entity, means the particular entity, if

(a) the particular entity is, at the particular time, both a contributor to the trust and a beneficiary under the trust;

(b) at all times, after February 16, 1999 and on or before the particular time, when it is a beneficiary under the trust, the particular entity's interest as a beneficiary under the trust is or would, if the definition "specified fixed interest" applied at those times, have been a specified fixed interest of the particular entity in the trust;

(c) it is reasonable to conclude that, at no time that is after February 16, 1999 and on or before the particular time, has

(i) the particular entity made a contribution of restricted property to the trust, or

(ii) another entity made a contribution of restricted property to the trust when that other entity was not dealing at arm's length with the particular entity; and

(d) where the particular entity is, at any time that is after February 16, 1999 and on or before the particular time, a beneficiary under the trust

(i) either

(A) the particular entity identifies the trust in prescribed form filed with the Minister on or before the particular entity's filing-due date for that taxation year (or a later date that is acceptable to the Minister), or

(B) a prescribed form and a copy of the terms of the trust that apply at the particular time have been filed with the Minister by or on behalf of the trust on or before its filing due date for its taxation year that includes the particular time (or a later date that is acceptable to the Minister), and

(ii) unless the beneficiary is an exempt taxpayer for the taxation year, with respect to each particular contribution made after February 16, 1999 and on or before the particular time by the particular entity to the trust, it is reasonable to conclude that

(A) no consideration was received (other than property received by the particular entity that is the particular entity's interest as a beneficiary under the trust),

(B) none of the reasons (determined by reference to all the circumstances including the terms of the trust, an intention, the laws of a country or the existence of an agreement, a memorandum, a letter of wishes or any other arrangement) for the contribution is the acquisition at any time by any entity (other than the particular entity) of an interest as a beneficiary under the trust, and

(C) the fair market value of the particular contribution is equal to the fair market value, at the time of the particular contribution, of the particular entity's interest as a beneficiary under the trust acquired as a result of the particular contribution.

Technical Notes: The expression "specified contributor" is used in paragraph 94(2)(r) and paragraph (h) of the definition "exempt foreign trust" in new subsection 94(1).

Paragraph (h) of the definition "exempt foreign trust" is intended to ensure that investors in commercial investment trusts are subject to the regime for foreign investment entities in new sections 94.1 to 94.4. Where an investor in such a commercial investment trust sells or has redeemed a beneficial interest in the trust, paragraph 94(2)(r) may apply to ensure that the acquisition of that interest will, after the sale or redemption, not be treated as a contribution to the trust.

For taxation years in respect of which new section 94 applies to a trust, the definition is relevant in applying both paragraph 94(2)(r) and the definition "exempt foreign trust". For earlier taxation years, the definition "specified contributor" will generally only be relevant in determining whether an investor in the trust has ceased to be a contributor to the trust because of paragraph 94(2)(r).

An entity can only qualify as a specified contributor to a trust at any time if, at that time, it is both a beneficiary under, and a contributor to, the trust.

If this condition is met and that time is both before February 17, 1999 and immediately before a sale or redemption of the entity's interest as a beneficiary under the trust, then the entity will be a specified contributor in respect of that interest for the purpose of applying paragraph 94(2)(r) to that sale or redemption. If paragraph 94(2)(r) applies, then in applying section 94 to the entity after the sale or redemption, the entity is treated as not having made any contribution to the trust in respect of its acquisition of that interest.

For a particular entity that is a beneficiary under a trust at a particular time that is after February 16, 1999, the particular entity will be a specified contributor to the trust at the particular time only if

- it is, at the particular time, a contributor to the trust;
- at all times that it is a beneficiary under the trust, its interest as a beneficiary is a "specified fixed interest" (as defined in subsection 94(1)) in the trust;

- it identifies, in a timely fashion, the trust in prescribed form or a copy of the terms of the trust that apply at the particular time have been filed, in a timely fashion, with the Minister by or on behalf of the trust; and
- where the particular entity is not an "exempt taxpayer" (as defined in subsection 94(1)), it is reasonable to conclude, in respect of any contribution made by it to the trust after February 16, 1999 and on before the particular time, that

  (A) no consideration was received (other than property received by the particular entity that is the particular entity's interest as a beneficiary under the trust),

  (B) none of the reasons (determined by reference to all the circumstances including the terms of the trust, an intention, the laws of a country or the existence of an agreement, a memorandum, a letter of wishes or any other arrangement) for the contribution is the acquisition at any time by any entity (other than the particular entity) of an interest as a beneficiary under the trust, and

Where the particular entity qualifies at any time as a specified contributor, the sale or redemption, immediately after that time, of its interest as a beneficiary under the trust may result, as described above, in the application of paragraph 94(2)(r). In addition, if the particular entity is a resident contributor to a non-resident commercial investment trust, that was seeking to meet, at that time, the requirements of paragraph (h) of the definition "exempt foreign trust", the particular entity's contributions to the trust would not alone cause the trust to fail to meet those requirements (ignoring subsection 94(16)).

Note, however, that an entity will not qualify as a specified contributor to a trust if at any time after February 16, 1999, the entity (or another entity with which it does not deal at arm's length) contributes restricted property to the trust. As a result, even if the contribution of restricted property were in consideration for the acquisition of an interest as a beneficiary under the trust, paragraph 94(2)(r) would not apply, to expunge the contribution, upon the sale or redemption of the interest in the trust. Moreover, the entity's status as a resident contributor to the trust may jeopardize the trust's ability to qualify as an exempt foreign trust.

"specified controlled foreign affiliate", of a particular entity at any time, means an entity that would, at that time, be a controlled foreign affiliate of the particular entity if the particular entity were resident in Canada at that time.

Technical Notes: A "specified controlled foreign affiliate" of a particular entity at any time means an entity that would, at that time, be a controlled foreign affiliate of the particular entity if the particular entity were resident in Canada at that time. The definition is used for the purpose of the definition "specified party".

"specified fixed interest", at any time of an entity in a trust, means a capital interest of the entity in the trust if

(a) the interest includes, at that time, a right of the entity as a beneficiary under the trust to receive, at or after that time and directly from the trust, income or capital of the trust;

(b) the interest was acquired, at or before that time, from the trust by any entity, in circumstances that are described by subparagraph (2)(g)(ii);

(c) no right of the entity as a beneficiary under the trust to income or capital of the trust may cease to be a right of the entity (or the entity's legal representatives) otherwise than because of

(i) a gift of that interest made by the entity, or

(ii) a transaction or event under which the entity (or the entity's legal representatives) is entitled to receive an amount equal to the fair market value, immediately before that cessation, of the right; and

(d) the trust was not at any time at or before that time a personal trust.

Technical Notes: The expression "specified fixed interest" is relevant in applying paragraph (b) of the definitions "exempt taxpayer" in subsections 94(1) and 94.1(1), paragraph (h) of the definition "exempt foreign trust" in subsection 94(1), and paragraphs 94(2)(q) and (r). These provisions are intended to apply only to commercial investment trusts.

A specified fixed interest at any time of an entity in a trust means a capital interest (as defined in subsection 108(1)) of the entity in the trust, if

- the interest includes, at that time, a right of the entity as a beneficiary under the trust to receive, at or after that time and directly from the trust, income or capital of the trust;
- the interest was issued by the trust;
- no right of the entity as a beneficiary under the trust to income or capital of the trust may cease, other than because of a specified transaction or event, to be a right of the entity; and
- the trust has never been a personal trust.

The specified transaction or event as a result of which a right of the entity to income or capital of the trust may cease to be the entity's without jeopardizing the interest's status as a specified fixed interest is one under which the entity (or the entity's legal representatives) is entitled to receive an amount equal to the fair market value of the right immediately before the right ceased to be a right of the entity (or the entity's legal representatives). These are intended to include a redemption or sale of the interest at any time, and a payment, in respect of the interest, described in paragraph (h) or (i) of the definition "disposition" in subsection 248(1). Further, the ability of the entity to make a gift of that interest will not cause the interest to lose its status as a specified fixed interest.

Related Provisions: 94(2)(q), (r) [proposed] — Effect of acquiring specified fixed interest.

"specified party", in respect of a particular entity at any time, means an entity that is at that time

(a) an individual who is a spouse or common-law partner of the particular entity;

(b) a specified controlled foreign affiliate of

(i) the particular entity, or

(ii) if the particular entity is an individual, a spouse or common-law partner of the individual;

(c) an entity for which it is reasonable to conclude that the benefit referred to in subparagraph (8)(a)(iii) was conferred

(i) in contemplation of the entity becoming after that time a specified controlled foreign affiliate of an entity referred to in subparagraph (b)(i) or (ii), or

(ii) to avoid or minimize a liability under this Part that arose, or that would otherwise have arisen, because of the application of subsection (3) with respect to the particular entity; or

(d) a corporation in which the particular entity is a shareholder, if

(i) the corporation is on or before that time beneficially interested in a trust, and

(ii) the particular entity is a beneficiary under the trust solely because of the application of paragraph (b) of the definition "beneficiary" in this subsection to the particular entity in respect of the corporation.

Technical Notes: New subsection 94(8) provides a rule for calculating an entity's recovery limit for the purpose of determining under subsection 94(7) the extent of an entity's limitation on liability arising under a provision referred to in new paragraph 94(3)(d). A "specified party" in respect of a particular entity at any time means an entity that is at that time:

- under paragraph (a) of the definition, an individual who is a spouse or common-law partner of the particular entity;
- under paragraph (b) of the definition, a "specified controlled foreign affiliate" (as described in the commentary immediately above) of the particular entity, or of a spouse or common-law partner of the particular entity;
- under paragraph (c) of the definition, an entity for which it is reasonable to conclude that the benefit referred to in subparagraph 94(8)(a)(iii) (i.e., a benefit received or enjoyed under a trust) was conferred either

  (i) in contemplation of the entity becoming after that time a "specified controlled foreign affiliate" of an entity referred to in subparagraph (b)(i) or (ii) of the definition, or

  (ii) to avoid or minimize a liability under this Part that arose, or that would otherwise have arisen, because of the application of subsection (3) with respect to the particular entity; or

- under paragraph (d) of the definition, a corporation in which the particular entity is a shareholder, if the corporation is or was beneficially interested in a trust, and the particular entity is a beneficiary under the trust solely because of the application of paragraph (b) of the definition "beneficiary" in subsection 94(1) to the particular entity in respect of the corporation.

Related Provisions: 87(2)(j.95) — Amalgamation — continuing corporation.

"specified property" means

(a) a share of the capital stock of a corporation;

(b) an interest as a beneficiary under a trust;

(c) an interest in a partnership;

(d) an interest in any other entity;

(e) a right to acquire property described in any of paragraphs (a) to (d); and

(f) any other property deriving its value primarily from property described in any of paragraphs (a) to (e).

Technical Notes: New subsection 94(9) can affect the calculation of the amount of a "contribution" (as defined in new subsection 94(1)) to a trust of "specified property". For this purpose, "specified property" means:

- a share of the capital stock of a corporation, an interest as a beneficiary under a trust, an interest in a partnership, or an interest in any other entity;
- a right to acquire any of the above; or
- any other property deriving its value primarily from property described above.

"specified share" means a share of the capital stock of a corporation other than a share that is prescribed for the purpose of paragraph 110(1)(d).

Technical Notes: A specified share means a share of the capital stock of a corporation other than a share that is prescribed for the purpose of paragraph 110(1)(d). This expression is relevant to the definition "restricted property" in subsection 94(1). For more information, see the commentary on the definition "restricted property".

"specified time", in respect of a trust for a taxation year of the trust, means

(a) if the trust exists at the end of the taxation year, the time that is the end of that taxation year; and

(b) in any other case, the time in that taxation year that is immediately before the time at which the trust ceases to exist.

Technical Notes: A specified time, in respect of a trust for a taxation year of the trust, means

- if the trust exists at the end of the taxation year, the time that is the end of that taxation year; and
- if the trust ceases to exist after October 30, 2003, the time, in that taxation year that is immediately before the time at which the trust ceases to exist.

This expression is relevant in determining whether paragraph 94(3)(a) applies to deem the trust to be resident in Canada, for the taxation year, for a number of purposes. It also applies in respect of subsections 94(7) and (10). For more detail, see the commentary on those provisions.

"testamentary beneficiary", at any time in respect of a trust, means an entity that is a beneficiary under the trust solely because of a right of the beneficiary to receive or otherwise obtain the use of any of the trust's income or capital only on or after the death after that time of an individual who, at that time, is alive and

(a) is a contributor to the trust;

(b) is related to a contributor to the trust; or

(c) would have been related to a contributor to the trust if every individual who was alive before that time were alive at that time.

Technical Notes: The expression "testamentary beneficiary" is used in the definition "resident beneficiary" in new subsection 94(1). A resident beneficiary under a trust does not include a testamentary beneficiary.

A testamentary beneficiary in respect of a trust at a particular time means an entity that is a beneficiary under the trust solely because of a right of the beneficiary to receive or otherwise obtain the use of any of the trust's income or capital, only on or after the death after that time of a specified individual. For this purpose a specified individual is an individual who is, at that time, alive and a contributor to the trust, an individual related to a contributor to the trust or an individual who would have been related to a contributor to the trust if every individual who was alive before that time were alive at that time.

"trust" includes, for greater certainty, a testamentary trust.

Technical Notes: A definition "trust" is provided for the purpose of applying section 94. The definition clarifies that a reference to a trust in that section includes an estate.

(A) the particular entity is, at that time, an entity that is a controlled foreign affiliate of the specified entity, or would at that time be a controlled foreign affiliate of the specified entity if the specified entity were at that time resident in Canada, or

(B) it is reasonable to conclude that the transfer or loan was made in contemplation of the particular entity becoming after that time a particular entity described in clause (A);

(m) a particular entity is deemed to have transferred, at a particular time, a particular property or particular part of it, as the case may be, to a second entity if

(ii) the particular property (or property for which the particular property is substituted property) was acquired, before the particular time, from the second entity by any entity, in circumstances that are described by any of subparagraphs (g)(i) to (vi) (or would be so described if it applied at the time of that acquisition) and at the particular time,

(A) the terms or conditions of the particular property change,

(B) the second entity redeems, acquires or cancels the particular property or the particular part of it,

(C) where the particular property is a debt owing by the second entity, the debt or the particular part of it is settled or cancelled, or

(D) where the particular property is a right to acquire or to be loaned property, the particular entity exercises the right;

(o) a contribution made at any time by a particular partnership to a trust is deemed to have been made at that time jointly by the particular partnership and by each entity that is at that time a member of the particular partnership (other than a member of the particular partnership where the liability of the member as a member of the particular partnership is limited by operation of any law governing the partnership arrangement);

(p) subject to paragraph (o) and subsection (9), the amount of a contribution to a trust at the time it was made is deemed to be the fair market value, at that time, of the property that was the subject of the contribution;

(q) an entity that at any time acquires a specified fixed interest in a trust (or a right, issued by the trust, to acquire a specified fixed interest in the trust) from another entity (other than the trust that issued the specified fixed interest) is deemed to have made at that time a contribution to the trust and the amount of the contribution is deemed to be equal to the fair market value at that time of the specified fixed interest or right, as the case may be;

(r) a particular entity that has acquired a specified fixed interest in a trust as a consequence of making a contribution to the trust (or that has made a contribution to the trust as a consequence of having acquired a specified fixed interest in the trust or a right described in paragraph (q)) is, for the purpose of applying this section at any time after the time that the particular entity transfers the specified fixed interest or the right, as the case may be, to another entity (which transfer is referred to in this paragraph as the "sale"), deemed not to have made the contribution in respect of the specified fixed interest, or right, that is the subject of the sale where

(i) immediately before the sale, the particular entity would be a specified contributor to the trust if

(A) the definition "specified contributor" were read without reference to subparagraph (d)(i) of that definition,

(B) in applying paragraph (b) of that definition, a specified fixed interest included the right, and

(C) that definition applied immediately before the sale,

(ii) in exchange for the sale, the other entity transfers or loans, or becomes obligated to transfer or loan, property (which property is referred to in subparagraph (iii) as the "consideration") to the particular entity, and

(iii) it is reasonable to conclude

(A) having regard only to the sale and the consideration that the particular entity would have been willing to make the sale if the particular entity dealt at arm's length with the other entity, and

(s) a transfer to a trust by a particular entity is deemed not to be, at a particular time, a contribution to the trust if

(i) the particular entity has transferred, at or before the particular time and in the ordinary course of business of the particular entity, property to the trust,

(ii) the transfer is not an arm's length transfer, but would be an arm's length transfer if the definition "arm's length transfer" were read without reference to paragraph (a), and subparagraphs (b)(i) to (iii) and (v) to (viii), of that definition,

(iii) it is reasonable to conclude that the particular entity was the only entity that acquired, in respect of the transfer, an interest as a beneficiary under the trust,

(iv) the particular entity was required, under the securities law of a country or of a political subdivision of the country in respect of the issuance by the trust of interests as a beneficiary under the trust, to acquire an interest because of the particular entity's status at the time of the transfer as a manager or promoter of the trust,

(v) at the particular time the trust is not an exempt foreign trust, but would be at that time an exempt foreign trust if it had not made an election under paragraph (h) of the definition "exempt foreign trust" [should be paragraph (g) of the definition "eligible non-resident trust" — ed.], and

(vi) the particular time is before the earliest of

(A) the first time at which the trust becomes an exempt foreign trust,

(B) the first time at which the particular entity ceases to be a manager or promoter of the trust, and

(C) the time that is 24 months after the first time at which the total fair market value of consideration received by the trust in exchange for interests as a beneficiary (other than the particular entity's interest referred to in subparagraph (iii)) under the trust is greater than $500,000;

(t) a transfer, by a Canadian corporation of particular property, that is at a particular time a contribution by the Canadian corporation to a trust, is deemed not to be, after the particular time, a contribution by the Canadian corporation to the trust if

(i) either

(A) the trust acquired the particular property before the particular time from the Canadian corporation in circumstances described in subparagraph (2)(g)(i) or (v), or

(B) another entity acquired property before the particular time from the Canadian corporation in circumstances described in subparagraph (2)(g)(i) or (v) and because of that acquisition the Canadian corporation was deemed by paragraph (2)(c) to have transferred the particular property to the trust,

(ii) as a result of a transfer at the particular time by any entity (referred to in this paragraph as the "seller") to another entity (referred to in this paragraph as the "purchaser") the trust ceases to hold property that is shares of the capital stock of, or debt issued by, the Canadian corporation or that is property the fair market value of which is derived in whole or in part, directly or indirectly, from shares of the capital stock of, or debt issued by, the Canadian corporation,

(iii) the purchaser deals at arm's length immediately before the particular time with the Canadian corporation, the trust and the seller,

(iv) in exchange for the sale, the purchaser transfers or becomes obligated to transfer property (which property is referred to in this paragraph as the "consideration"), to the seller, and

(v) it is reasonable to conclude

(A) having regard only to the sale and the consideration that the seller would have been willing to make the sale if the seller dealt at arm's length with the purchaser,

(B) that the terms and conditions made or imposed in respect of the exchange are terms and conditions that would have been acceptable to the seller if the seller dealt at arm's length with the purchaser, and

(C) that the value of the consideration is not, at or after the particular time, determined in whole or in part, directly or indirectly, by reference to shares of the capital stock of, or debt issued by, the Canadian corporation; and

(u) a transfer, before October 11, 2002, to a personal trust by an individual (other than a trust) of particular property is deemed not to be a contribution of the particular property by the individual to the trust if

(i) the individual identifies the trust in prescribed form filed with the Minister on or before the individual's filing-due date for the individual's 2003 taxation year (or a later date that is acceptable to the Minister), and

(ii) the Minister is satisfied that

(A) the individual (and any entity not dealing at any time at arm's length with the individual) has never loaned or transferred, directly or indirectly, restricted property to the trust,

(B) in respect of each contribution (determined without reference to this paragraph) made before October 11, 2002 by the individual to the trust, none of the reasons (determined by reference to all the circumstances including the terms of the trust, an intention, the laws of a country or the existence of an agreement, a memorandum, a letter of wishes or any other arrangement) for the contribution was to permit or facilitate, directly or indirectly, the conferral at any time of a benefit (for greater certainty, including an interest as a beneficiary under the trust) on

(I) the individual,

(II) a descendant of the individual, or

(III) any entity with whom the individual or descendant does not, at any time, deal at arm's length, and

(C) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of a contribution (determined without reference to this paragraph) made before October 11, 2002 by the individual to the trust does not exceed the greater of

(I) 1% of the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of a contribution (determined without reference to this paragraph) made to the trust before October 11, 2002, and

(II) $500.

Technical Notes: New subsection 94(2) sets out a number of rules for use in applying section 94. These rules are primarily relevant for the purposes of determining whether a transaction constitutes a "contribution" (as defined in subsection 94(1)) of property to a trust. These rules are also relevant for the purposes of subsections 94(7) to (9) and the amended reporting rules in subsections 162(10.1) and 163(2.4) and section 233.2.

Paragraphs 94(2)(a) to (m) include rules that deem certain loans or transfers, the granting of options and the provision of services to be transfers of property to an entity. A deemed transfer will be considered to be a contribution to a trust if the transfer falls within the criteria of the definition "contribution" in subsection 94(1). In this regard, it should be noted that a transfer or loan, unless it is deemed to be a contribution under any of paragraphs 94(2)(n) to (q), will not be considered a contribution if it is an "arm's length transfer" (as defined in new subsection 94(1)). In addition, paragraphs 94(2)(r) to (u), may apply to deem certain transfers not to be contributions.

The rules in subsection 94(2) generally apply to taxation years of trusts that begin after 2002, but in some cases relief is provided with regard to transactions or events that occur before June 23, 2000 or October 11, 2002. In addition, trusts created in 2001 and trusts created in 2002 may elect in writing (by filing the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the trust's filing-due date for the trust's taxation year in which the amending legislation is assented to) to have new section 94 apply to its taxation years that begin in 2001 and 2002, as the case may be.

Paragraph 94(2)(a) generally applies to indirect loans or transfers of property to a trust through transfers to other entities. Paragraph (a) deems a transfer of property (other than an "arm's length transfer", as defined in new subsection 94(1) or a transfer to which paragraph 94(2)(c) applies) to be a direct transfer to a trust if the property is transferred from one entity to another and, as a result of the transfer, the fair market value of the property of the trust increases or the liabilities of the trust decrease. Where paragraph (a) applies, paragraph 94(2)(b) deems the fair market value of property deemed transferred under paragraph 94(2)(a) to be the total of all amounts each of which is the absolute value of an increase in the fair market value of the trust property or a decrease in the liabilities of the trust because of the transfer.

Paragraph 94(2)(c) also applies to indirect loans or transfers of property to a trust. Paragraph (c) deems a transfer or loan of property (other than an "arm's length transfer") from an entity to another entity to be a direct transfer to a trust where the trust holds property the fair market value of which is derived from property held by the other entity. Paragraph 94(2)(d) deems the fair market value of property deemed transferred under paragraph 94(2)(c) to be the fair market value of the property actually transferred.

Paragraph 94(2)(e) deems a particular entity that provides a guarantee or other financial assistance to another entity to have transferred property to that other entity. Any property given to the particular entity by the other entity in exchange for the guarantee or other financial assistance is deemed to have been transferred to the particular entity in exchange for the property deemed by subparagraph (e)(i) to have been transferred. Under subparagraph 94(2)(h), the fair market value of the property deemed by subparagraph (e)(i) to have been transferred is deemed to be the fair market value of the assistance.

Paragraph 94(2)(f) applies where any service (other than an exempt service, as defined in subsection 94(1)) is rendered after June 22, 2000 by an entity to, for or on behalf of another entity. In these circumstances, the entity rendering the service is deemed to have transferred property to the other entity. Any property given to the particular entity by the other entity in exchange for the service is deemed to have been transferred to the particular entity in exchange for the property deemed by subparagraph (f)(i) to have been transferred. For more information on the definition "exempt service", see the commentary on that definition.

Under paragraph 94(2)(h), the fair market value of the property deemed under subparagraph 94(2)(f)(i) to have been transferred is deemed to be equal to the fair market value of the services rendered.

For greater certainty, paragraph 94(2)(g) provides that a corporation is considered to transfer shares that it issues. Similar rules, also contained in paragraph 94(2)(g), apply to interests in a trust issued by the trust, interests in a partnership issued by the partnership or interest in an other entity issued by the entity, as well as to debt issued to an entity by another entity and a right (granted after June 22, 2000 by the entity from which the right was acquired) to acquire or to be loaned property.

As noted above, paragraph 94(2)(h) is relevant to determining the fair market value of property deemed under subparagraphs 94(2)(e)(i) and (f)(i) to have been transferred.

Paragraph 94(2)(i) deems an entity to have become obligated at a particular time to transfer property to another entity where the entity becomes obligated to do an act (e.g., the rendering of a service) that would constitute the transfer of a property to another entity if the act were to occur. This rule is generally relevant for the purposes of paragraph (c) of the definition "contribution" in subsection 94(1).

Paragraph 94(2)(j) applies, for the purpose of applying at any time the definition "non-resident time" in subsection (1), if a trust acquires property of an individual as a consequence of the death of the individual. In these circumstances, paragraph 94(2)(j) deems the individual to have transferred the property to the trust immediately before the individual's death.

Paragraph 94(2)(k) applies where a particular entity loans or transfers property to another entity at the direction of or with the acquiescence of a second entity (the "specified entity"). In these circumstances, if it reasonable to conclude that one of the reasons for the transfer is to avoid or minimize a liability of any entity under Part I of the Act that arose, or that would otherwise have arisen, because of the application of subsection (3), the transfer is deemed to be a transfer made jointly by the particular entity and the specified entity.

Paragraph 94(2)(l) also applies where a particular entity loans or transfers property to another entity at the direction of or with the acquiescence of a specified entity. In these circumstances, the transfer is deemed to be a transfer made jointly by the particular entity and the specified entity if

- the transfer is made at a time that is not, or would not be, if the transfer or loan were a contribution of the specified entity, a "non-resident time" (as defined in new subsection 94(1)) of the specified entity, and
- either
  - the particular entity is at the time of the transfer a controlled foreign affiliate of the specified entity (or would be a controlled foreign affiliate of the specified entity if the specified entity were resident in Canada), or
  - it is reasonable to conclude that the transfer was made in contemplation of the particular entity becoming after the time of the transfer a controlled foreign affiliate of the specified entity (or a controlled foreign affiliate of the specified entity if the specified entity were resident in Canada).

The expression,"controlled foreign affiliate" is defined in subsection 248(1) as having the meaning given in subsection 95(1).

Paragraph 94(2)(m) deems a particular entity to have transferred, at a particular time, a particular property or particular part of it, as the case may be, to a second entity if

- the particular property is a share of the capital stock of a corporation held at the particular time by the particular entity, and as consideration for the disposition at or before the particular time of the share, the particular entity received at the particular time (or became entitled at the particular time to receive) from the corporation a share of the capital stock of the corporation, or
- the particular property (or property for which the particular property is substituted property) was acquired, before the particular time, from the second entity by any entity, in circumstances that are described by any of subparagraphs 94(g)(i) to (vi) (generally, the issuance by the second entity of a financial instrument) and at the particular time,
  - the terms or conditions of the particular property change,
  - the second entity redeems, acquires or cancels the particular property or the particular part of it,
  - where the particular property is a debt owing by the second entity, the debt or the particular part of it is settled or cancelled, or
  - where the particular property is a right to acquire or to be loaned property, the particular entity exercises the right.

Deemed contributions

Paragraph 94(2)(n) applies where a particular trust makes a contribution to another trust. If this is the case, the contribution is deemed to have been made jointly by the particular trust and each other entity that is a contributor to the particular trust.

Paragraph 94(2)(o) applies where a partnership makes a contribution to a trust. Where this is the case, the contribution is deemed to have been made jointly by the partnership and by each entity that is a partnership member (other than a limited partner) at the time of the contribution. However, if a partnership has contributed to a trust, a limited partner of the partnership may also be considered to have made a contribution to the trust in respect of a transfer or loan made by the limited partner or another entity if any of the rules in subsection 94(2) so provide.

Paragraph 94(2)(p) provides, subject to paragraph 94(2)(o) and subsection 94(9), that the amount of a contribution to a trust at the time it was made is deemed to be the fair market value at that time of the property that was the subject of the contribution. The rule is useful for the purposes of new paragraph 94(2)(u), subsections 94(7) and (8), as well as the reporting penalty provisions in amended subsections 162(10.1) and 163(2.4). The rule is relevant because a contribution is defined by reference to a loan or transfer, rather than by reference to the property that was the subject of the transfer or loan.

Paragraphs 94(2)(q) and (r) apply to dealings in a "specified fixed interest" (as defined in new subsection 94(1)) in a trust and in a right, issued by the trust, to acquire such an interest. The rules for specified fixed interests apply in respect of commercial investment trusts. For more detail, see the commentary on the definitions "specified fixed interest" and "specified contributor" in subsection 94(1) and on paragraph (h) of the definition "exempt foreign trust" in subsection 94(1).

Paragraph 94(2)(q) deems an entity, that at any time acquires a specified fixed interest in a trust (or a right, issued by the trust, to acquire such an interest) from another entity (other than the trust), to have made a contribution to the trust at that time. The amount of the contribution is deemed to be the fair market value at that time of the specified fixed interest.

Transfers deemed not to be contributions

Paragraph 94(2)(r) generally applies where a particular entity has made a contribution (e.g., because of paragraph 94(2)(q)) to a trust because of acquiring a specified fixed interest in the trust or a right to acquire such an interest, or has acquired a specified fixed interest in a trust as a consequence of making a contribution to the trust, and at a later time the interest or right, as the case may be, is transferred, for arm's length consideration, to another entity (i.e., upon a sale of the interest or right, of if the other entity is the trust that issued the interest or right, upon a redemption of the interest or right). In these circumstances, the particular entity is deemed, for the purpose of applying section 94 at any time after the later time, not to have made the contribution in respect of the specified fixed interest, or right, that is the subject of the sale if immediately before the later time (i.e., the time of the sale or redemption) the particular entity is specified contributor to the trust.

Paragraph 94(2)(s), in very general terms, provides that a transfer of property to a trust by a particular entity that is a manager or promoter of the trust, in exchange for an interest as a beneficiary under the trust, will not be considered a contribution of the particular entity to the trust while the beneficial interest is acquired and held by the particular entity because of a requirement imposed under securities laws. Paragraph 94(2)(s) will be relevant in the relatively rare circumstance that a commercial investment trust cannot rely on the exemption for exempt foreign trusts in order to avoid the application of subsection 94(3). Paragraph 94(2)(s) will apply in determining under that subsection whether the trust has a resident contributor or connected contributor (i.e., and hence, a resident beneficiary).

More specifically, under paragraph 94(2)(s), a transfer to a trust by a particular entity is deemed not to be, at a particular time, a contribution to the trust if

- the particular entity has transferred, at or before the particular time and in the ordinary course of business of the particular entity, property to the trust,
- the transfer is not an arm's length transfer, but would be an arm's length transfer if the definition "arm's length transfer" in subsection 94(1) were read without reference to paragraph (a), and subparagraphs (b)(i) to (iii) and (v) to (viii), of that definition,
- it is reasonable to conclude that the particular entity was the only entity that acquired, in respect of the transfer, an interest as a beneficiary under the trust,
- the particular entity was required, under the securities law of a country or of a political subdivision of the country in respect of the issuance of beneficial interests by the trust, to acquire the interest because of the particular entity's status at the time of the transfer as a manager or promoter (as defined in subsection 94(1)) of the trust,
- at the particular time the trust is not an exempt foreign trust, but would be at that time an exempt foreign trust if it had not made an election under paragraph (h) of the definition "exempt foreign trust", and
- the particular time is before the earliest of
  - — the first time at which the trust becomes an exempt foreign trust,
  - — the first time at which the particular entity ceases to be a manager or promoter of the trust, and
  - — the time that is 24 months after the first time at which the total fair market value of consideration received by the trust in exchange for beneficial interests (other than the particular entity's interest referred to in subparagraph 94(2)(s)(iii)) in the trust is greater than $500,000.

Paragraph 94(2)(t) generally expunges a contribution of shares or indebtedness of a Canadian corporation from the corporation to a trust if the corporation issued (in circumstances described in subparagraph 94(2)(g)(i) or (v)) the shares or the debt to the trust (or to another entity in circumstances that resulted in the Canadian corporation being deemed by paragraph 94(2)(c) to have transferred particular property to the trust) and the trust or an other entity later sells the shares or indebtedness in circumstances in which the parties to the sale deal with each other on an arm's length basis.

However, the application of 94(2)(t) will not effect the application of 94(2)(c) or (g) in respect of the original transfer by the corporation to the trust or the other entity: such transfers will continue to be treated as transfers under section 94. In addition, the application of 94(2)(t) will not expunge the status as a contribution to the trust of a transfer made by an entity and involving the corporation (e.g., an entity that transferred property to the corporation, and hence the trust, because of the application of paragraph 94(2)(c) and (m)).

More specifically, a transfer, by a Canadian corporation of particular property (i.e., a share or debt), that is at a particular time a contribution by the Canadian corporation to a trust, is deemed not to be, after the particular time, a contribution by the Canadian corporation to the trust if

- either the trust acquired the particular property before the particular time from the Canadian corporation in circumstances described in subparagraph 94(2)(g)(i) or (v), or another entity acquired property before the particular time from the Canadian corporation in circumstances described in subparagraph 94(2)(g)(i) or (v) and because of that acquisition the Canadian corporation was deemed by paragraph 94(2)(c) to have transferred the particular property to the trust;
- as a result of a transfer (i.e., a sale of, or a redemption by the Canadian corporation of, the issued shares or debt) at the particular time by any entity (referred to in this paragraph as the "seller") to another entity (referred to in this paragraph as the "purchaser") the trust ceases to hold property that is shares of the capital stock of, or debt issued by, the Canadian corporation or the trust ceases to hold property that is property the fair market value of which is derived in whole or in part, directly or indirectly, from shares of the capital stock of, or debt issued by, the Canadian corporation;

- the purchaser deals at arm's length immediately before the particular time with the Canadian corporation, the trust and the seller;
- in exchange for the sale, the purchaser transfers or becomes obligated to transfer property (which property is referred to in this paragraph as the "consideration"), to the seller; and
- it is reasonable to conclude
  - — having regard only to the sale and the consideration that the seller would have been willing to make the sale if the seller dealt at arm's length with the purchaser,

Paragraph 94(2)(u) applies to a transfer, before October 11, 2002, to a personal trust by an individual (other than a trust) of particular property. Where the conditions in subparagraphs 94(2)(u)(i) and (ii) are met, the transfer of the particular property is deemed not to be a contribution of the particular property by the individual to the trust. Paragraph 94(2)(u) is intended to provide relief to individuals that have transferred a relatively small amount of property to a trust (e.g., the initial settlement of a coin on the trust) where the individual can reasonably be considered not to have been involved with the use of the trust as part of what is commonly referred to as an estate freeze (i.e., see the condition in clause 94(2)(u)(ii)(A) that the trust never have acquired from the individual restricted property).

The conditions in subparagraphs 94(2)(u)(i) and (ii) are that

- the individual identifies the trust in prescribed form filed with the Minister on or before the individual's filing-due date for the individual's 2003 taxation year (or a later date that is acceptable to the Minister), and
- the Minister is satisfied that

  (A) the individual (and any entity not dealing at any time at arm's length with the individual) has never loaned or transferred, directly or indirectly, restricted property to the trust,

  (B) in respect of each contribution (determined without reference to paragraph 94(2)(u)) made before October 11, 2002 by the individual to the trust, none of the reasons (determined by reference to all the circumstances including the terms of the trust, an intention, the laws of a country or the existence of an agreement, a memorandum, a letter of wishes or any other arrangement) for the contribution was to permit or facilitate, directly or indirectly, the conferral at any time of a benefit (for greater certainty, including an interest as a beneficiary under the trust) on

  (I) the individual,

  (II) a descendant of the individual, or

  (III) any entity with whom the individual or descendant does not, at any time, deal at arm's length, and

  (C) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of a contribution (determined without reference to paragraph 94(2)(u)) made before October 11, 2002by the individual to the trust does not exceed the greater of

  (I) 1% of the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of a contribution (determined without reference to paragraph 94(2)(u)) made to the trust before October 11, 2002, and

  (II) $500.

The examples below illustrate the operation of subsection 94(2) and the definition "contribution" in subsection 94(1).

Example 1

Donald is a long-term resident of Canada. In 2003, Donald pays higher than fair market value consideration for a property acquired from a corporation. A non-resident trust holds shares in the corporation. The fair market value of those shares increases because of the transaction.

Results

1. Under paragraph 94(2)(a), Donald is considered to have transferred property to the trust in these circumstances. The exception for arm's length transfers does not apply.

2. As a consequence, Donald is considered to have made a contribution to the trust, which results in Donald being a contributor and a resident contributor to the trust.

Example 2

1. Lucie, a long-term resident of Canada, transfers property to Canco on condition that Canco direct Canco's wholly-owned foreign subsidiary (Foreignco-1) to transfer properties to another corporation (Foreignco-2) for consideration that is less than fair market value.

2. Shares of the capital stock of Foreignco-2 are held by a non-resident trust.

3. The fair market value of the Foreignco-2 shares increases as a result of the increase in the fair market value of the property owned by Foreignco-2.

Results

1. The transfers to Canco and to Foreignco-2 are part of the same series of transactions.

2. Because of paragraph 94(2)(a), the transfer to Foreignco-2 is considered to be a transfer by Foreignco-1 to the trust. Because of paragraph 94(2)(l), the transfer by Foreignco-1 to the trust is considered to be jointly made by Foreignco-1 and Canco. (This would also be the result under paragraph 94(2)(k), if it was intended to avoid or minimize a liability under Part I.) The exception for arm's length transfers does not apply.

3. Canco is considered to have made a contribution to the non-resident trust because of paragraph (a) of the definition "contribution" in new subsection 94(1). Lucie is considered to have made a contribution to the trust under paragraph (b) of that definition. Both Lucie and Canco are therefore contributors and resident contributors to the trust.

4. Foreignco-1 is also a "contributor" to the trust, but this does not have any practical consequences because Foreignco-1 is non-resident.

Related Provisions: 51(1)(c) — Exchange of convertible property for purposes of 94(2)(m); 87(2)(j.95) — Amalgamation — continuing corporation; 94(1)"arm's length transfer"(b) — Certain transfers under 94(2)(g) excluded; 94(9) — Determination of contribution amount for 94(2)(u)(ii)(C).

(3) Liabilities of non-resident trusts and others — Where at a specified time in a particular taxation year of a trust (other than a trust that is, at that time, an exempt foreign trust) the trust is non-resident (determined without reference to this subsection) and, at that time, there is a resident contributor to the trust or a resident beneficiary under the trust,

(a) the trust is deemed to be resident in Canada throughout the particular taxation year for the purposes of

(i) section 2,

(ii) computing the trust's income for the particular taxation year,

(iii) applying subsections 104(13.1) to (29) and 107(2.1) and (5), in respect of the trust and a beneficiary under the trust,

(iv) applying clause 53(2)(h)(i.1)(B), the definition "non-resident entity" in subsection 94.1(1), subsection 107(2.002) and section 115, in respect of a beneficiary under the trust,

(v) determining an obligation of the trust to file a return under section 233.3 or 233.4,

(vi) determining the rights and obligations of the trust under Divisions I and J,

(vii) determining the liability of the trust for tax under Part I, and under Part XIII on amounts paid or credited (in this paragraph having the meaning assigned by Part XIII) to the trust, and

(viii) determining the liability of a non-resident person for tax under Part XIII on amounts paid or credited by the trust to the non-resident person (other than amounts referred to in paragraph 104(7.01)(b) in respect of the trust for the taxation year that are paid or credited to the non-resident person);

(b) in applying subsections 20(11) and (12) and section 126,

(i) in determining the non-business income tax (as defined by subsection 126(7)) paid by the trust for the particular taxation year to the government of a country other than Canada no amount shall be included to the extent that it can reasonably be regarded as attributable to income from a source in Canada, and

(ii) if the trust elects, by notifying the Minister in writing in its return of income for the particular taxation year, to have this paragraph apply,

(A) the trust's income for the particular taxation year (other than the portion of the income that is from sources inside Canada or that is from a source, outside Canada, that is a business carried on by the trust outside Canada) is deemed

(I) to be income of the trust from sources (other than a business carried on by the trust) in the particular country (other than Canada) in which the trust is resident (determined without reference to this subsection), and

(II) not to be from any other source, and

(B) in determining the income or profits tax paid by the trust for the particular taxation year to the government of the particular country there shall be included only the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of an income or profits tax that was paid by the trust for the particular taxation year to the government of a country (other than Canada) and that can reasonably be regarded as a tax paid on the trust's income for the particular taxation year (other than the portion of the income that is from sources inside Canada or that is from a source, outside Canada, that is a business carried on by the trust outside Canada);

(c) if the trust was non-resident throughout its taxation year (referred to in this paragraph as the "preceding year") immediately preceding the particular taxation year for the purpose of Part I or of computing its income for the preceding year, the trust is deemed to have

(i) immediately before the end of the preceding taxation year, disposed of each property (other than property described in any of subparagraphs 128.1(1)(b)(i) to (iv)) held by the trust at that time for proceeds of disposition equal to its fair market value at that time, and

(ii) at the beginning of the particular taxation year, acquired each of those properties so disposed of at a cost equal to its proceeds of disposition;

(d) each entity that at any time in the particular taxation year is a resident contributor to the trust or a resident beneficiary under the trust

(i) has jointly and severally, or solidarily, with the trust and with each other such entity, the rights and obligations of the trust in respect of the particular taxation year under Divisions I and J, and

(ii) is subject to Part XV in respect of those rights and obligations; and

(e) each entity that at any time in the particular taxation year is a beneficiary under the trust and was a person from whom an amount would be recoverable at the end of 2002 under subsection (2) (as it read in its application to taxation years that began before 2003) in respect of the trust if the entity had received before 2003 amounts described under paragraphs (2)(a) or (b) in respect of the trust (as those paragraphs read in their application to taxation years that began before 2003)

(i) has, to the extent of the entity's recovery limit for the year, jointly and severally, or solidarily, with the trust and with each other such entity, the rights and obligations of the trust in respect of the taxation years, of the trust, that began before 2003 under Divisions I and J, and

(ii) is, to the extent of the entity's recovery limit for the year, subject to Part XV in respect of those rights and obligations.

Technical Notes: New subsection 94(3) applies to a non-resident trust (other than an "exempt foreign trust", as defined in subsection 94(1)) for a taxation year where, at a "specified time" in respect of the trust for the taxation year (generally, the end of the taxation year), there is a "resident contributor" to the trust or a "resident beneficiary" under the trust. All of these expressions are explained in detail in the commentary on new subsection 94(1).

Where subsection 94(3) applies to a non-resident trust for a taxation year, the trust is deemed to be resident in Canada throughout the year for the purposes specified in paragraph 94(3)(a). Except to the extent otherwise provided by subsection 94(4), a trust is deemed to be resident in Canada for a taxation year under subsection 94(3):

- for the purposes of applying sections 2, computing the trust's income for the year and computing the trust's liability for tax under Part I — with the result that the trust is subject to tax under that Part on its world-wide income for the year (including, for example, its income determined as a result of deemed dispositions under subsections 104(4) to (5.2) or 128.1(4));

- for the purpose of applying clause 53(2)(h)(i.1)(B) — with the result that the adjusted cost base to a beneficiary of the beneficiary's interest in a trust to which this clause applies is computed in the same way as for interests in trusts resident in Canada;
- for the purpose of applying the definition "non-resident entity" in subsection 94.1(1) — with the result that a beneficiary's interest in the trust is not treated as an interest of a beneficiary in a foreign investment entity for the purposes of new sections 94.1 and 94.2;
- for the purposes of applying subsections 104(13.1) to (29), 107(2.1), (2.002) and (5) and section 115 — with the result that the tax treatment of beneficiaries under the trust generally accords with the tax treatment available to beneficiaries under trusts that are resident in Canada;
- for the purposes of determining the obligation of the trust to file a return under sections 233.3 and 233.4 — with the result that the trust is required to file information returns under sections 233.3 (information return on foreign property holdings the total cost of which exceeds $100,000) and 233.4 (information return on foreign affiliates);
- for the purpose of determining the liability of the trust for tax under Part XIII — with the result that the trust is exempt from Part XIII tax on amounts paid or credited to it;
- for the purpose of determining the liability of a non-resident person for tax under Part XIII on amounts paid or credited by the trust to the non-resident person (other than amounts referred to in paragraph 104(7.01)(b) in respect of the trust for the taxation year that are paid or credited to the non-resident person); and
- for the purpose of determining the rights and obligations of the trust under sections 150 to 180 — with the result that various administrative provisions in the Act apply in the same way as to other trusts resident in Canada. (These provisions include those with regard to the filing of returns, assessments, tax payments, arrears interest, refund interest, instalment interest, penalties, refunds and appeals.)

A trust to which subsection 94(3) applies is deemed to be resident in Canada throughout the year for the above purposes, including the computation of its income and its taxable income and section 2 of the Act. Section 2 imposes on every person resident in Canada at any time in a taxation year an obligation to pay an income tax on that person's taxable income for the year.

Under paragraph 1 of the resident article in Canada's income tax treaties, a reference in such a treaty to a "resident of a Contracting State" means any person who, under the law of that State, is liable to taxation in that State by reason of the person's domicile, residence, place of management or any other criterion of a similar nature. A person, in this context, would generally include a trust because of the definition "person" in Canada's income tax treaties. Because a trust to which subsection 94(3) applies is deemed to be resident of Canada and is liable to tax in Canada on its worldwide income, it will be considered a resident of Canada under paragraph 1 of the resident article in Canada's income tax treaties, whether it is also considered to be resident, under the applicable treaty, in another country or not.

A trust that is also resident of the other contracting state under a particular treaty would be a dual resident under the treaty. In the event of dual residency under an income tax treaty, the tie-breaker rules in the resident article applicable to individuals would not apply. The Canada Customs and Revenue Agency has expressed the view that in this context, the term "individual" is to be interpreted to mean natural person and not a trust. The Agency has indicated that this interpretation would generally prevail across most if not all of Canada's income tax treaties if the definition "person" in the particular treaty under consideration makes reference to both an "individual" and a "trust". Even if a trust were considered an individual for the purpose of an income tax treaty, it is clear from the context of the tie-breaker rule applicable to individuals that it is intended to apply only to natural persons. This is because expressions such as "personal home", "centre of vital interest" and "habitual abode" used in the tie-breaker rules have meaning only in reference to natural persons and would not be of use in clarifying the residence of a trust for the purpose of a treaty.

In general, therefore, under the income tax treaty the competent authorities of each contracting state would have to enter into an agreement to determine in which state the trust would be resident for the purpose of the particular treaty. In the absence of such an agreement Canada would exercise its first right to tax. Canada would grant foreign tax credits for the other State's income taxes paid by the trust.

In this regard, paragraph 94(3)(b) applies for the purposes of applying subsections 20(11) and (12) and section 126 in respect of the trust. Paragraph 94(3)(b) allows a trust to elect for the special rules in that paragraph to apply in determining the trust's eligibility for a foreign tax credit. If the trust elects for a taxation year,

- the trust's income for the taxation year (other than the portion of the income that is from sources inside Canada or that is from a source, outside Canada, that is a business carried on by the trust outside Canada) is deemed, for the purposes of subsections 20(11) and (12) and section 126,
  - to be income of the trust from sources (other than a business carried on by the trust) in a particular country (other than Canada) in which the trust is resident (determined without reference to this subsection), and
  - not to be from any other source; and
- in determining the income or profits tax paid by the trust for the taxation year to the government of the particular country the trust can pool the total of all amounts each of which is the amount of an income or profits tax that was paid by the trust for the particular taxation year to the government of a country (other than Canada) and that can reasonably be regarded as a tax paid on the trust's income for the taxation year (other than the portion of the income that is from sources inside Canada or that is from a source, outside Canada, that is a business carried on by the trust outside Canada).

Paragraph 94(3)(b) also provides that in determining the non-business income tax (as defined by subsection 126(7)) paid by the trust for a taxation year to the government of a country other than Canada no amount shall be included to the extent that it can reasonably be regarded as attributable to income from a source in Canada.

Paragraph 94(3)(c) provides that a non-resident trust that becomes subject to subsection 94(3) for a particular taxation year, after not being subject to either new subsection 94(3) or existing paragraph 94(1)(c) for the preceding year is deemed, immediately before the end of the preceding taxation year, to have disposed of each property (other than property described in any of subparagraphs 128.1(1)(b)(i) to (iv)) held by the trust at that time for proceeds of disposition equal to its fair market value at that time. The trust is also deemed to have, at the beginning of the particular taxation year, acquired each of those properties so disposed of at a cost equal to its proceeds of disposition

Note, in this regard, that where paragraph 94(3)(c) applies to the trust in the particular taxation year to cause a disposition of trust property in the preceding taxation year, new paragraph 128.1(1.1)(b) provides that paragraph 128.1(1)(b) will not apply in the preceding taxation year.

Paragraphs 94(3)(c) and 128.1(1.1)(b) together are intended to ensure — in a manner similar to that for taxpayers that migrate to Canada — that certain gains or losses that accrued on certain property of the trust while the trust was non-resident are not subject to taxation in Canada.

Paragraph 94(3)(c) also complements the rule in subsection 94(6), which applies where a non-resident trust ceases to be an

"exempt foreign trust" (as defined in subsection 94(1)). In this case, subsection 94(6) establishes the beginning of a new "stub" taxation year. If subsection 94(3) applies for that "stub" year, paragraph 94(3)(c) would be applicable with regard to the properties held by the trust at the beginning of that "stub" year.

A trust is created in 2003. The trust is not at any time an exempt foreign trust. At the end of its 2003 taxation year, the trust is non-resident and there are no resident contributors to the trust and no resident beneficiaries under the trust.

On February 1, 2004, John makes a contribution to the trust. At the end of the trust's 2004 taxation year, John is a resident contributor to the trust, and the trust is non-resident.

On July 1, 2005 the sole trustee of the trust moves to Canada, becomes resident in Canada at that time and remains resident in Canada throughout the remainder of the year. Immediately before the trustee became resident in Canada, the trustee was non-resident and John remained a resident contributor to the trust.

Results

Trust's 2003 Taxation Year

1. Subsection 94(3) does not apply to deem the trust to be resident in Canada in computing its income for its 2003 taxation year.

Trust's 2004 Taxation Year

2. Paragraph 94(3)(a) applies to deem the trust to be resident in Canada, throughout its 2004 taxation year, for a number of purposes, including computing of its income. Because the trust was non-resident throughout its 2003 taxation year, paragraph 94(3)(c) also applies to deem the trust to have disposed of its property (other than certain properties described in subparagraphs 128.1(1)(b)(i) to (iv)) for fair market value proceeds immediately before the end of its last 2003 taxation year and to have reacquired those properties at a cost equal to that fair market value at the beginning of the 2004 taxation year. A related rule in paragraph 128.1(1.1)(b) suspends the application of the deemed disposition and re-acquisition rules in paragraph 128.1(1)(b) that would otherwise apply in that last 2003 taxation year because of the trust becoming resident in Canada at the beginning of the 2004 taxation year.

Trust's 2005 Taxation Year

3. Because the trustee of the trust becomes resident in Canada on July 1, 2005, paragraph 128.1(1)(a) will apply to deem the trust to have a taxation year-end immediately before the change of residency. At the end of this first 2005 taxation year of the trust, paragraph 94(3)(a) applies to deem the trust to be resident in Canada, throughout that first 2005 taxation year, for a number of purposes, including the computing of its income. However, paragraph 94(3)(c) will not apply because the trust was resident in Canada (i.e. because of the application of paragraph 94(3)(a) to the trust's 2004 taxation year) throughout the year preceding the 2005 taxation year.

4. Paragraph 128.1(1)(a) also applies to deem the trust to have a new taxation year at the time the trustee becomes resident in Canada on July 1, 2005. Because the trust is resident in Canada at the end of this second 2005 taxation year, paragraph 94(3)(a) does not apply to deem the trust to be resident in Canada in computing its income for that year.

5. As the trust is resident in Canada immediately after the end of its first 2005 taxation year (i.e., the 2005 taxation year discussed in #3 above), paragraph 128.1(1.1)(a) suspends the application of the deemed disposition and re-acquisition rules in paragraphs 128.1(1)(b) and (c) that would otherwise apply in respect of the end of that first 2005 taxation year because of the trust becoming resident in Canada on July 1, 2005. This ensures that the trust does not realize at that end of that first 2005 taxation year any accrued gains or losses of the trust solely because the basis of the trust's residency in Canada changes.

6. Note that where subsection 128.1(1.1) applies to a trust, it suspends only the application of paragraph 128.1(1)(b) (as a result paragraph 128.1(1)(c) also has no application) to the trust. If the trust becomes resident in Canada, it would continue to be subject to paragraph 128.1(1)(a). Also note that paragraph 94(4)(d) ensures that the application of paragraph 94(3)(a) to the trust will not affect the determination of the trust as having changed residence for the purposes of subsection 128.1(1).

Paragraph 94(3)(d) imposes liabilities for a taxation year on entities who are "resident contributors" or "resident beneficiaries". Where subsection 94(3) applies to a trust for a taxation year, each of these entities is jointly and severally, or solidarily, liable with the trust in respect of the trust's obligations under sections 150 to 180. Typically, the most significant obligation in this context is the obligation to pay tax instalments pursuant to section 156. However, the extent of the liability imposed by paragraph 94(3)(d) is limited by new subsection 94(7). For more information, see the commentary on subsections 94(7) to (9).

The expression "solidarily liable" is added to ensure that the Act appropriately reflects both the civil law of the province of Quebec and the law of other provinces.

Paragraph 94(3)(e) imposes liabilities for a taxation year on each entity that is a beneficiary under the trust and was a person from whom an amount would be recoverable at the end of 2002 under subsection 94(2) (as it read in its application to taxation years that began before 2003) in respect of the trust if the entity had received before 2003 amounts described under paragraphs 94(2)(a) or (b) in respect of the trust (as those paragraphs read in their application to taxation years that began before 2003). Where subsection 94(3) applies to the trust for a taxation year, each of these entities is, to the extent of the entity's recovery limit for the year, jointly and severally, or solidarily, liable with the trust in respect of the trust's obligations under sections 150 to 180.

Note that subsection 94(3) generally does not result in the creation of any obligations for a trust that is subject to subsection 94(3) to withhold tax on distributions to non-resident beneficiaries under Part XIII or to pay any tax under Part XII.2. As noted above, one of the effects of subsection 94(3) is that the trust is not liable for such tax in connection with distributions of Canadian-source income to the non-resident beneficiaries in their capacities as beneficiaries.

Instead, the rules in new subsection 104(7.01) are designed so that there will be a reasonable level of Part I tax in respect of Canadian-source income received by the trust in the event the trust also distributes that income to non-resident beneficiaries in their capacity as beneficiaries. For more information, see the commentary on subsection 104(7.01).

However, in the event that the trust pays or credits an amount to a nonresident and that amount is not referred to in paragraph 104(7.01)(b) in respect of the trust for the taxation year, the non-resident will continue to be liable for any Part XIII tax on the amount.

Related Provisions: 75(3)(c.2) — Reversionary trust rules do not apply to non-resident trust; 94(4) [proposed] — Excluded provisions for 94(3)(a); 94(5), (5.1) [proposed] — Trust deemed to cease being resident in Canada; 94(7) [proposed] — Limit to amount recoverable under 94(3)(d); 94(8) — "Recovery limit" for 94(3)(e); 104(4)(a.5) — Trusts — deemed disposition of property when no resident contributor exists; 104(7.01) — Limit to trust's deduction under 104(6); 128.1(1.1)(b) — No deemed disposition on immigration of trust; 160(2.1) — Assessment of amount under 94(3)(d) or (e); 160(3) — Discharge of liability under 94(3)(d) or (e); 216(4.1) — Where trust receives rental income from property in Canada; 233.2(4) — Annual information return by contributor; 233.3(3) — Annual information return by holder of interest.

(4) Excluded provisions — Paragraph (3)(a) does not apply to deem a trust to be resident in Canada for the purposes of

(a) the definitions "arm's length transfer", "exempt foreign trust" and "exempt taxpayer" in subsection (1);

(b) subsections 70(6) and 73(1), paragraph 107.4(1)(c) other than subparagraph (i) of it, subparagraph 128.1(1.1)(a)(ii), paragraph (a) of the definition "mutual fund trust" in subsection 132(6), and paragraph 248(3)(b);

(c) determining the liability of a person (other than the trust) that would arise under section 215;

(d) determining whether, in applying subsection 128.1(1), the trust becomes resident in Canada at a particular time;

(e) determining whether, in applying subsection 128.1(4), the trust ceases to be resident in Canada at a particular time; and

(f) determining the residency of the transferee in applying subparagraph (f)(ii) of the definition "disposition" in subsection 248(1).

Technical Notes: New subsection 94(4) provides that the rules in paragraph 94(3)(a) treating non-resident trusts as resident in Canada do not apply for certain limited purposes:

- the definitions "arm's length transfer", "exempt taxpayer" and "exempt foreign trust" in subsection 94(1) — thus ensuring that there is no circularity in applying those definitions due to fact that those definitions impose a requirement that a trust be non-resident;
- subsections 70(6) and 73(1) and paragraph 107.4(1)(c) (other than subparagraph 107.4(1)(c)(i)) and subparagraph (f)(ii) of the definition "disposition" in subsection 248(1) — thus ensuring that rules allowing in some cases for a rollover of property on transfers to a trust generally do not apply to transfers to a trust deemed to be resident in Canada by subsection 94(3);
- paragraph (a) of the definition "mutual fund trust" in subsection 132(6) — a reference that makes it clear that a trust deemed to be resident in Canada by subsection 94(3) will not be treated as a mutual fund trust for any purpose; and
- determining whether, in applying subsection 128.1(1), the trust becomes resident in Canada at a particular time and determining whether, in applying subsection 128.1(4), the trust ceases to be resident in Canada at a particular time — thus ensuring that the deeming of a trust to be resident under paragraph 94(3)(a) does not apply to affect a determination of whether a trust has changed residence at any time (e.g., upon a change of trustees or upon a change of residence of trustees).

Furthermore, except as otherwise permitted under subsection 216(4.1), paragraph 94(3)(a) does not relieve a payer of Canadian-source income from the obligation to withhold amounts under section 215 in connection with amounts paid to a trust deemed to be resident in Canada by subsection 94(3). This is so even though such a trust is not liable for Part XIII tax on amounts paid or credited to it, because of the application of subparagraph 94(3)(a)(vii). The trust would be expected to apply for a refund of such tax, which would be given except to the extent that there are any outstanding liabilities of the trust with regard to Part I tax.

(5) Deemed cessation of residence — A trust is deemed to cease to be resident in Canada at the earliest time at which there is neither a resident contributor to the trust nor a resident beneficiary under the trust in a period that would, if this Act were read without reference subsection 128.1(4), be a taxation year of the trust

(a) that immediately follows a taxation year of the trust throughout which it was resident in Canada;

(b) at the beginning of which there was a resident contributor to the trust, or a resident beneficiary under the trust; and

(c) at the end of which the trust is non-resident.

Technical Notes: New subsection 94(5) deems a trust to have ceased to be resident in Canada at the earliest time in a specified period at which there is neither a "resident contributor" to the trust nor a "resident beneficiary" under the trust. For this purpose, the specified period is the period that would (if the Act were read without reference to subsection 128.1(4)) be a taxation year of the trust

- that immediately follows a taxation year of the trust throughout which it was resident in Canada,
- at the beginning of which there was either a resident contributor to the trust or a resident beneficiary under the trust, and
- at the end of which the trust is non-resident.

For more information on the expressions "resident contributor" and "resident beneficiary", as defined in new subsection 94(1), see the commentary on those provisions.

Where subsection 94(5) applies, the cessation of residence in Canada of a trust results in the application of subsection 128.1(4). Under that subsection, a taxation year of the trust is deemed to have ended immediately before the earliest time in the specified period described above. At that deemed taxation year-end, the criteria in subsection 94(3) are satisfied. Accordingly, the trust will be subject to tax under Part I on its world-wide income for that year because it is considered under subsection 94(3) to be resident in Canada throughout that year. Under new paragraph 94(3)(d), each "resident beneficiary" or "resident contributor" at the time of that deemed taxation year end can be jointly and severally, or solidarily, liable with the trust for the trust's income tax liabilities under the Act for that year. (For more detail on the expression "solidarily", please refer to the introductory commentary above on new section 94.)

Related Provisions: 94(3)(a) [proposed] — Trust deemed resident in Canada; 104(4)(a.5) — Trusts — effect of 94(5) on deemed disposition of property.

(6) Becoming or ceasing to be an exempt foreign trust — If at any time a trust becomes or ceases to be an exempt foreign trust (otherwise than because of becoming resident in Canada),

(a) its taxation year that would otherwise include that time is deemed to have ended immediately before that time and a new taxation year of the trust is deemed to begin at that time; and

(b) for the purpose of determining the trust's fiscal period after that time, the trust is deemed not to have established a fiscal period before that time.

Technical Notes: New subsection 94(6) generally provides that, if a trust becomes or ceases to be an "exempt foreign trust" (as defined in new subsection 94(1)) at any time, the trust's taxation year is deemed to have ended immediately before that time, a new "stub" taxation year is deemed to have begun at that time and the trust is deemed not to have established a fiscal period before that time. However, subsection 94(6) does not apply where a trust ceases to be an exempt foreign trust because it becomes resident in Canada.

Subsection 94(3) may apply in respect of the later "stub" taxation year of the trust if the criteria set out in that subsection are satisfied at a "specified time" in respect of the trust for the taxation year (generally, the end of the taxation year). Where this is the case, the trust would be subject to tax under Part I on its world-wide income for that later "stub" year because it would be considered under subsection 94(3) to be resident in Canada for that year.

(7) Limit to amount recoverable — The maximum amount recoverable under the provisions referred to in paragraph (3)(d) at any particular time from an entity in respect of a trust (other than an entity that is deemed, by subsection (12) or (13), to be a contributor or a resident contributor to the trust) and a particular taxation year of the trust is the entity's recovery limit at the particular time in respect of the trust and the particular year if

(a) either

(i) the entity is liable under a provision referred to in paragraph (3)(d) in respect of the trust and the particular year solely because the entity was a resident beneficiary under the trust at a specified time in respect of the trust in the particular year, or

(ii) at a specified time in respect of the trust in the particular year, the total of all amounts each of which is the amount, at the time it was made, of a contribution to the trust made before the specified time by the entity, or by another entity not dealing at arm's length with the entity, is not more than the greater of

(A) $10,000 and

(B) 10% of the total of all amounts each of which was the amount, at the time it was made, of a contribution made to the trust before the specified time;

(b) except where the total determined in subparagraph (a)(ii) in respect of the entity and all entities not dealing at arm's length with it is $10,000 or less, the entity has filed on a timely basis under section 233.2 all information returns required to be filed by it before the particular time in respect of the trust (or on any later day that is acceptable to the Minister); and

(c) it is reasonable to conclude that for each transaction or event that occurred before the end of the particular year at the direction of, or with the acquiescence of, the entity

(i) none of the purposes of the transaction or event was to enable the entity to avoid or minimize any liability under a provision referred to in paragraph (3)(d) in respect of the trust, and

(ii) the transaction or event was not part of a series of transactions or events any of the purposes of which was to enable the entity to avoid or minimize any liability under a provision referred to in paragraph (3)(d) in respect of the trust.

Technical Notes: New subsection 94(7) allows for a limitation of the amount that may be recovered from an entity that would otherwise be jointly, severally, or solidarily, liable for the entire amount of a trust's tax obligations under the Act. Subsection 94(7) applies to an entity (other than an entity that is deemed, by subsection 94(12) or (13), to be a contributor or a resident contributor to the trust) in respect of a particular taxation year of the trust where three conditions are satisfied.

The first condition is satisfied in respect of a particular taxation year of the trust:

- where, under subparagraph 94(7)(a)(i), the entity is jointly and severally, or solidarily, liable with the trust only because the entity was a "resident beneficiary" (as defined in new subsection 94(1)) under the trust at a specified time in respect of the trust for the particular year, or
- where, under subparagraph 94(7)(a)(ii), at a specified time in respect of the trust for, the total amount (determined with reference to paragraph 94(2)(b), (d), (h), (p) and (q) and subsection 94(9)) of contributions made to the trust by the entity (or by another entity not dealing at arm's length with the entity) is not more than the greater of $10,000 and 10% of the total amount of all contributions to the trust.

The second condition, under paragraph 94(7)(b), requires that the entity have filed on a timely basis all information returns required to be filed by the entity in respect of the trust under section 233.2 (or on any later day that is acceptable to the Minister of National Revenue). However, the second condition need not be satisfied if the first condition is satisfied because the total determined under subparagraph 94(7)(a)(ii) (in respect of the entity and all entities not dealing at arm's length with it) is $10,000 or less.

The third condition, under paragraph 94(7)(c), is satisfied in respect of an entity and a particular taxation year of the trust where it is reasonable to conclude that each transaction or event that occurred before the end of the particular year at the direction of, or with the acquiescence of, the entity satisfied the following conditions:

- none of the purposes of the transaction or event was to enable the entity to avoid or minimize any liability under a provision referred to in paragraph 94(3)(d) in respect of the trust, and
- the transaction or event was not part of a series of transactions or events any of the purposes of which was to enable the entity to avoid or minimize any liability under a provision referred to in paragraph 94(3)(d) in respect of the trust.

There are a number of transactions or events, or series of transactions or events, that may result in a failure to satisfy the third condition (e.g., an artificial dilution of an entity's relative contribution to the trust (i.e., below the 10% level); or corporate distributions that have the effect of avoiding or minimizing the impact of the three-year rule described in subsection 94(9)).

Reference should be made in this context to the definition "contribution" in subsection 94(1), as well as to related rules in subsection 94(2).

Where subsection 94(7) applies to an entity in respect of a taxation year of a trust, the amount recoverable at any time from the entity in respect of the year is limited to the person's "recovery limit", determined under subsection 94(8), in respect of the trust and the year.

Related Provisions: 94(8) — Recovery limit; 94(9) — Determination of contribution amount.

(8) Recovery limit — The recovery limit referred to in paragraph (3)(e) and subsection (7) at a particular time of a particular entity in respect of a trust and a particular taxation year of the trust is the amount, if any, by which the greater of

(a) the total of all amounts each of which is

(i) an amount received or receivable after 2000 and before the particular time

(A) by the particular entity on the disposition of all or part of the particular entity's interest as a beneficiary under the trust, or

(B) by another entity (that was, when the amount became receivable, a specified party in respect of the particular entity) on the disposition of all or part of the specified party's interest as a beneficiary under the trust,

(ii) an amount (other than an amount described in subparagraph (i)) made payable by the trust after 2000 and before the particular time to

(A) the particular entity because of the interest of the particular entity as a beneficiary under the trust, or

(B) another entity (that was, when the amount became payable, a specified party in respect of the particular entity) because of the interest of the specified party as a beneficiary under the trust,

(iii) an amount (other than an amount described in subparagraph (i) or (ii)) that is the fair market value of a benefit received or enjoyed, after 2000 and before the particular time, from or under the trust by

(A) the particular entity, or

(B) another entity that was, when the benefit was received or enjoyed, a specified party in respect of the particular entity, or

(iv) the maximum amount that would be recoverable from the particular entity at the end of 2002 under subsection (2) (as it read in its application to taxation years that began before 2003) if the trust had tax payable under this Part at the end of 2002 and that tax payable exceeded the total of the amounts described in respect of the entity under paragraphs (2)(a) and (b) (as they read in their application to taxation years that began before 2003), except to the extent that the amount so recoverable is in respect of an amount that is included in the particular entity's recovery limit because of subparagraph (i) or (ii), and

(b) the total of all amounts each of which is the amount, when made, of a contribution to the trust before the particular time by the particular entity, exceeds the total of all amounts each of which is

(c) an amount recovered before the particular time from the particular entity in connection with a liability of the particular entity (in respect of the trust and the particular year or a preceding taxation year of the trust) that arose because of the application of subsection (3) (or the application of this section as it read in its application to taxation years that began before 2003),

(d) an amount (other than an amount in respect of which this paragraph has applied in respect of any other entity) recovered before the particular time from a specified party in respect of the particular entity in connection with a liability of the particular entity (in respect of the trust and the particular year or a preceding taxation year of the trust) that arose because of the application of subsection (3) (or the application of this section as it read in its application to taxation years that began before 2003), or

(e) the amount, if any, by which the particular entity's tax payable under this Part for any taxation year in which an amount described in any of subparagraphs (a)(i) to (iii) was paid, became payable, was received, became receivable or was enjoyed by the particular entity exceeds the amount that would have been the particular entity's tax payable under this Part for that taxation year if no such amount were paid, became payable, were received, became receivable or were enjoyed by the particular entity in that taxation year.

Technical Notes: Under subsection 94(8), the amount of the recovery limit that applies to a particular entity at any particular time is calculated as follows:

- ADD amounts received or receivable after 2000 and before the particular time by the particular entity on the disposition of all or part of the particular entity's interest as a beneficiary under the trust, or by another entity that was, at the time the amount became receivable, a specified party (as defined in subsection 94(1)) in respect of the particular entity on the disposition of all or part of the specified party's interest as a beneficiary under the trust;
- ADD an amount (other than an amount described in the paragraph above) made payable by the trust after 2000 and before the particular time to the particular entity because of the interest of the particular entity as a beneficiary under the trust, or another entity (that was, at the time the amount became payable, a specified party in respect of the particular entity) because of the interest of the specified party as a beneficiary under the trust;
- ADD the fair market value of benefits received or enjoyed, after 2000 and before the particular time, under the trust by the particular entity (or an entity that was, at the time the benefit was received or enjoyed, a specified party in respect of the particular entity), not otherwise taken into account above;
- ADD the maximum amount that would be recoverable from the particular entity at the end of 2002 under subsection 94(2) (as it read in its application to taxation years that began before 2003) if the trust had had tax payable under Part I of the Act at the end of 2002 in excess of the total of the amounts described in respect of the entity under paragraphs 94(2)(a) and (b) (as they read in their application to taxation years that began before 2003), except to the extent that the amount so recoverable is in respect of an amount that is included in the particular entity's recovery limit because of subparagraph 94(8)(a)(i) or (ii);
- ADD the total amount (determined with reference to paragraphs 94(2)(b), (d), (h), (p) and (q) and subsection 94(9)) of contributions made to the trust by the particular entity, to the extent that this amount exceeds the total of the first four amounts;
- SUBTRACT previous recoveries by the Canada Customs and Revenue Agency ("CCRA") under subsection 94(3) (or under subsection 94(1) as it read in its application to taxation years that began before 2003) from the particular entity in respect of the trust and the year or a preceding taxation year of the trust;
- SUBTRACT previous recoveries by the CCRA under subsection 94(3) (or under subsection 94(1) as it read in its application to taxation years that began before 2003) from a specified party in respect of the particular entity in respect of the trust and the year or a preceding taxation year of the trust; and
- SUBTRACT the amount, if any, by which the particular entity's tax payable under this Part for any taxation year in which an amount described in any of subparagraphs 94(8)(a)(i) to (iii) was paid, became payable, was received, became receivable or was enjoyed by the particular entity exceeds the amount that would have been the particular entity's tax payable under this Part for that taxation year if no such amount were paid, became payable, were received, became receivable or were enjoyed by the particular entity in that taxation year.

For more information on subsections 94(11) to (13), or the expression "specified party" as defined in subsection 94(1), see the commentary on those provisions.

Related Provisions: 94(9) — Determination of contribution amount; 104(24) — Whether amount payable to beneficiary.

(9) Determination of contribution amount — special case — If a contribution is made at any time by an entity to a trust as a consequence of a transaction that is, or as a consequence of a series of transactions or events that includes, the transfer at that time to the trust of a specified property, the amount of the contribution at that time, is deemed, for the purposes of clause

(2)(u)(ii)(C), subparagraph (7)(a)(ii) and subsection (8), to be the greater of

(a) the amount, determined without reference to this subsection, of the contribution at that time, and

(b) the amount that is the greatest fair market value of the specified property, or property substituted for it, in the period that

(i) begins immediately after that time, and

(ii) ends at the end of the third calendar year that ends after that time.

Technical Notes: Subsection 94(9) affects the calculation of the amount of a "contribution" (as defined in new subsection 94(1)) to a trust of "specified property" (as defined in new subsection 94(11)) for the purpose of determining whether the "recovery limit" limitation applies to a contributor to the trust and of determining the amount of that recovery limit.

The amount of a contribution to a trust because of a transfer to the trust of specified property is deemed by subsection 94(9) to be the greater of:

- the amount, otherwise determined, at that time of the contribution; and
- the amount that is the greatest fair market value of the specified property (or of substituted property) in the period that begins immediately after that time and ends at the end of the third calendar year after that time.

For more information on the expression "specified property" as defined in new subsection 94(1), see the commentary on that provision.

Subsection 94(9) allows for a reasonable opportunity for recovery of tax by the CCRA in the context of a transaction or series of transactions involving the transfer of specified property. Consider, for example, an estate freeze under which common shares in the capital stock of a corporation are transferred directly or indirectly to a non-resident trust. Because of the difficulties associated with valuing the common shares at the time of the transfer, it is appropriate to provide for a valuation as described above.

In conjunction with new subsection 94(9), subparagraph 152(4)(b)(vi) is amended to ensure that a reassessment of a taxpayer arising out of the application of subsection 94(9) can be undertaken by the CCRA within 3 years after the normal reassessment period of the taxpayer in respect of the taxpayer's relevant taxation year.

Related Provisions: 152(4)(b)(vi) — Three-year extension to reassessment period.

(10) Where contributor becomes resident in Canada within 60 months after contributing — In applying the definition "connected contributor" at each specified time, in respect of a taxation year of a trust, that is before the particular time at which a contributor to the trust becomes resident in Canada within 60 months after making a contribution to the trust, the contribution is deemed to have been made at a time other than a non-resident time of the contributor if

(a) in applying the definition "non-resident time" as of each of those specified times, the contribution was made at a non-resident time of the contributor; and

(b) in applying the definition "non-resident time" immediately after the particular time, the contribution is made at a time other than a non-resident time of the contributor.

Technical Notes: New subsection 94(10) applies to determine whether there is a "connected contributor" (as defined in new subsection 94(1)) to a trust for the purpose of applying the definition "resident beneficiary" (as defined in new subsection 94(1)). Under new paragraph 94(3)(d), a resident beneficiary can, to an extent, be liable for the trust's income tax under Part I of the Act. For more information, see the commentary on those definitions and subsections 94(3) and (7) to (9).

A "contribution" (as defined in new subsection 94(1)) to a trust by a contributor is considered to have been made at a time other than a "non-resident time" (as defined in subsection 94(1)) if the contributor becomes resident in Canada at any time within the period (referred to in this commentary as the "60-month post period") 60 months after the time of the contribution. However, to facilitate the administration of the definition "non-resident time", paragraph (b) of the definition "connected contributor" and subsection 94(3), the definition "non-resident time" is drafted so that such a contributor and the trust may, subject to subsection 94(10), treat the time of the contribution as a non-resident time for the purposes of applying the definition "connected contributor" and subsection 94(3) at a "specified time" (as defined in new subsection 94(1)) in respect of the trust for any particular trust taxation year if at the specified time the contributor still has not become resident in Canada within the 60-month post period.

Subsection 94(10) deems (for the purpose of applying the definition "connected contributor" at each specified time, in respect of a trust for a taxation year of the trust, that is before the particular time at which the contributor becomes resident in Canada within the 60-month post period) the contribution to have been made at a time other than a "non-resident time" of the contributor if:

- in applying the definition "non-resident time" as of each of those specified times, the particular contribution was made at a non-resident time of the contributor; and
- in applying the definition "non-resident time" at the particular time, the contribution is made at a time other than a non-resident time of the contributor.

Where subsection 94(10) applies, the contributor will be considered a "connected contributor" to the trust and, if, as a result, there was a "resident beneficiary" at a specified time in the relevant prior taxation year of the trust, the trust and the resident beneficiary would, because of subsection 94(3), generally be jointly and severally, or solidarily, liable for Part I tax on the trust's income for the year. (For more details on the expression "solidarily", please refer to the introductory commentary above on new section 94.)

Subparagraph 152(4)(b)(vi) is amended to ensure that a reassessment of a taxpayer arising out of the application of subsection 94(10) can be undertaken by the Canada Customs and Revenue Agency within 3 years after the normal reassessment period of the taxpayer in respect of the taxpayer's relevant taxation year.

Related Provisions: 152(4)(b)(vi) — Three-year extension to reassessment period.

(11) Application of subsections (12) and (13) — Subsections (12) and (13) apply to a trust or an entity in respect of a trust if

(a) at any time property of a trust (referred to in this subsection and subsections (12) and (13) as the "original trust") is transferred or loaned, directly or indirectly, in any manner, to another trust (referred to in this subsection and subsections (12) and (13) as the "transferee trust");

(b) the original trust

(i) is deemed to be resident in Canada immediately before that time because of paragraph (3)(a),

(ii) would be deemed to be resident in Canada immediately before that time because of paragraph (3)(a) if this section were read without reference to paragraph (a) of the definition "connected contributor" and paragraph (a) of the definition "resident contributor",

(iii) was deemed to be resident in Canada immediately before that time because of subsection (1) as it read in its application to taxation years that began before 2003, or

(iv) would have been deemed to be resident in Canada immediately before that time because of subsection (1) as it read in its application to taxation years that began before 2003 if that subsection were read in that application without reference to subclause (b)(i)(A)(III) of that subsection; and

(c) it is reasonable to conclude that one of the reasons the transfer or loan is made is to avoid or minimize a liability under this Part that arose, or that would otherwise have arisen, because of the application of subsection (3) (or because of subsection (1) as it read in its application to taxation years that began before 2003).

Technical Notes: Subsections 94(11) to (13) provide a set of related anti-avoidance rules that apply where it is reasonable to conclude that one of the reasons for a loan or transfer of property from a trust (the "original trust"), that is deemed under paragraph 94(3)(a) to be resident in Canada (or was deemed resident because of subsection (1) as it read in its application to taxation years that began before 2003 or would have been so deemed under either of those provisions if they had applied without regard to the period of time in which a contributor to the trust was resident in Canada), to another trust (the "transferee trust") is to avoid or minimize the liability, of any entity under Part I of the Act, that arose, or that would otherwise have arisen, because of the application of subsection (3) (or because of subsection (1) as it read in its application to taxation years that began before 2003).

Where such a loan or transfer is made at a particular time, the original trust is deemed, under subsection 94(12), to be a resident contributor to the transferee trust for the purpose of applying this section in respect of the transferee trust.

Where such a loan or transfer is made at a particular time, an entity that is at that time a contributor to the original trust is deemed, under subsection 94(13), to be a contributor to the transferee trust and a connected contributor to the transferee trust (if at that time the entity is also a connected contributor to the original trust). For more information on the definitions "contributor" and "connected contributor" in subsection 94(1), see the commentary on those definitions.

Subsection 94(7), generally provides that the liability of a "resident contributor" is limited by that contributor's recovery limit, as determined by reference to subsections 94(7) to (9). However, subsection 94(7) does not apply to an entity that is deemed, by subsection 94(12) or (13), to be a contributor or a resident contributor to the trust. For more information on the definition "resident contributor" or subsections 94(3) and (7) to (9), see the commentary on those provisions.

(12) Deemed resident contributor — The original trust described in subsection (11) (including a trust that has ceased to exist) is deemed to be, at and after the time of the transfer or loan referred to in subsection (11), a resident contributor to the transferee trust for the purpose of applying this section in respect of the transferee trust.

Technical Notes: See under 94(11).

Related Provisions: 94(11) — Application of 94(12).

(13) Deemed contributor — An entity (including any entity that has ceased to exist) that is, at the time of the transfer or loan referred to in subsection (11), a contributor to the original trust, is deemed to be at and after that time

(a) a contributor to the transferee trust; and

(b) a connected contributor to the transferee trust, if at that time the entity is a connected contributor to the original trust.

Technical Notes: See under 94(11).

Related Provisions: 94(11) — Application of 94(13).

(14) Restricted property — exception — A particular property that is at any time held, loaned or transferred, as the case may be, by an entity is not restricted property held, loaned or transferred, as the case may be, at that time by the entity if

(a) the particular property is identified in prescribed form, containing prescribed information, filed, by or on behalf of the entity, with the Minister on or before the entity's filing-due date (or a later date that is acceptable to the Minister) for the entity's taxation year that includes that time; and

(b) the Minister is satisfied that the particular property (or property for which the particular property is substituted property) was not at any time acquired, held, loaned or transferred by the entity (or any entity with whom the entity does not at any time deal at arm's length) as part of a transaction or series of transactions or events a purpose of which was to permit any change in the value of the property of a corporation (that is, at any time, a closely-held corporation) to accrue to the particular property.

Technical Notes: Subsection 94(14) provides that a particular property (identified in prescribed form filed with the Minister of National Revenue in a timely manner by (or on behalf of) an entity) that is at any time held, loaned or transferred by the entity will not be treated as restricted property held, loaned or transferred at that time by the entity if the Minister is satisfied that the particular property (or property for which the particular property is substituted property) was not at any time acquired, held, loaned or transferred by the entity (or any entity with whom the entity does not at any time deal at arm's length) as part of a transaction or series of transactions or events a purpose of which was to permit any change in the value of the property of a corporation (that is, at any time, a closely-held corporation) to accrue to the particular property.

Subsection 94(14) is intended to provide relief only to the extent that the Minister is satisfied that an entity's holding, acquisition or transferring of a property that is otherwise restricted property was in no way part of a transaction (or series of transactions or events) designed in any way to permit the value of the property to be attributable in any way to a change in value of property of a corporation that at any time is a closely-held corporation.

For more details on the definitions "restricted property" and "closely-held corporation", see the commentary on those provisions.

(15) Determining arm's length dealing — In applying this section, in determining whether a particular entity and another entity deal, at any time, with each other at arm's length, a reference in section 251 to the word "person" is to be read as a reference to the expression "entity (as defined in subsection 94(1))".

Technical Notes: Subsection 94(15) ensures that the rules in section 251 are applicable in determining whether entities deal at arm's length with each other. The subsection provides that for the purposes of section 94, when determining whether a particular entity and another entity deal, at any time, with each other at arm's length, a reference in section 251 to the word "person" is to be read as a reference to the expression "entity" (as defined in subsection 94(1)).

(16) Anti-avoidance — 150 entities — If it can reasonably be considered that one of the main reasons that an entity is at any time a shareholder of a corporation or holds a capital interest in a trust is to cause the corporation to satisfy the condition in subparagraph (b)(i) of the definition "closely-held corporation" or the trust to satisfy the condition in clause (h)(i)(A) of the definition "exempt foreign trust", as the case may be, the corporation or the trust, as the case may be, is deemed not to have satisfied at that time that condition.

Technical Notes: Subsection 94(16) is an anti-avoidance provision that is relevant to the application of the definition "closely-held corporation" and paragraph (h) of the definition "exempt foreign trust" in subsection 94(1). These definitions, respectively, provide for different results based, in part, on the condition that there be at a particular time at least 150 beneficiaries under a trust or 150 shareholders of the capital stock of a corporation.

Subsection 94(16) provides that, if it can reasonably be considered that one of the main reasons that an entity is at any time a shareholder of a corporation or holds a capital interest in a trust is to cause the corporation or trust to satisfy the applicable condition, the corporation or the trust, as the case may be, is deemed not to have satisfied at that time that condition. Where subsection 94(16) applies in respect of a particular time and in respect of the corporation or trust, in the case of the corporation, it would be treated at that time as a closely-held corporation and in the case of the trust, it would not be treated at that time as an exempt foreign trust.

For more detail on the definitions "closely-held corporation" and "exempt foreign trust", see the commentary on those definitions.

Application: The October 30, 2003 Notice of Ways and Means Motion (NRTs and FIEs), s. 15, will amend s. 94 to read as above, applicable to trust taxation years that begin after 2002, except that

(a) it also applies to taxation years that begin in 2001 and 2002 of a trust if the trust was created in 2001 and elects, in writing, to have s. 94 apply to those taxation years by filing the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the trust's filing-due date for the trust's taxation year in which this Act [the October 30, 2003 Notice of Ways and Means Motion] is assented to;

(b) it also applies to taxation years that begin in 2002 of a trust if the trust was created in 2002 and elects, in writing, to have s. 94 apply to those taxation years by filing the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the trust's filing-due date for the trust's taxation year in which this Act [the October 30, 2003 Notice of Ways and Means Motion] is assented to;

(c) any election or form referred to in s. 94 that would otherwise be required to be filed before 120 days after this Act is [the October 30, 2003 Notice of Ways and Means Motion] assented to is deemed to have been filed with the Minister of National Revenue on a timely basis if it is filed with the Minister of National Revenue within 365 days after this Act [the October 30, 2003 Notice of Ways and Means Motion] is assented to;

(d) the expression "if the entity is an individual and the trust arose on and as a consequence of the death of the individual, 18 months before the contribution time" in the definition "non-resident time" in subsec. 94(1) is, in respect of contributions made before June 23, 2000, to be read as the expression "if the contribution time is before June 23, 2000, 18 months before the end of the trust's taxation year that includes the contribution time";

(f) if a trust ceased to exist before October 31, 2003, the definition "specified time" in subsec. 94(1) is to be read in respect of the trust without reference to paragraph (b) of that definition.

Notice of Ways and Means Motion, federal budget, February 16, 1999: Non-resident trusts and foreign-based investment funds

(8) That the provisions of the Act governing the taxation of

(a) trust beneficiaries and non-resident trusts, and

(b) taxpayers resident in Canada who hold interests in foreign-based investment funds

be modified in accordance with proposals described in the budget documents tabled by the Minister of Finance in the House of Commons on February 16, 1999.

Federal budget, Supplementary Information, February 16, 1999: Taxation of trusts — Background

Trusts that are resident in Canada are subject to tax in Canada annually on their undistributed income.

Beneficiaries of resident trusts are taxable on distributions received from such trusts, to the extent that the distributions are made out of the income of the trust. Distributions made out of the capital of the trust are tax-free. As a result, the Canadian tax base is protected.

Generally, non-resident trusts are not taxable in Canada and income can be accumulated in such trusts on a tax-deferred basis. When such trusts pay little or no foreign tax on their accumulated income and capital gains, taxpayers making use of such trusts may benefit either from a deferral of tax or complete avoidance of tax. Avoidance occurs where the accumulated income is transformed into the capital of the trust, which is distributed to the Canadian beneficiaries tax-free.

Issue

The anti-avoidance rules in the Act attempt to tax income earned by non-resident trusts in certain circumstances in order to ensure that they are not used to defer Canadian tax on the income accumulating in the trusts. Current rules apply only to non-resident trusts with a Canadian beneficiary. However, these rules are not fully effective and relatively little of such income is taxed in Canada.

Canadian residents are able to transfer funds to non-resident trusts under circumstances designed to circumvent the application of existing anti-avoidance rules. The trust regimes in several tax-haven jurisdictions have been specifically modified in an attempt to permit Canadians to avoid the application of the anti-avoidance rules. A feature of such schemes is to disguise the fact that the non-resident trust has a Canadian resident beneficiary. A number of tax-haven jurisdictions have modified their trust laws so that no beneficiaries need to be designated, thus facilitating tax planning by Canadians in order to defer the taxation of the income accumulating in the non-resident trust. Arrangements between the Canadian transferors and the trustee ensure that the Canadian transferors retain effective control of the trust, or are able to designate who may ultimately receive capital of the trust, including its accumulated income.

Non-resident trusts can therefore offer higher-income Canadians the opportunity to defer or avoid Canadian tax on investment income that would otherwise be taxable in Canada.

Consultations will also be initiated on the following proposed modifications to the tax rules governing non-resident trusts:

- That where a Canadian resident transfers or loans property to a non-resident trust, the trust be treated as being resident in Canada and be taxed on all of its undistributed income, subject to a number of exceptions noted below. The Canadian resident transferor would be jointly (with the trust) liable for tax. Where a foreign income tax is imposed in respect of the undistributed income of the trust, a foreign tax credit would be provided. The proposed rules would apply whether or not the trust has a Canadian-resident beneficiary, since in practice it may not be possible to determine whether the property in the trust will be distributed to Canadian beneficiaries.
- That the proposed changes also deal with the distributions from trusts. Distributions out of current income of the trust would be taxed in the hands of the beneficiaries. As well, distributions out of any previously untaxed accumulated income of the trust would be subject to tax.

- That the following trusts be excluded from the application of the proposed rules:
  - — trusts resident in the United States and subject to United States tax provisions;
  - — non-resident trusts set up prior to immigrants' arrival in Canada, for a five-year period after immigration; and
  - — non-resident trusts set up for the benefit of individuals with disabilities or children of divorced parents where the trust and beneficiaries are resident within the same country.
- Additional exceptions could be contemplated to remove from the rules non-resident trusts that are clearly not used to avoid or defer Canadian tax, such as bona fide foreign charitable trusts.
- The proposed rules would apply to any taxation year commencing after 1999, with respect to non-resident trusts to which a Canadian resident transfers or loans property on or after February 16, 1999, subject to the exceptions noted above. Other non-resident trusts to which a transfer or a loan of property was made by a Canadian resident before February 16, 1999, would be subject to the proposed rules for taxation years commencing after 2000.

The proposed changes are consistent with Revenue Canada devoting more resources to the audit of taxpayers whose investment activities extend beyond Canada.

(a) that is a share of the capital stock of, an interest in, or a debt of, a non-resident entity (other than a controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer or a prescribed non-resident entity) or an interest in or a right or option to acquire such a share, interest or debt, and

(b) that may reasonably be considered to derive its value, directly or indirectly, primarily from portfolio investments of that or any other non-resident entity in

(i) shares of the capital stock of one or more corporations,

(ii) indebtedness or annuities,

(iii) interests in one or more corporations, trusts, partnerships, organizations, funds or entities,

(iv) commodities,

(v) real estate,

(vi) Canadian or foreign resource properties,

(vii) currency of a country other than Canada,

(viii) rights or options to acquire or dispose of any of the foregoing, or

and it may reasonably be concluded, having regard to all the circumstances, including

(c) the nature, organization and operation of any non-resident entity and the form of, and the terms and conditions governing, the taxpayer's interest in, or connection with, any non-resident entity,

(d) the extent to which any income, profits and gains that may reasonably be considered to be earned or accrued, whether directly or indirectly, for the benefit of any non-resident entity are subject to an income or profits tax that is significantly less than the income tax that would be applicable to such income, profits and gains if they were earned directly by the taxpayer, and

(e) the extent to which the income, profits and gains of any non-resident entity for any fiscal period are distributed in that or the immediately following fiscal period, that one of the main reasons for the taxpayer acquiring, holding or having the interest in such property was to derive a benefit from portfolio investments in assets described in any of subparagraphs (b)(i) to (ix) in such a manner that the taxes, if any, on the income, profits and gains from such assets for any particular year are significantly less than the tax that would have been applicable under this Part if the income, profits and gains had been earned directly by the taxpayer, there shall be included in computing the taxpayer's income for the year the amount, if any, by which

(f) the total of all amounts each of which is the product obtained when

(i) the designated cost to the taxpayer of the offshore investment fund property at the end of a month in the year

is multiplied by

(ii) the quotient obtained when the prescribed rate of interest for the period including that month is divided by 12

(2) Definitions — In this section,

"designated cost" to a taxpayer at any time in a taxation year of an offshore investment fund property that the taxpayer holds or has an interest in means the amount determined by the formula

A is the cost amount to the taxpayer of the property at that time (determined without reference to paragraphs 53(1)(m) and (q), subparagraph 53(2)(c)(i.3), paragraphs 53(2)(g) and (g.1) and section 143.2),

B is, where an additional amount has been made available by a person to another person after 1984 and before that time, whether by way of gift, loan, payment for a share, transfer of property at less than its fair market value or otherwise, in circumstances such that it may reasonably be concluded that one of the main reasons for so making the additional amount available to the other person was to increase the value of the property, the total of all amounts each of which is the amount, if any, by which such an additional amount exceeds any increase in the cost amount to the taxpayer of the property by virtue of that additional amount,

C is the total of all amounts each of which is an amount included in respect of the offshore investment fund property by virtue of this section in computing the taxpayer's income for a preceding taxation year, and

(a) where the taxpayer has held or has had the interest in the property at all times since the end of 1984, the amount, if any, by which the fair market value of the property at the end of 1984 exceeds the cost amount to the taxpayer of the property at the end of 1984, or

(i) the amount, if any, by which the fair market value of the property at the particular time the taxpayer acquired the property exceeds the cost amount to the taxpayer of the property at the particular time, and

(ii) the amount, if any, by which

(A) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount that would have been included in respect of the property because of this section in computing the taxpayer's income for a taxation year that began before June 20, 1996 if the cost to the taxpayer of the property were equal to the fair market value of the property at the particular time

(B) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount that was included in respect of the property because of this section in computing the taxpayer's income for a taxation year that began before June 20, 1996,

Proposed Amendment — 94.1 to 94.4

Technical Notes [Oct. 30, 2003]: OVERVIEW

Existing Rules

Existing section 94.1 applies where a taxpayer has invested in an offshore investment fund and one of the main reasons for the investment is to reduce or defer the tax liability that would have applied to the income generated from the underlying assets of the fund if such income had been earned directly by the taxpayer. In these circumstances, existing section 94.1 generally requires an amount to be included in computing the taxpayer's income from the investment. This amount is determined, in general terms, by multiplying the cost amount of the taxpayer's investment by a factor based on interest rates prescribed under Part XLIII of the Income Tax Regulations.

New Rules

Section 94.1 is replaced by provisions in new sections 94.1 to 94.4, which contain rules governing the tax treatment of interests in foreign investment entities (FIEs), tracking entities and foreign insurance policies.

In computing a taxpayer's income for a taxation year, new subsection 94.1(4) will generally require an amount to be included in computing the taxpayer's income from the investment. This amount will be determined, in general terms, by multiplying the designated cost of the taxpayer's investment by a factor based on interest rates prescribed under paragraph 4301(b) of the Income Tax Regulations.

If a taxpayer elects and has sufficient information to comply, either new subsection 94.2(4) or 94.3(4) will apply in place of the rules in subsection 94.1(4) for computing income from the investment. However, in the case of interest in a tracking entity, subsection 94.3(4) will not be available, and in the case of an interest in a foreign insurance policy, only subsection 94.2(4) will apply.

Under subsection 94.2(4), a taxpayer must take into account the annual increase or decrease in the fair market value of the taxpayer's interest in computing the taxpayer's income from the interest.

Under subsection 94.3(4), a taxpayer is required to include the taxpayer's share of the FIE's income for each FIE taxation year that ends in the taxpayer's taxation year.

Section 94.4 is designed to prevent double taxation with respect to amounts included in income under any of sections 94.1 to 94.3.

New sections 94.1 to 94.4 apply to taxation years that begin after 2002.

The table below provides an overview of new sections 94.1 to 94.3 and related provisions.

Department of Finance news release, December 17, 2001: Non-Resident Trusts and Foreign Investment Entities

Finance Minister Paul Martin today announced a one-year delay of the effective date of income tax proposals affecting non-resident trusts and foreign investment entities. ...

[The rest of this news release is reproduced at the beginning of proposed s. 94 — ed.]

94.1 Foreign investment entities — Imputed income — (1) Definitions — The following definitions apply in this section and sections 94.2 to 94.4.

Technical Notes: New subsection 94.1(1) defines a number of expressions for the purpose of section 94.1. These definitions are also relevant for the purposes of sections 94.2 and 94.3.

"arm's length interest", at any time in respect of a taxpayer, means a particular participating interest, of the taxpayer, in a non-resident entity, if the following conditions are met:

(a) it is reasonable to conclude that there are at least 150 persons each of which holds at that time participating interests in the non-resident entity that, at that time,

(i) are identical to the particular participating interest, and

(ii) have a total fair market value of at least $500;

(b) the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value, at that time, of the particular participating interest (or of a participating interest in the non-resident entity that is identical to the particular participating interest and that is held, at that time, by the taxpayer or an entity or individual with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length) does not exceed 10% of the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value, at that time, of a participating interest in the non-resident entity that is held, at that time, by any entity or individual and that is identical to the particular participating interest; and

(c) it is reasonable to conclude that participating interests in the non-resident entity that are identical to the particular participating interest can normally be acquired and sold by members of the public in the open market.

Technical Notes: The definition "arm's length interest" is relevant in determining whether a taxpayer's particular participating interest is, under paragraph (e) of the definition "exempt interest" in subsection 94.1(1), an exempt interest and whether an interest has at any time a "readily obtainable fair market value" as defined in subsection 94.2(1). For more information, see the commentary on those definitions.

A particular participating interest in a particular non-resident entity is an arm's length interest at any time only if

- it is reasonable to conclude that there are at least 150 persons each of which holds participating interests in the particular non-resident entity that, at that time, are identical to the particular participating interest, and have a total fair market value of at least $500,
- the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value, at that time, of the particular participating interest or of a participating interest in the non-resident entity that is identical to the particular participating interest and that is held, at that time, by the taxpayer or an entity or individual with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length does not exceed 10% of the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value, at that time, of a participating interest in the non-resident entity that is held, at that time, by any entity or individual and that is identical to the particular participating interest, and
- it is reasonable to conclude that the participating interests in the non-resident entity that are identical to the particular participating interest can normally be acquired and sold by members of the public in the open market.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, August 14, 2003:

Dear [xxx]

Thank you for your letter of May 12, 2003, concerning the application of the provisions contained in the legislative proposals on foreign investment entities ("FIE proposals") that were tabled as a Notice of Ways and Means Motion on October 11, 2002.

Under the FIE Proposals, a taxpayer would generally be required to include in computing the taxpayer's income for a taxation year certain amounts — determined under proposed section 94.1 or 94.2 of the Income Tax Act — in respect of a participating interest of the taxpayer in a FIE. However, these rules generally would not apply to a participating interest that is an exempt interest, as defined in proposed subsection 94.1(1) of the Act, of the taxpayer in a FIE. Proposed paragraph (e) of that definition would treat as an exempt interest a participating interest where a number of conditions are met, including that interests that are identical to it are "widely held and actively traded".

For the purposes of applying sections 94.1 to 94.3 in respect of a taxpayer's participating interest, in a non-resident entity, proposed paragraph 94.1(2)(f) of the Act is intended to provide an exhaustive definition of when participating interests are "widely held and actively traded". More particularly, in addition to the requirements of subparagraphs 94.1(2)(f)(i) and (ii), proposed subparagraph 94.1(2)(f)(iii) would require that the participating interests meet certain liquidity requirements and, in general terms, be qualified for distribution to the general public under the securities law of the country under the laws of which the nonresident entity that issued the participating interests is governed and was formed or organized.

In your letter, you describe an arrangement involving a non-resident entity the participating interests in which would be qualified for public distribution in Canada and could be purchased and sold by Canadian taxpayers in the open market. However, the participating interests would not be qualified for public distribution in the jurisdiction under which the laws of which the particular non-resident entity would be governed and formed or organized. As a result, a taxpayer's participating interest in the entity would not qualify as an exempt interest of the taxpayer under the FIE proposals.

We are prepared to recommend a modification to the requirements contained in proposed subparagraph 94.1(2)(f)(iii). In particular, the rule contained in that subparagraph under the FIE proposals would be replaced by a rule requiring that — in applying the definition in respect of a taxpayer's participating interest in a non-resident entity — participating interests in the non-resident entity, that are identical to the taxpayer's participating interest, can normally be acquired and sold by members of the public in the open market. [This is now in 94.1(1)"arm's length interest" — ed.]

Of course, we cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister of Finance or Parliament will agree with the recommendation that we intend to make in this regard. Nonetheless, we trust that this statement of our position is helpful.

Thank you for writing.

General Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Letter from Dept. of Finance, December 1, 2003:

Dear [xxx]

I am responding to your letter dated November 18, 2003, concerning the application of paragraph (c) of the definition "arm's length interest" in subsection 94.1(1) of the Income Tax Act, found in the legislative proposals released on October 30, 2003 dealing with foreign investment entities. The definition "arm's length interest" is relevant in determining whether a taxpayer's interest in a non-resident entity is an "exempt interest" for purposes of the foreign investment entity provisions.

You have asked that proposed paragraph (c) of the definition be modified so that it applies in circumstances similar to those described in clause 94.1(2)(f)(iii)(B) of the previous iteration of the proposals, released on October 11, 2002. The differences between paragraph (c) of the definition "arm's length interest" of the 2003 legislative proposals and clause 94.1(2)(f)(iii)(B) of the 2002 legislative proposals reflect an attempt to simplify the language of the provisions. There was no intention to change the scope of that clause.

As a result of the uncertainty that this wording change has created, particularly in its relationship to similar wording in other sections of the Act and how those sections are administered, we will recommend that the wording of paragraph (c) of the definition "arm's length interest" of the October 2003 legislative proposals be modified to reflect the wording of clause 94.1(2)(f)(iii)(B) of the 2002 legislative proposals. As a result, a taxpayer would be able to comply with paragraph (c) of the definition "arm's length interest" in respect of its interest in a non-resident entity if it were reasonable to conclude that participating interests in the non-resident entity that are identical to the taxpayer's participating interest can normally be purchased from and sold to the non-resident entity by members of the public.

We thank you for bring[ing] this matter to our attention,

Yours sincerely,

Len Farber

General Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

"beneficiary" has, except for the purpose of paragraph 94.2(11)(f), the meaning assigned by subsection 94(1).

Technical Notes: A reference in sections 94.1 to 94.3 to a "beneficiary" carries, except for the purpose of paragraph 94.2(11)(f) (i.e., a beneficiary in respect of an interest in an insurance policy), the meaning assigned by subsection 94(1). For more information, see the commentary on the definition "beneficiary" in subsection 94(1).

"carrying value", at any time of property of a particular entity in respect of a taxpayer, means

(a) the fair market value at that time of the property, if

(i) the particular entity is an entity (referred to in this subparagraph as the "first entity") in which the taxpayer holds at that time a participating interest or is another entity in which the first entity holds at that time a direct or indirect interest,

(ii) the taxpayer elects, by notifying the Minister in writing in the taxpayer's return of income for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes that time to have this paragraph apply to all of the particular entity's property, and

(iii) the property is property that would be valued for the purpose of the particular entity's financial statements as of that time if those financial statements included the property, if any, that is deemed by paragraph (2)(j) to be owned at that time by the entity; and

(b) in any other case, the amount at which the property would be valued for the purpose of the particular entity's financial statements as of that time if those financial statements included the property, if any, that is deemed by paragraph (2)(j) to be owned at that time by the entity.

Technical Notes: In applying sections 94.1 to 94.4 in respect of a taxpayer, the "carrying value" of a property held by a particular entity at any time means:

- the fair market value of the property at that time, if
  - — the particular entity is an entity (referred to in this note as the "first entity") in which the taxpayer holds at that time a participating interest or is another entity in which the first entity holds at that time a direct or indirect interest,
  - — the taxpayer elects, by notifying the Minister in writing in the taxpayer's return of income for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes that time to have this paragraph apply to all of the particular entity's property, and
  - — the property is property that would be valued for the purpose of the entity's "financial statements" (as defined in subsection 94.1(1)) as of that time if those financial statements included the property, if any, that is deemed by paragraph 94.1(2)(j) to be owned at that time by the entity
- in any other case, the amount at which the property would be valued for the purpose of the entity's financial statements as of that time if those financial statements included the property, if any, that is deemed by paragraph 94.1(2)(j) to be owned at that time by the entity.

The carrying value of property is relevant primarily for the purpose of determining whether a non-resident entity is a FIE. For more information, see the commentary on the definitions "foreign investment entity" and "financial statements".

It should also be noted that paragraph 94.1(2)(j) provides a "lookthrough" rule that can affect the properties considered to be owned by an entity and the carrying values of the entity's properties. In particular, the rule in paragraph 94.1(2)(j) can impute to an entity both ownership of property otherwise owned by certain other entities in which the entity has a significant interest, and the "net accounting income" (as defined in subsection 94.1(1)) and certain business activities of such other entities derived from such property. For the purposes of the look-through rule, the time at which the determination of carrying value is made is the end of the "taxation year" (as defined in subsection 94.1(1)) of the first tier non-resident entity (whether lower tier entities share the same taxation year or not). For more information, see the commentary to new paragraph 94.1(2)(j) and the definition "taxation year".

"designated cost", to a taxpayer at any time of a participating interest held, at that time, by the taxpayer in a foreign investment entity, is the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the cost amount to the taxpayer of the participating interest at that time (determined without reference to paragraphs 53(1)(m) and (q) and 53(2)(g) and (g.1) and section 143.2),

B is an amount included in respect of the participating interest because of this section in computing the taxpayer's income for a taxation year that ends after 2002 and before that time,

C is, if the participating interest was an offshore investment fund property (as defined in subsection 94.1(1) as it read in its application to taxation years that began before 2003) of the taxpayer at the end of the taxpayer's last taxation year that began before 2003, the total of all amounts each of which is the amount determined, in respect of the offshore investment fund property for that last taxation year, under variable B, C or D of the definition "designated cost" in subsection 94.1(2) (as it read in its application to that last taxation year),

D is, if the participating interest was acquired by the taxpayer before 2003, and was not an offshore investment fund property (as defined in subsection 94.1(1) as it read in its application to taxation years that began before 2003) of the taxpayer at the end of the taxpayer's last taxation year that began before 2003, the amount, if any, by which the fair market value of the participating interest at the end of that last taxation year exceeds the cost amount to the taxpayer of the participating interest at the end of that last taxation year,

E is, if one or more particular amounts has been made available by a person to another person after the last 2002 taxation year of the foreign investment entity and before that time (whether by way of gift, loan, payment for a share, transfer of property at less than its fair market value or otherwise) in circumstances in which it can reasonably be concluded that one of the main reasons for making the particular amount available to the other person was to increase the value of the participating interest, the total of all amounts each of which is the amount, if any, by which each particular amount exceeds any increase in the cost amount to the taxpayer of the participating interest because of that particular amount,

F is, if the participating interest is acquired by the taxpayer after 2002, the amount, if any, by which the fair market value of the participating interest at the time it was so acquired exceeds the cost amount to the taxpayer of the participating interest at the time it was so acquired, and

G is, if the participating interest was last acquired by the taxpayer before 2003, and was not an offshore investment fund property (as defined in subsection 94.1(1) as it read in its application to taxation years that began before 2003) of the taxpayer at the end of the taxpayer's last taxation year that began before 2003, the amount, if any, by which the cost amount to the taxpayer of the participating interest at the end of that last taxation year exceeds the fair market value of the participating interest at the end of that last taxation year.

Technical Notes: In computing a taxpayer's income for a taxation year from a participating interest of the taxpayer in a FIE, where subsection 94.1(4) applies, the taxpayer will be required to include the amount, determined under that subsection, in computing the taxpayer's income from the investment. That amount is determined by multiplying the "designated cost" of the taxpayer's investment by a factor based on the interest rate prescribed under paragraph 4301(b) of the Income Tax Regulations.

The designated cost to a taxpayer at any time of a participating interest held at that time by the taxpayer in a foreign investment entity, is determined, in general terms, as follows:

- ADD the cost amount to the taxpayer of the participating interest at that time (determined without reference to certain provisions of the Act),
- ADD the amount of any previous income inclusions, of the taxpayer in respect of the participating interest, arising because of the application of subsection 94.1(4) for a previous taxation year that ends after 2002,
- ADD, if the participating interest was an offshore investment fund property (as defined in subsection 94.1(1) as it read in its application to taxation years that began before the 2003) of the taxpayer at the end of the taxpayer's last taxation year that began before 2003, certain amounts required to be included in computing the designated cost under "old" subsection 94.1(2),
- ADD, if the participating interest was acquired by the taxpayer before 2003, and was not an offshore investment fund property of the taxpayer at the end of the taxpayer's last taxation year that began before 2003, the amount, if any, by which the fair market value of the participating interest at the end of that last taxation year exceeds the cost amount to the taxpayer of the participating interest at the end of that last taxation year,
- ADD, if one or more particular amounts has been made available by a person to another person after the last 2002 taxation year of the foreign investment entity and before that time for the main purpose of increasing the value of the taxpayer's participating interest, the total of all amounts each of which is the amount, if any, by which each particular amount exceeds any increase in the cost amount to the taxpayer of the participating interest because of that particular amount,
- ADD, if the participating interest is acquired by the taxpayer after 2002, the amount, if any, by which the fair market value of the participating interest at the time it was so acquired exceeds the cost amount to the taxpayer of the participating interest at the time it was so acquired, and
- SUBTRACT, if the participating interest was last acquired by the taxpayer before 2003, and was not an offshore investment fund property (as defined in subsection 94.1(1) as it read in its application to taxation years that began before 2003) of the taxpayer at the end of the taxpayer's last taxation year that began before 2003, the amount, if any, by which the cost amount to the taxpayer of the participating interest at the end of that last taxation year exceeds the fair market value of the participating interest at the end of that last taxation year.

"entity" includes an association, a corporation, a fund, a joint venture, an organization, a partnership, a syndicate and a trust, but does not include a natural person.

Technical Notes: An entity includes an association, a corporation, a fund, a joint venture, an organization, a partnership, a syndicate and a trust. It does not include a natural person.

"exempt business", of an entity at any time, means a business (other than a business carried on by the entity principally with entities or individuals with whom the entity does not deal at arm's length, a business carried on by a trust that is an exempt foreign trust because of paragraph (h) of the definition "exempt foreign trust" in subsection 94(1), and a business carried on by the entity as a member, of a partnership, that is not a qualifying member of the partnership, or that would not be such a qualifying member if the entity were a person) that is carried on by the entity at that time and that, throughout the period (in its taxation year that includes that time) during which the business was carried on by the entity, is

(a) carried on by the entity as a foreign bank, a trust company, a credit union, an insurance corporation or, if the entity is controlled by a taxpayer resident in Canada that is described in subparagraph 95(2.1)(a)(i), a trader or dealer in securities or commodities, the activities of which business are regulated under

(i) the laws of

(A) each country in which the business is carried on through a permanent establishment, as defined by regulation, and

(B) the country under whose laws the entity is governed, and any of exists, was (unless the entity was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or was last continued,

(ii) the laws of the country in which the business is principally carried on, or

(iii) the laws (referred to in clause (B) as the "regulating laws") of a country that is a member of the European Union under whose laws another corporation is governed, and any of exists, was (unless the other corporation was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or was last continued, if

(A) the entity is a corporation that is related to the other corporation, and

(B) the business is principally carried on in a country, that is a member of the European Union, the laws of which recognize the regulating laws; or

(b) a business the principal purpose of which is to derive income from

(i) the development and exploitation of Canadian resource property, of foreign resource property, of timber resource property or of any combination of them,

(ii) the leasing or licensing of property that the entity or another entity related to the entity manufactured, produced, developed or purchased and developed,

(iii) the leasing of machinery or equipment that is owned by the entity and that is used by the lessee principally for the purpose of manufacturing or processing goods,

(iv) the sale of real property developed by the entity, an entity related to the entity, or a partnership of which the entity or the related entity is a qualifying member (or would be a qualifying member if the entity were a person),

(v) the rental of real property held by the entity or a partnership of which the entity is a qualifying member (or would be a qualifying member if the entity were a person), if the management, maintenance, and other services in respect of the real property are provided primarily by the employees of

(A) the entity,

(B) a corporation related to the entity,

(C) the partnership,

(D) a qualifying member (or an entity that would be a qualifying member if the entity were a person) of the partnership, or

(E) or any combination of employers described in clauses (A) to (D), or

(vi) a combination of businesses described in subparagraphs (iv) and (v).

Technical Notes: The definition "exempt business" is relevant in determining whether a "non-resident entity" (as defined in subsection 94.1(1)) is carrying on an "investment business" (as defined in subsection 94.1(1)) and whether the non-resident is not a FIE. An investment business does not include an exempt business.

An exempt business of an entity at any time, in general terms, is a business (other than a business carried on by the entity principally with entities or individuals with whom the entity does not deal at arm's length, a business carried on by a trust that is an exempt foreign trust because of paragraph (h) of the definition "exempt foreign trust" in subsection 94(1), and a business carried on by the entity as a member, of a partnership, that is not a qualifying member of the partnership, or that would not be such a qualifying member if the entity were a person) that is carried on by the entity at that time and that, throughout the period (in its taxation year that includes that time) is

- carried on by the entity as a foreign bank, a trust company, a credit union, an insurance corporation or, if the entity is controlled by a taxpayer resident in Canada that is described in subparagraph 95(2.1)(a)(i), a trader or dealer in securities or commodities, the activities of which business are regulated under the laws of a specified country, or
- a business the principal purpose of which is to derive income from certain real estate businesses, certain leasing or licensing businesses, or businesses involved in the development of foreign and Canadian resource properties and timber resources.

The reference in this definition to a "permanent establishment" is intended to carry the meaning of that expression assigned by section 8201 of the Income Tax Regulations. The reference in this definition to a "qualifying member" of a partnership is intended to carry the substantive meaning of that expression assigned by proposed subsection 248(1), contained in the December 20, 2002 legislative proposals relating to income tax. For more detail on the proposed definition "qualifying member" in subsection 248(1), see that provision and its commentary in the legislative proposals and explanatory notes published on December 20, 2002.

For more information generally, see the commentaries on the definitions "foreign investment entity" and "investment business" in subsection 94.1(1).

Related Provisions: 94.1(1)"investment business" — Exempt business excluded from FIE rules.

"exempt interest", of a taxpayer in a non-resident entity at any time, means a participating interest held, at that time, by the taxpayer, in the non-resident entity, if

(a) the non-resident entity is throughout the period, in the non-resident entity's taxation year that includes that time, during which the taxpayer held the participating interest,

(i) a controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer,

(ii) a qualifying entity that is a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer in respect of which the taxpayer has a qualifying interest (within the meaning assigned by paragraph 95(2)(m)), or

(iii) a partnership,

(b) the taxpayer is, throughout its taxation year that includes that time, a financial institution (within the meaning assigned by subsection 142.2(1)) and the participating interest is, at that time,

(i) a mark-to-market property (within the meaning assigned by subsection 142.2(1)), or

(ii) a property described in an inventory of a business of the taxpayer, which inventory is valued, in computing the taxpayer's income for that taxation year from the business, in accordance with section 1801 of the Regulations;

(c) the participating interest is throughout the period, in the non-resident entity's taxation year that includes that time, during which the taxpayer held the participating interest, a right

(i) under an employee stock option plan, or similar agreement, to acquire a share of the capital stock of the non-resident entity,

(ii) granted by the non-resident entity, or another entity with which the non-resident entity does not deal at arm's length, and

(iii) acquired by the taxpayer, at a time when the taxpayer dealt at arm's length with the entity that granted the right, solely because the taxpayer was an employee of an entity referred to in subparagraph (ii);

(d) both

(i) the non-resident entity is throughout the period, in the non-resident entity's taxation year that includes that time, during which the taxpayer held the participating interest, an entity (other than a trust that is an exempt foreign trust because of paragraph (h) of the definition "exempt foreign trust" in subsection 94(1)) all or substantially all of the carrying value of the property of which is attributable to properties that are shares of the capital stock of a corporation (that is not a foreign investment entity) that employs the taxpayer or that is related to another corporation that employs the taxpayer, and

(ii) an amount that is all or substantially all of the non-resident entity's payable net accounting income for its taxation year that includes that time becomes payable by it to its interest holders in that taxation year, or within 120 days after the end of that taxation year, and the taxpayer's share of that amount is included in computing the taxpayer's income for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the time at which it became payable; or

(e) it is reasonable to conclude that the taxpayer has, at that time, no tax avoidance motive in respect of the participating interest, and

(i) throughout the period, in the non-resident entity's taxation year that includes that time, during which the taxpayer held the participating interest,

(A) the participating interest is an arm's length interest of the taxpayer,

(B) the non-resident entity is resident in a country in which there is a prescribed stock exchange, and

(C) participating interests, in the non-resident entity, that are identical to the participating interest are listed on a prescribed stock exchange, or

(ii) both

(A) throughout that period the non-resident entity

(I) is governed by the laws of one or more countries (other than a prescribed country) with which Canada has entered into a tax treaty,

(II) exists, was (unless the entity was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or was last continued, under those laws, and

(III) while it is governed by the laws of a country, is under the tax treaty with that country resident in that country, and

(B) either

(I) throughout that period the participating interest is an arm's length interest of the taxpayer, or

(II) throughout that period the non-resident entity is, under the tax treaty with the United States of America, resident in the United States of America, and throughout the period, in the taxpayer's taxation year that includes that time, during which the taxpayer is resident in Canada, the taxpayer is a citizen of the United States of America and is liable for and subject to income tax in the United States of America for that taxation year because of that citizenship.

Technical Notes: The FIE income inclusion rules under any of subsections 94.1(4), 94.2(4) or 94.3(4) apply to a taxpayer for a year generally only where subsection 94.1(3) applies to the taxpayer. Subsection 94.1(3) will not apply to a taxpayer for a particular taxation year of the taxpayer in respect of a participating interest of the taxpayer in a non-resident entity if at the end of a taxation year of the non-resident entity that ends in the particular taxation year the taxpayer's participating interest is an "exempt interest". An exempt interest of a taxpayer in a non-resident entity is defined to mean at any time a particular participating interest held by the taxpayer in the non-resident entity if any of the following applies:

- The non-resident entity is a controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer (including an affiliate that is a controlled foreign affiliate because of an election under new paragraph 94.1(2)(h)); a "qualifying entity" (as defined in subsection 94.1(1) that is a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer in respect of which the taxpayer has a qualifying interest (within the meaning assigned by paragraph 95(2)(m)); or a partnership.
- The taxpayer is a financial institution (as defined in subsection 142.2(1)) and the participating interest is a mark-to-market property (as defined in that same subsection) or a property described in an inventory of a business of the taxpayer, which inventory is valued, in computing the taxpayer's income from the business, in accordance with section 1801 of the Income Tax Regulations;

- The participating interest is a right
  - — under an employee stock option plan, or similar agreement, to acquire a share of the capital stock of the non-resident entity,
  - — granted by the non-resident entity, or another entity with which the non-resident entity does not deal at arm's length,
  - — acquired by the taxpayer, at a time when the taxpayer dealt at arm's length with the entity that granted the right, and
  - — acquired by the taxpayer solely because the taxpayer was an employee of the non-resident entity, or another entity with which the non-resident entity does not deal at arm's length;
- The non-resident entity is an entity (other than a trust that is an exempt foreign trust because of paragraph (h) of the definition "exempt foreign trust" in subsection 94(1)) all or substantially all of the carrying value of the property of which is attributable to properties that are shares of the capital stock of a corporation (that is not a foreign investment entity) that employs the taxpayer or that is related to another corporation that employs the taxpayer, and an amount that is all or substantially all of the non-resident entity's "payable net accounting income" (as defined in subsection 94.1(1)) becomes payable (as determined under paragraph 94.1(2)(o)) by it to its interest holders within specified times, and the taxpayer's share of that amount is included in computing the taxpayer's income for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the time at which it became payable; or
- It is reasonable to conclude that the taxpayer had no tax avoidance motive (determined by reference to paragraphs 94.1(2)(k) to (n)) in respect of the particular participating interest, and
  - — the particular participating interest is an "arm's length interest" (as defined in subsection 94.1(1)) of the taxpayer, the non-resident entity is resident (determined by reference to paragraph 94.1(2)(g)) in a country in which there is a prescribed stock exchange, and participating interests in the non-resident entity that are identical to the particular participating interest are listed on a prescribed stock exchange, or
  - — the non-resident entity is governed by the laws of one or more countries (other than a prescribed country) with which Canada has entered into a tax treaty, the non-resident entity exists, was (unless the entity was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or was last continued, under those laws, while it is governed by the laws of a country, the non-resident entity is under the tax treaty with that country resident in that country, and either
    - (I) the participating interest is an arm's length interest of the taxpayer, or
    - (II) the non-resident entity is, under the tax treaty with the United States of America, resident in the United States of America, and throughout the period, in the taxpayer's taxation year that includes that time, during which the taxpayer is resident in Canada, the taxpayer is a citizen of the United States of America and is liable for and subject to income tax in the United States of America for that taxation year because of that citizenship.

The definition "exempt interest" is also relevant in applying subsection 94.2(9) in determining whether subsection 94.1(4) or 94.2(4) will apply to a taxpayer's interest in a "tracking entity" (as defined in subsection 94.2(1)). However, note that a taxpayer's interest in a controlled foreign affiliate, or a qualifying entity (other than a partnership), will not avoid being subject to subsection 94.2(9) solely because it is an exempt interest. For more information, see the commentary on those provisions.

Regulations: 3201 (prescribed stock exchange for subpara. (e)(i)). No prescribed countries have been proposed for subcl. (e)(ii)(A)(I).

"exempt property", of a particular entity at any time, means, in determining whether a particular taxpayer's interest in the particular entity is a participating interest in a foreign investment entity,

(a) a property, of the particular entity, that is at that time used or held principally in a business (other than a business that is at that time an investment business carried on by the particular entity or by another entity related, otherwise than by reason of a right referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b), to the particular entity) carried on by the particular entity or another entity related (otherwise than by reason of a right referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b)) to the particular entity;

(b) indebtedness owing by another entity (referred to in this paragraph as the "indebted entity"), if

(i) each of the particular entity and the indebted entity is, at that time,

(A) a foreign affiliate

(I) of the particular taxpayer, and

(II) in respect of which the particular taxpayer has a qualifying interest (within the meaning assigned by paragraph 95(2)(m)), or

(B) a foreign affiliate

(I) of another entity that is resident in Canada and of which the particular taxpayer is a controlled foreign affiliate, and

(II) in respect of which the other entity referred to in subclause (I) has a qualifying interest (within the meaning assigned by paragraph 95(2)(m)), and

(ii) the indebtedness would be excluded property (within the meaning of the definition "excluded property" in subsection 95(1)) of the particular entity, if

(A) the taxpayer referred to in that definition were the particular taxpayer and the foreign affiliate of the taxpayer referred to in that definition were the particular entity, or

(B) the taxpayer referred to in that definition were the other entity described in subclause (i)(B)(I) and the foreign affiliate of the taxpayer referred to in that definition were the particular entity; and

(c) a particular property, if

(i) the particular property (or other property for which the particular property is substituted) was acquired by the particular entity at any time within the 36-month period that ends at the particular time (or within any longer period that ends at the particular time that the Minister considers reasonable if the particular entity applies, in writing, to the Minister within 36 months after the property was acquired by the particular entity) because the particular entity

(A) issued a debt or a participating interest in the particular entity,

(B) disposed of property used principally in a business, other than an investment business, carried on by the particular entity or an entity related (otherwise than by reason of a right referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b)) to the particular entity,

(C) disposed of a participating interest in another entity all or substantially all of the fair market value of the property of which is attributable to property used principally in a business, other than an investment business, carried on by the other entity or an entity related (otherwise than by reason of a right referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b)) to the other entity, or

(D) accumulated income of the particular entity derived from a business, other than an investment business, carried on by the particular entity or an entity related (otherwise than by reason of a right referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b)) to the particular entity, and

(ii) the issuance, disposition or accumulation referred to in subparagraph (i) was made or amassed for the purpose of

(A) acquiring property to be used principally in, or making expenditures for the purpose of earning income from, a business, other than an investment business, carried on by the particular entity or an entity related (otherwise than by reason of a right referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b)) to the particular entity, or

(B) acquiring a participating interest that is a significant interest in another entity all or substantially all of the fair market value of the property of which is attributable to property used principally in a business, other than an investment business, carried on by the other entity.

Technical Notes: The definition "exempt property" is relevant in determining whether a property is an "investment property"(as defined in subsection 94.1(1)) and whether a "non-resident entity" (as defined in subsection 94.1(1)) is not a FIE. Except for the purposes of applying the definitions "investment business" in subsection 94.1(1) and "tracking entity" in subsection 94.2(1), investment property does not include exempt property.

In general terms, exempt property of a particular entity means at any time, in determining whether a particular taxpayer's interest in the particular entity is a participating interest in a FIE,

- under paragraph (a) of the definition, a property, of the particular entity, that is at that time used or held principally in a business (other than an investment business) carried on by the particular entity or a related entity,
- under paragraph (b) of the definition, indebtedness (that would be "excluded property", as defined in subsection 95(1), of the particular entity if certain assumptions applied) owing by a debtor to the particular entity, where the particular entity and the debtor are foreign affiliates of the taxpayer or of another entity of which the taxpayer is a controlled foreign affiliate and in respect of which the taxpayer or the other entity, as the case may be, has a qualifying interest (as defined in subsection 95(2)(m)).

In addition, under paragraph (c) of the definition, exempt property means a property acquired by the particular entity within the 36 months preceding that time (or where written application has been made to the Minister of National Revenue by the taxpayer within 36 months of having acquired the property, within such longer period as the Minister considers reasonable in the circumstances) as a result of qualified activities. Those activities are

- the issuance of a debt or a participating interest in the particular entity;
- the disposition of property used in a business (other than an investment business) carried on by the particular entity or an entity related (otherwise than by reason of a right referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b)) to the particular entity;
- the disposition of a participating interest in another entity all or substantially all of the fair market value of the property of which is attributable to property used principally in a business (other than an investment business) carried on by the other entity or an entity related (otherwise than by reason of a right referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b)) to the other entity; and
- the accumulation of income of the particular entity derived from a business (other than an investment business) carried on by the particular entity or an entity related (otherwise than by reason of a right referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b)) to the particular entity,

The qualified activities also must have been undertaken for the purpose of

- acquiring property to be used principally in or making expenditures for the purpose of earning income from a business (other than an investment business) carried on by the entity or an entity related to the entity, or
- acquiring a participating interest that is a significant interest in another entity all or substantially all of the fair market value of the property of which is attributable to property used or held principally in the course of earning income from a business, other than an investment business, carried on by the other entity.

"exempt taxpayer", for a taxation year of the taxpayer, means

(a) a person whose taxable income for a period that ends at the end of the taxation year is exempt from tax under this Part because of subsection 149(1) (otherwise than because of paragraph 149(1)(q.1), (t) or (z));

(b) a trust (other than a personal trust) if

(i) the only beneficiaries (in this paragraph, determined without reference to subsection 248(25) under the trust are persons,

(ii) the interest of each beneficiary under the trust is, at all times that the interest exists during the taxation year, a specified fixed interest (as defined in subsection 94(1)) of the beneficiary in the trust,

(iii) each beneficiary under the trust at any time in the taxation year is a person whose taxable income, for the period that includes all of those times in the taxation year, is exempt from tax under this Part because of subsection 149(1) (otherwise than because of paragraph 149(1)(q.1), (t) or (z)), and

(iv) the trust is resident in Canada at the end of the taxation year; and

(c) an individual (other than a trust) who, before the end of the taxation year, was resident in Canada for a period of, or periods the total of which is, not more than 60 months, but not including an individual who, before the end of the taxation year, was never non-resident;

Technical Notes: The rules in new sections 94.1 to 94.4 do not apply in respect of periods during which a taxpayer is an exempt taxpayer. For more information, see the commentary on paragraph 94.1(3)(a) and subsections 94.2(9) and (10).

An individual is an "exempt taxpayer" for a taxation year where the individual, before the end of the year, was a resident of Canada for a period of, or periods the total of which is, 60 months or less. (Individuals who have never been non-resident cannot fall within the 60-month exception.) This 60-month exemption for new immigrants to Canada is similar to an exemption in the rules for non-resident trusts in existing section 94.

Except as indicated below, tax-exempt entities to which subsection 149(1) applies are also exempt taxpayers. Retirement compensation arrangements and qualifying environmental trusts for which alternative income tax rules are provided under Parts XI.3 and XII.4 and insurers to which paragraph 149(1)(t) applies are not exempt taxpayers.

An exempt taxpayer also includes a Canadian resident pooled fund trust under which the only beneficiaries (determined without reference to subsection 248(25)) are the tax-exempt persons described above that would qualify as exempt taxpayers with respect to another trust if they held their beneficial interests directly in that other trust. However, such a pooled fund trust would qualify as an exempt taxpayer only if all of the interests in the trust are "specified fixed interests" (As defined in subsection 94(1)).

The express reference to tax-exempt entities is generally of significance for the purposes of calculating Part I tax only in the context of the narrow circumstances to which new subsection 94.2(17) applies. That subsection contemplates a case where a taxpayer ceases to be an "exempt taxpayer" and subsequently becomes an "exempt taxpayer". However, ther reference to tax-exempt entities may also be of significance in the context of Part XI (foreign property limits), given that the application of sections 94.1 to 94.4 has an impact on the cost amount of participating interests in FIEs.

"financial statements", of a particular entity for a particular taxation year of the entity and in respect of a taxpayer, means

(a) the balance sheet and the statement of income of the particular entity, if

(i) the particular entity is an entity (referred to in this subparagraph as the "first entity") in which the taxpayer holds, in the particular taxation year, a participating interest or is another entity in which the first entity has, in the particular taxation year, a direct or indirect interest,

(ii) the taxpayer elects (in the taxpayer's return of income for the taxpayer's taxation year in which the particular taxation year ends) to have this paragraph apply in respect of the particular entity and the participating interest, and

(iii) that balance sheet and statement of income would be prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles used in Canada for the particular year or in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles that are substantially similar to those used in Canada if those principles did not require consolidation; and

(b) in any other case, the balance sheet and statement of income of the particular entity, if that balance sheet and statement of income are prepared for the particular taxation year in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles used for the taxation year in Canada or in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles that are substantially similar to those used for the taxation year in Canada.

Technical Notes: The definition "financial statements" is relevant primarily for the purpose of determining whether a non-resident entity is a FIE. For more information, see the commentary on the definitions "foreign investment entity" and "carrying value".

In general, the financial statements, for a taxation, of an entity will be the balance sheet and statement of income provided by the entity to its investors if they are prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles used for the taxation year in Canada or in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles that are substantially similar (including by reference to paragraph 94.1(2)(b)) to those used for the taxation year in Canada. Taxpayers, will however, be allowed to elect to treat an unconsolidated balance sheet and statement of income of an entity as its financial statements if they are prepared in accordance with those principles (or would be so prepared if those principles did not require consolidation).

More precisely, in applying sections 94.1 to 94.4 to a taxpayer, the financial statements, of a particular entity for a particular taxation year of the entity, are

- the balance sheet and the statement of income of the particular entity, if
  - the particular entity is an entity (referred to in this note as the "first entity") in which the taxpayer holds, in the particular taxation year, a participating interest or is another entity in which the first entity has, in the particular taxation year, a direct or indirect interest,
  - the taxpayer elects (in the taxpayer's return of income for the taxpayer's taxation year in which the particular taxation year ends) to have this paragraph apply in respect of the particular entity and the participating interest, and
  - that balance sheet and statement of income would be prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles used in Canada for the particular year or in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles that are substantially similar to those used in Canada if those principles did not require consolidation; and
- in any other case, the balance sheet and statement of income of the particular entity, if that balance sheet and statement of income are prepared for the particular taxation year in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles used for the taxation year in Canada or in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles that are substantially similar to those used for the taxation year in Canada.

"foreign bank" has the same meaning assigned by subsection 95(1).

Technical Notes: The definition "foreign bank" has the same meaning as in subsection 95(1). The expression is used in the definition "exempt business".

Related Provisions: 94.1(1)"exempt business"(a) — Exclusion of foreign bank from FIE rules.

"foreign investment entity", at any time, means an entity that is, at that time, a non-resident entity unless,

(a) at the end of its taxation year that includes that time, it is an exempt foreign trust (as defined by the definition "exempt foreign trust" in subsection 94(1)) other than a trust that is an exempt foreign trust because of paragraph (g) (read without reference to its clause (iii)(A)) of that definition or paragraph (h) of that definition;

(b) at the end of that taxation year, the carrying value of all of its investment property is not greater than one-half of the carrying value of all of its property; or

(c) throughout that taxation year, its principal undertaking was the carrying on of a business that is not an investment business.

Technical Notes: Under subsection 94.1(3), the new tax regime for FIEs in sections 94.1 to 94.4 generally applies only to participating interests in a "foreign investment entity" as defined in subsection 94.1(1).

A non-resident entity (as defined in subsection 94.1(1)) at any time will be a FIE at that time, unless any one of the following exceptions applies to the non-resident entity:

- at the end of its taxation year that includes that time, it is an "exempt foreign trust" (as defined in new subsection 94(1)) other than a trust that is an exempt foreign trust because of paragraph (h) of that definition or paragraph (g) (read without reference to its clause (iii)(A)) of that definition,
- at the end of its taxation year that includes that time, the carrying value of all of its investment property is not greater than one-half of the carrying value of all of its property, or
- throughout its taxation year that includes that time, its principal undertaking was the carrying on of a business that is not an investment business.

The new rules are designed so that, in the case of partnerships, members' shares of incomes and losses are allocated in accordance with section 96 (including new subsection 96(1.9), described in the commentary below).

For more information generally, see the commentary on the definitions "entity", "exempt interest", "non-resident entity", "investment property" and "carrying value" in subsection 94.1(1) and "exempt foreign trust" in subsection 94(1). See also the commentary on paragraphs 94.1(2)(a), (b), (e) and (h) to (j) and paragraph 96(1)(d).

Related Provisions: 94.1(2)(q) — Paras. (a)–(d) do not apply if information not provided to CCRA on request.

"investment business", of an entity at any time, means a business (other than a business that is at that time an exempt business) carried on by the entity (including, for greater certainty, a business carried on by the entity as a member of a partnership) at that time, the principal purpose of which is to derive income or profits described in any of the following paragraphs:

(a) income (including interest, dividends, rents, royalties or any similar return on investment or any substitute for such a return) from property;

(b) income from the insurance or reinsurance of risks;

(c) income from the factoring of trade accounts receivable; or

(d) profits from the disposition of investment property.

Technical Notes: The expression "investment business" is relevant in determining whether a non-resident entity is a FIE or a "qualifying entity", as defined in subsection 94.1(1). An "investment business" of an entity at any time, means a business (other than a business that is at that time an exempt business) carried on by the entity (including, for greater certainty, a business carried on by the entity as a member of a partnership) at that time, if the principal purpose of the business is to derive any of the following income or profits:

- income (including interest, dividends, rents, royalties or any similar return on investment or any substitute for such a return) from property,
- income from the insurance or reinsurance of risks,
- income from the factoring of trade accounts receivable,
- profits from the disposition of investment property.

"investment property", of a particular entity at any time, includes property of the particular entity that is at that time

(a) a share of the capital stock of a corporation,

(b) an interest as a member of a partnership,

(c) an interest as a beneficiary under a trust,

(h) real property,

(i) a Canadian resource property or a foreign resource property,

(j) currency,

(k) a derivative financial product, or

but, does not include

(m) except for the purpose of applying the definition "investment business" in this subsection or the definition "tracking entity" in subsection 94.2(1), property that is at that time exempt property of the particular entity,

(n) except for the purpose of applying the definition "qualifying entity", property that is at that time

(i) a share of the capital stock of the particular entity,

(ii) a share of the capital stock of a corporation that is, throughout the period, in the particular entity's taxation year that includes that time, during which the particular entity holds the share, a qualifying entity if the particular entity has at that time a significant interest in that qualifying entity or that qualifying entity has at that time a significant interest in the particular entity,

(iii) an interest in a partnership that is, throughout the period, in the particular entity's taxation year that includes that time, during which the particular entity is a member of the partnership, a qualifying entity if the particular entity has at that time a significant interest in that qualifying entity or that qualifying entity has at that time a significant interest in the particular entity, or

(iv) indebtedness owing by an entity that is, throughout the period, in the particular entity's taxation year that includes that time, during which the particular entity holds the indebtedness, a qualifying entity if the particular entity has at that time a significant interest in that qualifying entity or that qualifying entity has at that time a significant interest in the particular entity,

(o) a commodity (referred to in this paragraph and paragraph (p) as an "exempt commodity") that is manufactured, produced, grown, extracted or processed by the particular entity or a person related (otherwise than because of a right referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b)) to the particular entity, and

(p) a commodity future in respect of an exempt commodity.

Technical Notes: The expression "investment property" includes a list of specified properties. Most of the specified properties (e.g., shares, partnership interests, real estate and resource properties) are also specified in the definition of the same expression in subsection 95(1). In addition to the properties also specified in the definition in subsection 95(1), "investment property" held by a particular entity includes:

- an interest in an organization, fund or other entity;
- most derivative financial products; and
- interests, options and rights in respect of the above properties.

It should be noted, however, that investment property of an entity does not include

- except for the purpose of applying the definition "investment business" in subsection 94.1(1) or the definition "tracking entity" in subsection 94.2(1), an "exempt property" (as defined in subsection 94.1(1)),
- except for the purpose of applying the definition "qualifying entity", a "significant interest" (as defined in subsection 94.1(1)) in a "qualifying entity" (as defined in subsection 94.1(1)), an interest in a qualifying entity that has a significant interest in the entity, and debt owing by qualifying entities in which the entity has a significant interest or by a qualifying entity that has a significant interest in the entity, and
- certain exempt commodities and futures in respect of those exempt commodities.

The definition is relevant for the purpose of the determining whether a non-resident entity is a FIE. For more information, see the commentary on the definitions "investment business", "qualifying entity", "significant interest", and "exempt property" in subsection 94.1(1).

"net accounting income", of an entity for a taxation year of the entity, means its net income, before income taxes and extraordinary items, for the year reported in its financial statements for the year.

Technical Notes: The net accounting income of an entity for a taxation year means the amount that is its net income, before income taxes and extraordinary items, for the year reported in its financial statements for the year. For more information, see the commentary on the definition "financial statements" in subsection 94.1(1).

"non-resident entity", at any time, means

(a) a corporation or trust that is non-resident at that time; and

(b) any entity (other than a corporation or trust) that at that time

(i) exists, was (unless the entity was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or was last continued under the laws of a country or a political subdivision of a country other than Canada, or

(ii) is governed under the laws of a country or a political subdivision of a country other than Canada.

Technical Notes: One of the requirements for an entity to be a FIE to which sections 94.1 to 94.4 apply is that the entity be a "non-resident entity". In this regard, it should be noted that, under proposed subparagraph 94(3)(a)(iv), certain trusts that would otherwise be non-resident are deemed (for certain limited purposes including the definition "non-resident entity") to be resident in Canada for taxation years in which the trust has a resident contributor or a resident beneficiary. For more information, see the commentary to new subsection 94(3).

In addition to non-resident corporations and trusts, a "non-resident entity" includes at any time any other type of entity that at that time

- exists, was (unless the entity was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or was last continued under the laws of a country or a political subdivision of a country other than Canada, or
- is governed under the of a country or a political subdivision of a country other than Canada.

Related Provisions: 94(3)(a)(iv) [proposed] — Application to trust deemed resident in Canada.

"participating interest", of a particular entity or individual in a non-resident entity, means a property that is

(a) if the non-resident entity is a corporation, a share of the capital stock of the corporation;

(b) if the non-resident entity is a trust, a specified interest in the trust;

(c) if the non-resident entity is not a corporation or trust, an interest in the non-resident entity; and

(d) under a contract, in equity or otherwise, either immediately or in the future and either absolutely or contingently, convertible into, exchangeable for, or a right to acquire, directly or indirectly,

(i) a property described in any of paragraphs (a) to (c), or

(ii) a property (other than money) the fair market value of which is determined primarily by reference to the fair market value of a property described in any of paragraphs (a) to (c).

Technical Notes: A "participating interest" in an entity means a share of the capital stock of corporation, a specified interest (as defined in subsection 94.1(1)) in a trust and an interest in any other type of entity.

It also includes a property that is (under a contract, in equity or otherwise, either immediately or in the future and either absolutely or contingently) convertible into, exchangeable for, or confers a right to acquire

- such a share, specified interest or other interest, or
- a property (other than money) the fair market value of which is determined primarily by reference to the fair market value of such a share, interest as a beneficiary or other interest in an entity.

For a related rule that applies in determining whether an interest is a participating interest, see the commentary on paragraph 94.1(2)(s).

Related Provisions: 53(1)(m)(iii) — Addition to adjusted cost base of participating interest; 94.1(2) — Rules of application for participating interest; 94.1(2)(s) — Indirect participating interest deemed not to be participating interest; 94.2(13) — Cost of participating interest under mark-to-market rules; 96(1)(d)(iii) — Where partnership owns participating interest; 98(7) — Where partnership holding participating interest ceases to exist; 248(1)"specified participating interest" — Participating interest other than exempt interest; 248(9.2) — Meaning of "indefeasibly vested".

"payable net accounting income", of an entity for a taxation year of the entity, means its net income, after income taxes and extraordinary items, for the year reported in its financial statements for the year.

Technical Notes: The payable net accounting income, of an entity for a taxation year of the entity, means its net income, after income taxes and extraordinary items, for the year reported in its "financial statements" (as defined in subsection 94.1(1)) for the year.

This definition is relevant in determining whether an interest in a non-resident entity is an "exempt interest" (as defined in subsection 94.1(1)) in the entity. In particular, it is relevant in applying paragraph (d) of the definition "exempt interest" in subsection 94.1(1) and paragraphs 94.1(2)(m) and (n).

Related Provisions: 94.1(1)"financial statements" — Meaning of "financial statements".

"qualifying entity", in a period, means a particular entity that is a corporation or partnership all or substantially all of the carrying value of the property of which is, throughout the period, attributable to the carrying value of particular property that is, throughout the portion of the period that the particular property is property of the particular entity,

(a) property other than investment property;

(b) investment property that is a participating interest in or debt issued by another entity if, throughout the portion of the period that the participating interest or debt is property of the particular entity,

(i) the principal business of the other entity is not an investment business, and

(ii) either

(A) the particular entity has a significant interest in the other entity, or

(B) the particular entity

(I) actively participates in or exercises significant influence over the governance or the management of that other entity, directly or indirectly, by reason of its status as a holder of a significant number of participating interests in that other entity (when compared to the number of participating interests held by each other holder of interests in the corporation) or by reason of an agreement in writing between the particular entity and one or more other holders of a significant number of participating interests in that other entity, or

(II) carries out a plan of action that it has established for the purpose of obtaining its objective of actively participating in or exercising significant influence over the governance or the management of that other entity, directly or indirectly, by reason of its status as a holder of a significant number of participating interests in that other entity (when compared to the number of participating interests held by each other holder of interests in the particular entity) or by reason of an agreement in writing between the particular entity and one or more other holders of a significant number of participating interests in that other entity;

(c) investment property in respect of which the particular entity establishes that the property or proceeds from the disposition of the property is to be used by the particular entity for the purpose of acquiring property described in paragraph (a) or (b); or

(d) investment property that is a particular property held by the particular entity if

(i) the particular property (or other property for which the particular property is substituted property) was last acquired by the particular entity within 36 months before the end of the period (or within any greater number of months that the Minister considers reasonable if the particular entity applies, in writing, to the Minister within the 36 months after the property was acquired by the particular entity),

(ii) the particular property was so acquired by the particular entity because it

(A) issued a debt, or a participating interest in it,

(B) disposed of property described in any of paragraphs (a) to (c), or

(C) accumulated its income, and

(iii) the issuance, disposition or accumulation referred to in subparagraph (ii) was made or amassed for the purpose of acquiring property that, if owned by the particular entity, would be property described in any of paragraphs (a) to (c).

Technical Notes: A "qualifying entity" in a period means a particular entity that is a partnership or a corporation all or substantially all of the "carrying value" (as defined in subsection 94.1(1)) of the property of which is, throughout the period, attributable to the carrying value of property that is:

- property other than "investment property" (as defined in subsection 94.1(1)),
- investment property that is a participating interest in or debt of another entity if the other entity is an entity whose principal business is not an investment business and the particular entity has either a significant interest in the other entity or a strategic interest in the other entity,
- investment property in respect of which the particular entity establishes that the property or proceeds from the disposition of the property is to be used by the particular entity for the purpose of acquiring property described in the two paragraphs above,
- investment property that is held by the particular entity if the particular property (or other property for which the particular property is substituted property) was last acquired by the particular entity within 36 months before the end of the period (or, where applicable conditions are met, within such longer period as the Minister considers reasonable in the circumstances), as a result of qualifying activities.

For this purpose, qualifying activities are

- the issuance of a debt or a participating interest in the entity,
- the disposition of property described in any of paragraphs (a) to (c) of the definition "qualifying entity", and

- the accumulation of income of the entity.

The qualifying activities must also have been made for the purpose of acquiring property that, if owned by the entity, would be property described in paragraph (a) to (c) of the definition of "qualifying entity".

For the purpose of applying this definition, an entity will be considered to have a strategic interest in another entity where the entity participates in or has established a plan of action for participating in the management and control of the other entity by reason of its status as a holder of a significant number (not to be confused with the "significant interest" definition) of participating interests in the other entity (in comparison with the number of participating interests held by each holder of interests in the entity) or an agreement with other such significant interest holders.

In establishing if an entity actively participates in or exercises a significant influence over the governance or the management of an other entity the following facts (among others) will be considered:

- whether the entity, alone or in alliance with others, appoints members of the board of directors and management;
- whether the entity, alone or in alliance with others, significantly influences the appointment of members of the board of directors and management; and
- whether the entity, alone or in alliance with others, is actively involved in the strategic planning for the entity.

In determining if an entity is carrying out a plan of action for the purpose of obtaining its objective of actively participating in or exercising significant influence over the governance or the management of another entity, all factors will be considered. For example, an entity's board-approved plan of action, board minutes, investment studies and other material relating to the strategic investment will be considered. As well, evidence that increasing numbers of shares of the other entity are being bought or that property is being sold in order to raise money to acquire such shares will be considered important factors. The entity's investment history and patterns will also be considered.

Finally, it should be noted that under paragraph 94.1(2)(r), the definition "qualifying entity" in subsection (1) does not apply in determining whether a taxpayer has a participating interest in a FIE, if the Minister sends a written demand to a taxpayer requesting additional information for the purpose of enabling the Minister to determine whether an entity is a qualifying entity, and information satisfactory to the Minister to make the determination is not received by the Minister within 60 days (or within such longer period as is acceptable to the Minister) after the Minister sends the demand.

For more information, see the commentary on paragraph 94.1(2)(r) and on the definitions "carrying value", "significant interest" and "investment property" in subsection 94.1(1).

Related Provisions: 87(2)(j.95) — Amalgamations — continuing corporation; 94.1(1)"exempt interest"(a)(ii) — Share of QE can be exempt interest; 94.1(2)(r) — Deemed not qualifying entity if information not provided to CCRA on request.

"significant interest", of a particular entity in another entity at any time, means

(a) if the other entity is a corporation, a share of the capital stock of the corporation, if at that time the particular entity or the particular entity together with entities related (otherwise than by reason of a right referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b)) to the particular entity holds shares of the capital stock of the corporation

(i) that would give the particular entity, or the particular entity together with entities related (otherwise than by reason of a right referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b)) to the particular entity, 25% or more of the votes that could be cast under all circumstances at an annual meeting of shareholders of the corporation, and

(ii) that have a fair market value of 25% or more of the fair market value of all of the issued and outstanding shares of the corporation;

(b) if the other entity is a partnership, an interest of the particular entity as a member of the partnership, if at that time the particular entity, or the particular entity together with entities related (otherwise than by reason of a right referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b)) to the particular entity, holds interests as a member of the partnership that have a fair market value of 25% or more of the fair market value of all membership interests in the partnership; and

(c) if the other entity is a non-discretionary trust, an interest as a beneficiary under the trust, if at that time the particular entity, or the particular entity together with entities related (otherwise than by reason of a right referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b)) to the particular entity, holds such interests under the trust that have a fair market value of 25% or more of the fair market value of all the interests as beneficiaries under the trust.

Technical Notes: An entity is considered to have a significant interest in a corporation, partnership, or non-discretionary trust if the entity or a group of entities comprised of the entity and entities related to the entity holds shares or interests in the corporation, partnership or trust that have a fair market value equal to 25% or more of the fair market value of all the shares or interests in the corporation, partnership or trust and, in the case of a corporation, the entity or the group of entities comprised of the entity and the entities related to the entity has shares entitling the entity to cast at least 25% of votes at an annual shareholders' meeting of the corporation.

In these circumstances, the entity's significant interest will be its share of the capital stock of the corporation, its interest as a member of the partnership or its interest as a beneficiary under the trust, as the case may be.

"specified interest", at any time of an entity or individual in a trust, means, an interest of the entity or individual as a beneficiary under the trust if

(a) the trust is at that time an exempt foreign trust because of paragraph (g) or (h) of the definition "exempt foreign trust" in subsection 94(1); or

(b) the interest includes at that time a right of the entity or individual as a beneficiary under the trust to receive at or after that time income or capital of the trust, unless the entity or individual is at that time a testamentary beneficiary, under the trust, as defined by subsection 94(1).

Technical Notes: The definition "specified interest" applies in determining whether an entity or individual has a "participating interest" (as defined in subsection 94.1(1)) in a non-resident entity that is a trust. A specified interest at any time of an entity or individual in a trust, means, an interest of the entity or individual as a beneficiary under the trust if

- The trust is at that time an exempt foreign trust because of paragraph (g) or (h) of the definition "exempt foreign trust" in subsection 94(1). As a result, an interest in a foreign commercial investment trust or in certain employee benefit arrangements will generally be subject to the income computation requirements in sections 94.1 to 94.4 if the trusts are FIEs or tracking entities; or
- The interest includes at that time a right of the entity or individual as a beneficiary under the trust to receive at or after that time income or capital of the trust. However, such an interest will not be treated as a participating interest if the the entity or individual is at that time a testamentary beneficiary, under the trust, as defined by subsection 94(1) (i.e., is a beneficiary under the trust solely because of certain rights to use or receive trust property only after the death of specified entities or individuals).

"specified party" in respect of a particular individual or particular entity, as the case may be, means another individual or other entity that does not deal at arm's length with the particular individual or the particular entity, as the case may be.

Technical Notes: The definition "specified party" is relevant in determining whether a taxpayer has an avoidance motive in respect of a participating interest in a FIE. This determination is relevant to applying the definition "exempt interest" in subsection 94.1(1). For more information, see the commentary on the definition "exempt interest".

A specified party in respect of a particular individual or particular entity, as the case may be, means another individual or other entity that does not deal at arm's length with the particular individual or the particular entity, as the case may be.

"taxation year", of a non-resident entity that is not a corporation or an individual, means

(a) in respect of a business or property of the non-resident entity for which the accounts of the non-resident entity are ordinarily made up, the period that would be determined under section 249.1 in respect of the non-resident entity if the non-resident entity were a corporation; and

(b) in any other case, a calendar year.

Technical Notes: The "taxation year" of a non-resident entity that is a corporation or an individual is generally determined in accordance with subsection 249(1) and paragraph 250.1(a). Where the non-resident entity is not an individual or a corporation, this definition provides that the entity's taxation year means:

- in respect of a business or property of the non-resident entity for which the accounts of the non-resident entity are ordinarily made up, the period that would be determined under section 249.1 in respect of the non-resident entity if the non-resident entity were a corporation, and
- in any other case, a calendar year.

(2) Rules of application — For the purposes of applying this section and sections 94.2 to 94.4 in respect of a particular participating interest, in a particular non-resident entity, held by a taxpayer in a particular taxation year of the taxpayer (and in respect of any other participating interests, in the particular non-resident entity, that are identical to the particular participating interest and that are held by the taxpayer in the particular taxation year),

(a) if the financial statements of an entity (referred to in this paragraph as the "first entity") for a taxation year (referred to in this paragraph as the "specified year") of the first entity reflect property, indebtedness, income or losses of another entity,

(i) the business and non-business activities for the specified year carried on by the other entity, the net accounting income for the specified year determined for the other entity from those activities, and the property and indebtedness for the specified year owned by or owed by, as the case may be, the other entity are deemed for the specified year to be carried on by, determined for, owned by or owed by, as the case may be, the first entity, and

(ii) an exempt business of the other entity at any time in the specified year is, if it is a business the activities of which are deemed by subparagraph (i) to be carried on by the first entity, deemed to be an exempt business of the first entity at that time in the specified year;

(b) generally accepted accounting principles used, for a taxation year, in the United States of America or in countries that are members of the European Union are substantially similar to those used in Canada in respect of that taxation year;

(c) in determining the designated cost to the taxpayer of the participating interest at any time in the particular taxation year, if the participating interest is a specified interest in a trust that is an exempt foreign trust (as defined by subsection 94(1)) because of paragraph (g) of that definition, the cost at that time to the taxpayer of the participating interest is deemed to be the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value, immediately before it was acquired by the trust, of a property that is held by the trust at that time and that may be reasonably be considered to be held for the purpose of satisfying a right (other than a right under an arrangement to which subsection 7(2) or (6) applies) of the taxpayer in respect of the participating interest;

(d) the reference in subsections (4) and 94.3(4) to the expression "as income from property from a property that is the participating interest" is to be read as a reference to the expression "as income from property from a property that is a source outside Canada that is the participating interest", if the taxpayer is a trust and the portion of the net accounting income of the particular non-resident entity, from sources outside Canada, for its last taxation year that ends in the particular taxation year exceeds 90% of the total net accounting income of the particular non-resident entity for that last taxation year;

(e) in determining whether the principal business of an entity is, in a taxation year of the entity, an investment business,

(i) subject to subparagraphs (ii) and (iii), the principal business of the entity is to be determined by reference to the facts and circumstances including the fair market value of assets used in the activities carried on, during the entity's taxation year, by the entity, the amount of time spent by the entity's employees in carrying out those activities, the amount of expenditures incurred by the entity in respect of those activities and the revenue derived by the entity from those activities,

(ii) subject to subparagraph (iii), if the taxpayer has, by notifying the Minister in writing in the taxpayer's return of income for the particular taxation year, elected to have this subparagraph apply in respect of the entity, the principal business of the entity for the taxation year of the entity is deemed

(A) to be an investment business if the total net accounting income of the entity, for the entity's taxation year, derived from investment property (other than investment property used or held in the course of carrying on an investment business) and from investment businesses is equal to or greater than the total net accounting income of the entity for the entity's taxation year derived from businesses (other than investment businesses), and

(B) not to be an investment business if the total net accounting income of the entity for the entity's taxation year derived from investment property (other than investment property used or held in the course of carrying on an investment business) and from investment businesses is less than the total net accounting income of the entity for the entity's taxation year derived from businesses (other than investment businesses) carried on by the entity in the entity's taxation year, and

(iii) if the Minister sends a written demand to the taxpayer requesting additional information for the purpose of enabling the Minister to determine whether the principal business of the entity is in the entity's taxation year an investment business, and information satisfactory to the Minister to make the determination is not received by the Minister within 60 days (or within any longer period that is acceptable to the Minister) after the Minister sends the demand, the principal business of the entity is deemed to be an investment business;

(f) in determining whether an entity or natural person and another entity or natural person are related to each other or deal at arm's length with each other, a person referred to in section 251 includes an entity;

(g) in applying subparagraph (e)(i) of the definition "exempt interest", if the particular non-resident entity is not a corporation, a partnership or a trust, it is deemed not to be resident in a particular country, unless

(i) the particular country is a country other than a prescribed country,

(ii) the particular non-resident entity is governed, and exists, was (unless the entity was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or was last continued under the laws of, the particular country, and

(iii) the particular non-resident entity is liable, under the laws of the particular country, to pay an income or profits tax imposed by the government of the particular country on all of the particular non-resident entity's income, profits or gains;

(h) subject to paragraph (i), a non-resident entity is deemed to be a controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer throughout the period that begins at the earliest time, in the taxpayer's taxation year in the return of income for which the taxpayer elects in prescribed form to treat the non-resident entity as a controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer (referred to in this paragraph as the "taxpayer's election year"), at which the non-resident entity is a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer and that ends at the earliest subsequent time at which it is not a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, if

(i) at any time in the taxpayer's election year

(A) the taxpayer holds a participating interest in the non-resident entity and a taxation year of the non-resident entity ends (or the first taxation year of the non-resident entity begins) in the taxpayer's election year, or

(B) a controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer holds a participating interest in the non-resident entity and a taxation year of the non-resident entity ends (or the first taxation year of the non-resident entity begins) in a taxation year of the controlled foreign affiliate that ends in the taxpayer's election year,

(ii) the non-resident entity is, at the end of its taxation year referred to in subparagraph (i), a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer in respect of which the taxpayer has a qualifying interest (within the meaning assigned by paragraph 95(2)(m)), and

(iii) the taxpayer has not made any other election under this paragraph in respect of the non-resident entity;

(i) an election made by the taxpayer under paragraph (h) is, other than for the purposes of applying this paragraph and subparagraph (h)(iii), deemed never to have been made, if

(i) the Minister sends a written demand to the taxpayer requesting additional information for the purpose of enabling the Minister to determine an amount that would, if this Act were read without reference to this paragraph, be required to be added or deducted (otherwise than under subsection 104(13)) in computing the taxpayer's income for the year because of the application of section 91 and an election under paragraph (h) in respect of a foreign affiliate, and

(ii) information satisfactory to the Minister to make the determination is not received by the Minister within 60 days (or within any longer period that is acceptable to the Minister) after the Minister sends the demand;

(j) if the taxpayer has, by notifying the Minister in writing in the taxpayer's return of income for the particular taxation year, elected to have this paragraph apply in respect of the particular participating interest, the taxpayer files with that return of income prescribed information in prescribed form, an entity (referred to in this paragraph as the "specified entity") has a significant interest in another entity that is a corporation, partnership or non-discretionary trust, the particular non-resident entity is the specified entity or has, directly or indirectly, an interest in the specified entity, and the financial statements of the specified entity do not reflect property or indebtedness of the other entity, in determining only whether the particular non-resident entity is a foreign investment entity, and where the taxpayer so stipulates in that election, whether the particular non-resident entity is a qualifying entity

(i) each of the following is deemed to be nil:

(A) the carrying value of each

(I) participating interest held, at the time (referred to in this paragraph as the "specified time") that is the end of the particular non-resident entity's last taxation year that ends in the particular taxation year, by the specified entity in the other entity, and

(II) debt owing at the specified time to the specified entity by the other entity (other than a debt acquired in the ordinary course of a business that is not at the specified time an investment business carried on by the specified entity), and

(B) the net accounting income of the specified entity at the specified time derived from property of the specified entity the carrying value of which is deemed to be nil under clause (A),

(ii) each property owned (or that is deemed by this subparagraph to be owned) at the specified time by the other entity (other than a debt owing to the other entity by the specified entity where the other entity and the specified entity are related to each other at the specified time) and that would be valued for the purpose of the balance sheet of the other entity at the specified time is deemed to be owned at the specified time by the specified entity and is deemed to have a carrying value at the specified time equal to the amount determined by the formula

where

A is

(A) if the taxpayer has made an election under paragraph (a) of the definition "carrying value" to value the property of the particular non-resident entity at its fair market value at the specified time, the fair market value of the property of the other entity at the specified time, or

(B) in any other case, the amount that would be the carrying value of the property of the other entity at the specified time if that definition were read without reference to paragraph (a),

B is the total of all amounts each of which is

(A) the fair market value at the specified time of a participating interest in the other entity owned at the specified time by the specified entity, and

(B) the fair market value at the specified time of a debt (other than a debt acquired in the ordinary course of a business that is not an investment business carried on by the specified entity) that the other entity owes at the specified time to the specified entity, and

C is the total of all amounts each of which is

(A) the fair market value at the specified time of a participating interest in the other entity owned at the specified time by an individual or an entity, and

(B) the fair market value at the specified time of a debt owing at the specified time by the other entity to a holder of a participating interest in the other entity (other than a debt acquired in the ordinary course of a business that is not an investment business carried on by a holder of a participating interest in the other entity),

(iii) the specified entity is deemed

(A) to have carried on the proportion obtained for the formula B/C in subparagraph (ii) (in respect of the specified entity and the other entity) of the activities carried on at the specified time by the other entity in which it used the property referred to in subparagraph (ii), and

(B) to have that proportion of the net accounting income of the other entity for the period in the taxation year of the other entity ending at the specified time that was derived from the activities referred to in clause (A), and

(iv) an exempt business of the other entity at any time in the particular non-resident entity's last taxation year that ends in the particular taxation year is, to the extent that its activities are deemed by subparagraph (iii) to be carried on by the specified entity, deemed to be an exempt business of the specified entity at that time in that last year;

(k) subject to paragraphs (m) and (n), the taxpayer has a tax avoidance motive in respect of the particular participating interest (and any participating interests of the taxpayer in the particular non-resident entity that are identical to the particular participating interest), only if it is reasonable to conclude that the main reasons for the taxpayer acquiring, holding or having the particular participating interest include

(i) the derivation of a benefit the value of which can reasonably be attributed principally, directly or indirectly, to income derived from investment property, to profits or gains from the disposition of investment property, or to an increase in value of investment property, and

(ii) the deferral or reduction of the amount of tax payable on that income or those profits or gains;

(l) in applying paragraph (k) in respect of the particular participating interest, the factors to be considered in determining the existence of a tax avoidance motive include

(i) the nature, organization and operation of

(A) the particular non-resident entity,

(B) any foreign investment entity in which the particular non-resident entity or a specified party in respect of the particular non-resident entity has a direct or indirect interest, and

(C) any foreign investment entity in which the taxpayer or a specified party in respect of the taxpayer has a direct or indirect interest,

(ii) the form of, and the terms and the conditions governing, the direct or indirect interests referred to in subparagraph (i),

(iii) the extent to which and the time at which the particular non-resident entity, or an entity in which a direct or indirect interest referred to in subparagraph (i) is held, is subject to an income or profits tax on its income, profits and gains,

(iv) the extent to which and the time at which the taxpayer, or an entity or individual that holds a direct or indirect interest referred to in subparagraph (i), is subject to an income or profits tax on the taxpayer's or entity's, as the case may be, share of the income, profits and gains of the entity in which the direct or indirect interest is held, and

(v) the amount of tax that would have been payable by the taxpayer under this Part had the taxpayer earned the income or realized the profits or gains in respect of the investment property referred to in subparagraph (k)(i) at the time that the income was earned, or the profits or gains were realized, by the entities that owned or held the investment property;

(m) the taxpayer does not have a tax avoidance motive in respect of the particular participating interest held by the taxpayer at any time in the particular taxation year if an amount that is all or substantially all of the payable net accounting income

(i) of the particular non-resident entity for each of its taxation years that ends in the particular taxation year becomes payable by it to its interest holders in, or within 120 days after, that taxation year of the particular non-resident entity, and the taxpayer's share of that amount is included in computing the taxpayer's income for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the time at which the amount became payable, and

(ii) of each other foreign investment entity, in which the particular non-resident entity has a direct or indirect interest, for each of the other entity's taxation years that ends in the particular taxation year becomes payable by the other entity to its interest holders in, or within 120 days after, the end of that taxation year of the other entity, and the particular non-resident entity's share of that amount is included in computing its payable net accounting income for its taxation year that includes the time at which the amount became payable;

(n) the taxpayer does not have a tax avoidance motive in respect of the particular participating interest, if throughout the period, in the particular taxation year, during which the taxpayer held the participating interest the particular non-resident entity was a "Regulated Investment Company" for the purposes of sections 851(b) and 852(a) of the United States Internal Revenue Code of 1986 or a "Real Estate Investment Trust" for the purposes of sections 856(c) and 857(b) of that Code and the taxpayer includes, in computing the taxpayer's income for the particular taxation year, the amount of payable net accounting income that became payable by the particular non-resident entity to the taxpayer in the particular taxation year;

(o) in applying paragraph (d) of the definition "exempt interest", paragraphs (m) and (n), the definition "mark-to-market formula" in subsection 94.2(1), and subsections 94.4(2) and (4), an amount is deemed not to have become payable at any time to an entity or individual, as the case may be, unless it was paid on or before that time to the entity or individual, as the case may be, or the entity or individual, as the case may be, was entitled on or before that time to enforce payment of it;

(p) the definition "exempt property" in subsection (1) does not apply in respect of a property of the particular non-resident entity if the Minister sends a written demand to the taxpayer requesting additional information for the purpose of enabling the Minister to determine whether property is an exempt property, and information satisfactory to the Minister to make the determination is not received by the Minister within 60 days (or within any longer period that is acceptable to the Minister) after the Minister sends the demand;

(q) paragraphs (a) to (d) of the definition "foreign investment entity" do not apply in respect of the particular non-resident entity if the Minister sends a written demand to the taxpayer requesting additional information for the purpose of enabling the Minister to determine whether the particular non-resident entity is a foreign investment entity, and information satisfactory to the Minister to make the determination is not received by the Minister within 60 days (or within any longer period that is acceptable to the Minister) after the Minister sends the demand;

(r) the definition "qualifying entity" in subsection (1) does not apply if the Minister sends a written demand to the taxpayer requesting additional information for the purpose of enabling the Minister to determine whether an entity is a qualifying entity, and information satisfactory to the Minister to make the determination is not received by the Minister within 60 days (or within any longer period that is acceptable to the Minister) after the Minister sends the demand; and

(s) if at any time a taxpayer has a participating interest in a particular foreign investment entity and the taxpayer has at that time a participating interest (referred to in this paragraph as the "indirect participating interest") in another non-resident entity solely because the particular foreign investment entity has at that time a participating interest in that other non-resident entity, then the indirect participating interest is deemed (other than in applying this paragraph) not to be a participating interest of the taxpayer at that time.

Technical Notes: Subsection 94.1(2) sets out a number of rules for the purposes of applying sections 94.1 to 94.4 in respect of a particular participating interest, in a particular non-resident entity, held by a taxpayer in a particular taxation year of the taxpayer (and in respect of any other participating interests in the particular non-resident entity that are identical to the participating interest and that are held by the taxpayer in the particular taxation year). These rules are relevant, for example, in determining whether the particular non-resident entity is a FIE and whether the particular participating interest is an "exempt interest".

Determining Whether Entity is a FIE

New paragraph 94.1(2)(a) contains rules for applying the financial statements (as defined in subsection 94.1(1)) of an entity in determining whether a particular non-resident entity, in which a taxpayer holds a particular participating interest, is a FIE.

If the financial statements of an entity (referred to in this note as the "first entity") for a taxation year (referred to in the commentary on paragraph 94.1(2)(a) as the "specified year") of the first entity reflect property, indebtedness, income or losses of another entity,

- the business and non-business activities for the specified year carried on by the other entity, the net accounting income for the specified year determined for the other entity from those activities, and the property and indebtedness for the specified year owned by or owed by, as the case may be, the other entity are deemed for the specified year to be carried on by, determined for, owned by or owed by, as the case may be, the first entity, and

- an exempt business of the other entity at any time in the specified year is, if it is a business the activities of which are deemed by subparagraph 94.2(a)(i) to be carried on by the first entity, deemed to be an exempt business of the first entity at that time in the specified year;

Paragraph 94.1(2)(a) is relevant in applying, for example, the definition "carrying value" in subsection 94.1(1), when determining whether the non-resident entity is a FIE because of the carrying value of its investment property.

For more information, see the commentary on the definitions "carrying value", "foreign investment entity" and "investment property" in subsection 94.1(1). See also, the commentary on paragraph 94.1(2)(b), for more information on determining whether accounting principles are substantially similar to Canadian GAAP, and the commentary on paragraph 94.1(2)(j), for more information on the look-through rule for significant interests.

GAAP substantially similar to Canadian GAAP

Paragraph 94.1(2)(b) provides that generally accepted accounting principles used for a taxation year in the United States of America or in countries that are members of the European Union are, for greater certainty, considered to be substantially similar to those used in Canada for that taxation year.

Designated Cost

Paragraph 94.1(2)(c) applies in determining, at any time in a particular taxation year, the designated cost to a taxpayer of a participating interest of the taxpayer that is a specified interest (as defined by subsection 94.1(1)) in a trust. However, the rule only applies where the trust is a an exempt foreign trust (as defined by subsection 94(1)) because of paragraph (g) of that definition. Under paragraph 94.1(2)(c), the cost at that time to the taxpayer of the participating interest is deemed to be the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value, immediately before it was acquired by the trust, of a specified property. For this purpose, specified property is property that is held by the trust at that time and that may reasonably be considered to be held for the purpose of satisfying a right (other than a right under an arrangement to which subsection 7(2) or (6) of the Act applies) of the taxpayer that is included in specified interest.

Characterization of Income from FIE Interest

Paragraph 94.1(2)(d) provides a special rules for determining whether a taxpayer's income for a taxation year from the application of subsection 94.1(4) or 94.3(4) will be treated as income from a source outside Canada. Paragraph 94.1(2)(d) provides that in applying subsections 94.1(4) and 94.3(4) to a taxpayer (that is a trust) for a particular taxation year of the taxpayer and in respect of a participating interest of the taxpayer in a non-resident entity, the reference in those subsections to "as income from property from a property that is the participating interest" is to be read as a reference to the expression "as income from property from a property that is a source outside Canada that is the participating interest". However, this special rule applies only if the portion of the net accounting income of the non-resident entity, from sources outside Canada, for its last taxation year that ends in the particular taxation exceeds 90% of the total net accounting income of the non-resident entity for that last taxation year.

Paragraphs 94.2(2)(f) and (g) provide similar rules that apply with respect to subsection 94.2(4). For more detail, see the commentary on those paragraphs.

The application of paragraph 94.1(2)(d) and paragraphs 94.2(2)(f) and (g) in respect of a participating interest of a taxpayer will not be relevant in determining a taxpayer's eligibility for a foreign tax credit under section 126. In this regard, see the commentary below on subsections 94.3(2) and 126(1.2). Rather, these paragraphs provide relief to trusts resident in Canada that hold participating interests in a FIE and that make payable to their non-resident beneficiaries all or part of the trusts' incomes arising under any of subsections 94.1(4), 94.2(4) or 94.3(4). Where paragraph 94.1(2)(d) or 94.2(2)(f) or (g) applies and the terms of the trust permit amounts of deemed income of the trust to be made payable to beneficiaries, the amounts of such trust income arising under any of subsections 94.1(4), 94.2(4) or 94.3(4) and made payable to non-resident beneficiaries of the trust may qualify for reduced withholding if the non-resident beneficiary is resident in a country with which Canada has entered into a tax treaty and the tax treaty contains a provision permitting such a reduction in withholding.

Investment Business

Under paragraph 94.1(2)(e), a determination of whether the principal business of an entity for a taxation year of the entity is an investment business is made by reference to:

- subject to the rules below, the relevant facts and circumstances, including the utilization of assets and employees, expenditures made and the revenue of the entity, or
- if the taxpayer elects, by reference to the entity's "net accounting income" (as defined in subsection 94.1(1)) from investment property and investment businesses,

Under subparagraph 94.1(2)(e)(iii), if the Minister of National Revenue sends a written demand to the taxpayer requesting additional information for the purpose of enabling the Minister to determine whether the principal business of the entity is in that taxation year an investment business, and information satisfactory to the Minister to make the determination is not received by the Minister within 60 days (or within such longer period as is acceptable to the Minister) after the Minister sends the demand, the principal business of the entity for that taxation year is deemed to be an investment business.

Arm's Length and Related

Under paragraph 94.1(2)(f), in determining whether an entity or natural person and another entity or natural person are related to each other or deal at arm's length with each other, a person referred to in section 251 includes an entity.

Residence of an Entity — Special Case

New paragraph 94.1(2)(g) applies in determining whether a taxpayer's participating interest (as defined in subsection 94.1(1)) in a FIE is an "exempt interest"(as defined in subsection 94.1(1)). Paragraph 94.1(2)(g) provides that in applying subparagraph (e)(i) of the definition "exempt interest", if the FIE is not a corporation, a partnership or a trust, it is deemed not to be resident in a particular country, unless

- the particular country is a country other than a prescribed country,
- the FIE is governed, and exists, was (unless the FIE was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or was last continued under the laws of, the particular country and,
- the FIE is liable, under the laws of the particular country, to pay an income or profits tax imposed by the government of the particular country on all of its income, profits or gains.

If the paragraph 94.1(2)(g) applies so that the FIE is not considered resident in a particular country for the purpose of subparagraph (e)(i) of the definition "exempt interest", then the taxpayer would not be able to rely upon that paragraph in order to qualify the participating interest as an exempt interest.

Entity Treated as Controlled Foreign Affiliate

New paragraph 94.1(2)(h) permits a taxpayer to make an irrevocable election to treat a foreign affiliate, of the taxpayer, that is a foreign investment entity (including an affiliate the shares which are held by the taxpayer's controlled foreign affiliate) as a controlled foreign affiliate for a particular taxation year and subsequent taxation years. This one-time election is available only if:

- the taxpayer holds a participating interest in the foreign affiliate and a taxation year of the foreign affiliate ends (or the first taxation year of the foreign affiliate begins) in the taxpayer's election year a (or controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer holds a participating interest in the foreign affiliate and a taxation year of the foreign affiliate ends (or the first taxation year of the foreign affiliate begins) in a taxation year of the controlled foreign affiliate that ends in the taxpayer's election year), and
- the taxpayer has a "qualifying interest" (as defined in paragraph 95(2)(m)) in the affiliate.

The election must be made in prescribed form in the taxpayer's tax return for the year (except where the taxpayer is a partnership, in which case special rules apply under paragraph 96(1)(d)). However, under paragraph 94.1(2)(i), described in the commentary below, the election may be rendered invalid in the event that the taxpayer cannot provide sufficient information to the Minister of National Revenue for the Minister to be able to determine amounts required to be included in the taxpayer's income under section 91. In addition, the election ceases to have effect if the corporation ceases to be a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer.

In the period during which an election under paragraph 94.1(2)(h) is effective, a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer is deemed to be a controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer. As a result, a share issued by the affiliate to the taxpayer would be an "exempt interest" under the definition in subsection 94.1(1). Sections 94.1 to 94.4 generally would not apply to the taxpayer's participating interest in the affiliate. However, the foreign accrual property income (FAPI) rules would apply and the taxpayer would be required to include in income under section 91 a percentage of any FAPI derived by the affiliate in the year. Notwithstanding an election under paragraph 94.1(2)(h), section 94.2 may still apply in the event that a taxpayer's interest in a controlled foreign affiliate is a tracked interest to which subsection 94.2(9) applies.

Demand for Information — CFA election

Under paragraph 94.1(2)(i), an election made by a taxpayer under subparagraph 94.1(2)(h)(iii) is, other than for the purposes of applying paragraph 94.1(2)(i) and that subparagraph, deemed never to have been made, if the Minister sends a written demand to the taxpayer requesting additional information for the purpose of enabling the Minister to make a determination referred to in one of those paragraphs, and information satisfactory to the Minister to make the determination is not received by the Minister within 60 days (or within such longer period as is acceptable to the Minister) after the Minister sends the demand.

The determination referred to in paragraph 94.1(2)(i) concerns an amount that would, if the Act were read without reference to that paragraph, be required to be added or deducted (otherwise than under subsection 104(13)) in computing the taxpayer's income for the year because of the application of section 91 and an election under paragraph 94.1(2)(h) in respect of a foreign affiliate.

Look-through Rule — Significant Interests

A particular non-resident entity is a FIE at any time if the carrying value of all of the entity's "investment property" is more than 50% of the "carrying value" of all its property at the end of the entity's taxation year that includes that time and none of the other exceptions in the definition "foreign investment entity" applies.

New paragraph 94.1(2)(j) is relevant in determining whether a taxpayer's participating interest in the particular non-resident entity is a participating interest in a FIE. The paragraph applies if the taxpayer has made a valid election under 94.1(2)(j) in respect of the participating interest of the taxpayer, and a specified entity (i.e., the particular nonresident entity or another entity in which the particular non-resident entity has, directly or indirectly, an interest)) has a "significant interest" (as defined in subsection 94.1(1)) in another entity ("the investee"), that is a corporation, partnership or non-discretionary trust. In this case, and provided that the financial statements of the specified entity do not reflect property or indebtedness of the other entity, in determining whether the particular non-resident entity is a foreign investment entity (and if the taxpayer stipulates in the election, in determining also whether the particular non-resident entity is a qualifying entity), the following rules apply:

- In determining the carrying value of the specified entity's property, the carrying values of its participating interests in the investee are deemed to be nil. Debt owing to the specified entity by the investee (other than debt acquired in the ordinary course of a business other than an investment business of the specified entity) is also deemed to have a carrying value to the specified entity of nil, and the net accounting income of the specified entity is also deemed to be nil to the extent that it is derived from debt or participating interests of the specified entity that are deemed to be nil.
- The specified entity is deemed to own the property of the investee. Each such deemed owned property is deemed to have a carrying value to the specified entity based on the product obtained by multiplying the property's carrying value to the investee by the specified entity's proportional ownership of the investee's property. In general terms, this proportional ownership is the quotient obtained by dividing:
  - the amount that is the fair market value of the specified entity's shares and certain debt issued by the investee, by
  - the amount that is the total fair market value of shares and certain debt issued by the investee entity.
- In general terms, the activities carried on by the investee (including an exempt business of the investee) using the property deemed to be owned by the specified entity, and the investee's net accounting income derived from those activities, are deemed to be those of the specified entity to the extent of that proportional ownership.

If the taxpayer notifies the Minister of National Revenue in writing of its intention to value the specified entity's property at its fair market value in accordance with paragraph (a) of the definition "carrying value" in subsection 94.1(1), the property of the investee must also be valued on that basis.

If there are tiers of entities each of which has a significant interest in the other, paragraph 94.1(2)(j) operates to deem each higher tier entity to own properties of the immediately lower tier entities on an iterative basis. For example, assume a non-resident entity (Foreignco-1) owns 100% of the shares in Foreignco-2, which in turn owns 100% of shares in Foreignco-3 and that Foreignco-1, Foreignco-2 and Foreignco-3 have identical taxation year-ends. The carrying values from properties in Foreignco-3 would, under paragraph 94.1(2)(j), become the carrying values of properties in Foreignco-2. Because paragraph 94.1(2)(j) operates on an iterative basis, the carrying value of those properties would be considered to be the carrying values of properties held by Foreignco-1.

The example below illustrates the operation of paragraph 94.1(2)(j).

Example

1. Jean, who resides in Canada, holds shares in Foreignco, a nonresident corporation that is not a controlled foreign affiliate of Jean. Foreignco's principal activity is the carrying on of investment activities on behalf of its shareholders. Foreignco prepares its financial statements in accordance with accounting principles substantially similar to generally accepted accounting principles used in Canada.

2. The carrying values of Foreignco's assets at the end of its taxation year ending in Jean's year are as follows:

guaranteed investment certificate shares of XYZ Inc. in which Foreignco has a significant interest	$10,000
shares of ABC Inc. in which Foreignco does not have a significant interest	$20,000
cash	$ 5,000
Total assets	$ 4,000
	$39,000

3. XYZ Inc. owns assets at that time that are used in the course of carrying on an active business, with a carrying value of $80,000. It also has investment property with a carrying value of $15,000.

4. The fair market value of the shares of XYZ Inc. held by Foreignco is $40,000 while the fair market value of all the issued and outstanding shares of XYZ Inc. is $100,000 at that time.

Results

1. The guaranteed investment certificate, cash, and the shares of XYZ Inc. and ABC Inc. are all investment property by virtue of the definition "investment property" in subsection 94.1(1).

2. However, since Foreignco owns a significant interest in XYZ Inc., the special look-through rule in new paragraph 94.1(2)(j) applies. Under this look-through rule the carrying value of Foreignco's shares in XYZ Inc. is deemed to be nil. Instead, Foreignco is deemed to own a portion of the property that XYZ Inc. owns.

3. The carrying value of the XYZ property deemed to be owned by Foreignco is 40% of its carrying value to XYZ, since Foreignco's percentage ownership of shares is 40%.

4. Consequently, the carrying values of the investment property of Foreignco are:

guaranteed investment certificate	$10,000
shares of XYZ Inc.	nil
shares of ABC Inc.	$ 5,000
cash	$ 4,000
investment property of XYZ Inc. (40% of $15,000)	$ 6,000
Total	$25,000

5. The total carrying value of the assets of Foreignco is:

Investment property (see above)	$ 25,000
assets of XYZ Inc. (other than investment property) (40% of $80,000)	$ 32,000
Total	$ 57,000

6. As a result, Foreignco is not a FIE because less than 50% of the carrying value of its property is investment property.

Tax Avoidance Motive

New paragraph 94.1(2)(k) sets out the conditions under which a taxpayer will be considered to have a tax avoidance motive in respect of a participating interest in a FIE. Subject to new paragraphs 94.1(2)(m) and (n) (described in the commentary below), a tax avoidance motive will be considered to exist only if it is reasonable to conclude that the main reasons for the taxpayer acquiring, holding or having the particular participating interest were to permit the taxpayer to achieve the following two objectives:

- to derive a benefit the value of which can be attributed principally, directly or indirectly, to income derived from investment property, to profits or gains from the disposition of investment property, or to an increase in value of investment property, and
- the deferral or reduction of the amount of tax payable on that income or those profits or gains.

Factors Considered in Tax Avoidance Motive

New paragraph 94.1(2)(l) sets out factors to be considered in determining whether there is a tax avoidance motive for a taxpayer acquiring an interest in a non-resident entity. Those factors are similar to the ones in existing subsection 94.1(1). However, the form and the terms and conditions governing the taxpayer's interest in a non-resident entity are to be taken into account as well. Note that a tax avoidance motive may exist whether the non-resident entity is resident in a "tax haven" or not. The factors are as follows:

- the nature, organization and operation of the non-resident entity and any FIE in which it or a specified party (as defined in subsection 94.1(1)) in respect of it has a direct or indirect interest,
- the nature, organization and operation of any FIE in which the taxpayer or a specified party in respect of the taxpayer has a direct or indirect interest,
- the form of and the terms and the conditions governing the direct or indirect interests described above,
- the extent to which and the time at which the particular nonresident entity, or an entity in which a direct or indirect interest described above is held, is subject to an income or profits tax on its income, profits and gains,
- the extent to which and the time at which an entity that holds a direct or indirect interest described above is subject to an income tax or profits tax on the entity's share of the income, profits and gains of the entity in which the direct or indirect interest is held and
- the amount of tax that would have been payable by the taxpayer under this Part had the taxpayer earned the income or realized the profits or gains in respect of the investment property referred to in subparagraph 94.1(2)(k)(i) at the time that the income was earned, or the profits or gains were realized, by the entities that owned or held the investment property.

No Tax Avoidance Motive

New paragraphs 94.1(2)(m) and (n) provide two situations where a taxpayer will not be considered to have a tax avoidance motive in respect of a participating interest in a non-resident entity held by the taxpayer in a taxation year:

- if the non-resident entity (and each other foreign investment entity, in which the non-resident entity has a direct or indirect interest) makes payable (determined by reference to paragraph 94.1(2)(o)) all or substantially all of its "payable net accounting income" (as defined in subsection 94.1(1)) for its taxation year that ends in the particular taxation to its interest holders within 120 days after the end of its taxation year, and the taxpayer's share of that amount is included in computing the taxpayer's income, profit or gains for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the time at which the amount became payable, and
- if the non-resident entity is a "Regulated Investment Company" for the purposes of sections 851(b) and 852(a) of the United States Internal Revenue Code or a "Real Estate Investment Trust" for the purposes of sections 856(c) and 857(b) of that Code, and the taxpayer includes, in computing the taxpayer's income for that taxation year of the taxpayer, the amount of income that became payable (determined by reference to paragraph 94.1(2)(o)) by the particular non-resident entity to the taxpayer in that taxation year of the taxpayer.

For more detail on the definition "payable net accounting income" in subsection 94.1(1), see the commentary on that definition.

Amounts Payable

Under paragraph 94.1(2)(o), an amount is deemed not to have become payable at any time to an entity or individual unless it was paid on or before that time to the entity or individual, as the case may be, or the entity or individual, as the case may be, was entitled on or before that time to enforce payment of it. This rule is relevant in applying paragraph (d) of the definition "exempt interest" in subsection 94.1(1), paragraphs 94.1(2)(m) and (n), the definition "mark-to-market formula" in subsection 94.2(1), and subsections 94.4(2) and (4).

Demands for Information

Under paragraphs 94.1(2)(p) to (r) a number of provisions in section 94.1 will not apply in respect of a taxpayer's participating interest in a non-resident entity, if the Minister sends a written demand to the taxpayer requesting additional information for the purpose of enabling the Minister to make a determination referred to in one of those paragraphs, and information satisfactory to the Minister to make the determination is not received by the Minister within 60 days (or within such longer period as is acceptable to the Minister) after the Minister sends the demand.

The determinations referred to in paragraph 94.1(2)(p) to (r) are in respect of the definitions "exempt property", "foreign investment entity" and "qualifying entity" in subsection 94.1(1), respectively.

Participating Interests — Special Case

Paragraph 94.1(2)(s) applies in determining whether an interest is a participating interest. Under that paragraph, if at any time a taxpayer has a participating interest in a particular foreign investment entity and the taxpayer has at that time a participating interest (referred to in that paragraph and this commentary as the "indirect participating interest") in another non-resident entity solely because the particular foreign investment entity has at that time a participating interest in that other non-resident entity, then the indirect participating interest is deemed not to be a participating interest of the taxpayer at that time.

Paragraph 94.1(2)(s) provides relief only where the conditions attached to a taxpayer's participating interest in a FIE are such that the interest may also be a participating interest in another non-resident entity in which the FIE holds an interest and in which the taxpayer does not directly hold an interest. Paragraph 94.1(2)(s) would not apply to a participating interest where the taxpayer holds the participating interest directly in the other non-resident entity — in these circumstances, the taxpayer would be required to determine whether the participating interest in the other non-resident entity is a participating interest in a FIE.

(e)(ii) or para. (h) or (j) by members of partnership; 98(7) — Where partnership holding specified participating interest ceases to exist.

(3) Conditions for application of tax regime for foreign investment entities — This subsection applies to a taxpayer for a particular taxation year of the taxpayer in respect of a participating interest in a non-resident entity if

(a) the taxpayer is not an exempt taxpayer for the particular taxation year;

(b) the participating interest is held by the taxpayer at the end of a taxation year of the non-resident entity that ends in the particular taxation year;

(c) at the end of that taxation year of the non-resident entity it is a foreign investment entity; and

(d) at the end of that taxation year of the non-resident entity the taxpayer's participating interest is not an exempt interest of the taxpayer.

Technical Notes: New subsection 94.1(3) sets out the common conditions for the application of the FIE rules in section 94.1(3) (prescribed rate of return regime) and 94.2(4) (mark-to-market regime). For the prescribed rate of return or mark-to-market regimes to apply to a taxpayer for a particular taxation year of the taxpayer in respect of a participating interest held in the particular year by the taxpayer in a non-resident entity (other than a tracking interest or a foreign insurance product — for more information see the commentary on subsection 94.2(3)), all of the following conditions set out in subsection 94.1(3) must be satisfied:

- the taxpayer is not an "exempt taxpayer" for the taxpayer's particular taxation year;
- the taxpayer held the participating interest at the end of a taxation year of the non-resident entity that ends in the taxpayer's particular taxation year; and
- at the end of that taxation year of the non-resident entity, the interest was a participating interest in a FIE and was not an exempt interest.

Related Provisions: 87(2)(j.95) — Amalgamation — continuing corporation; 94.1(4) — Income inclusion when 94.1(3) applies; 94.2(3)(b)(i) — Application of mark-to-market method; 95(2)(g.3) — Application to FAPI rules.

(4) Income inclusion — imputed income regime — If subsection (3) or 94.2(9) applies to a taxpayer resident in Canada for a taxation year of the taxpayer in respect of a participating interest and subsections 94.2(3) and 94.3(3) do not apply to the taxpayer for the taxation year in respect of the participating interest, then this subsection applies to the taxpayer for the taxation year in respect of the participating interest and there shall be included (as income from property from a property that is the participating interest) in computing the taxpayer's income for that taxation year the total of all amounts each of which is the amount, in respect of each month in that taxation year, at the end of which month the taxpayer holds the participating interest, determined by the formula

where

A is the designated cost, to the taxpayer of the participating interest, at the end of the month, and

B is the quotient obtained when the rate of interest prescribed, in respect of amounts required by this Act to be paid by the Minister, for the quarterly period that includes that month is divided by 12.

Technical Notes: Subsection 94.1(4) applies to a taxpayer resident in Canada for a taxation year of the taxpayer in respect of a participating interest in a non-resident entity if subsection 94.1(3) or 94.2(9) applies (and subsections 94.2(3) and 94.3(3) do not apply) to the taxpayer for the taxation year in respect of a participating interest.

Where subsection 94.1(4) applies, the taxpayer is required to include (as income from property from a property that is the participating interest) in computing the taxpayer's income for that taxation year the total of all amounts each of which, is in respect of each month in that taxation year, at the end of which month the taxpayer holds the participating interest, the product obtained by multiplying

- the designated cost (as defined in subsection 94.1(1)), to the taxpayer of the participating interest, at the end of the month, by

- the quotient obtained when the rate of interest prescribed, in respect of amounts required by this Act to be paid by the Minister, for the quarterly period that includes that month is divided by 12.

For this purpose, the rate of interest will be that determined under paragraph 4301(b) of the Regulations. That rate, in very general terms, is the 3-month average Treasury bill rate + 2 percentage points.

For more information on the definition "designated cost" in subsection 94.1(1), see the commentary on that definition. For more information on subsection 94.2(3), see the commentary on that subsection.

(5) Loss on disposition of interest — reconciliation — Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, if a taxpayer disposes, at a particular time in a particular taxation year, of a participating interest of the taxpayer and subsection (4) applied for the purpose of computing the taxpayer's income, for any taxation year of the taxpayer that began on or before the particular time, in respect of the participating interest

(a) there may be deducted in computing the taxpayer's income for the particular taxation year the lesser of

(i) the amount, if any, by which

(A) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount included in respect of the participating interest because of subsection (4) in computing the taxpayer's income for

(I) the particular taxation year, or

(II) any taxation year, of the taxpayer, that ends before the particular taxation year and after the taxpayer last acquired the participating interest

exceeds

(B) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount in respect of the participating interest that is deductible under paragraph 94.4(2)(a) in computing the taxpayer's income for any of those taxation years, and

(ii) the amount that would, if the Act were read without reference to paragraph (b) and subparagraph 40(2)(g)(i), be the taxpayer's capital loss for the particular taxation year from the disposition of the participating interest; and

(b) the taxpayer's capital loss for the taxation year from the disposition of the participating interest is the amount, if any, by which

(i) the amount that would, if the Act were read without reference to this paragraph and subparagraph 40(2)(g)(i), be the taxpayer's capital loss for the particular taxation year from the disposition of the participating interest

(ii) the amount in respect of the participating interest deducted by the taxpayer under paragraph (a) in computing the taxpayer's income for the particular taxation year.

Technical Notes: New subsection 94.1(5) applies where a taxpayer disposes of an interest in a non-resident entity at a particular time in a particular taxation year. If subsection 94.1(4) applied for the purpose of computing the taxpayer's income, for any taxation year of the taxpayer that began on or before the particular time, in respect of the participating interest, the taxpayer may be permitted to deduct an amount equal to the lesser of

- the amount, if any, by which the total of the taxpayer's income inclusions under subsection 94.1(4) in respect of the interest (since its last acquisition by the taxpayer) exceeds the total deductions available to the taxpayer in respect of the interest under paragraph 94.4(2)(a), and
- the taxpayer's capital loss for the particular taxation year from the disposition of the participating interest (determined without reference to paragraph 94.1(5)(b) and subparagraph 40(2)(g)(i)), be.

Where a deduction is claimed by the taxpayer under paragraph 94.1(5)(a) in computing the taxpayer's income for the particular taxation year, the taxpayer's capital loss for the taxation year from the disposition of the participating interest (determined without reference to paragraph 94.1(5)(b) and subparagraph 40(2)(g)(i) is reduced by the amount of that deduction.

94.2 Foreign investment entities — mark-to-market — (1) Definitions — The definitions in subsection 94.1(1), and the following definitions, apply in this section.

Technical Notes: New section 94.2 sets out new rules for the taxation of interests in FIEs where subsections 94.1(4) and 94.3(3) do not apply.

Except as otherwise indicated, section 94.2 applies to taxation years that begin after 2002.

New subsection 94.2(1) sets out a number of definitions and provides that those definitions and the definitions in subsection 94.1(1) apply for the purposes of section 94.2.

"deferral amount", of a taxpayer in respect of a participating interest in an entity, means, subject to subsections (6) and (14) to (18), the positive or negative amount determined by the formula

where

A is

(a) if, immediately before the beginning of the taxpayer's first taxation year that began after 2002, the interest was capital property held by the taxpayer, ½; and

(b) in any other case, 1,

B is

(a) the fair market value of the interest at the first time in a particular taxation year of the taxpayer at which the taxpayer was resident in Canada where

(i) the taxpayer held the interest at the end of the preceding taxation year,

(ii) at the end of that preceding year, the taxpayer was resident in Canada or the interest was taxable Canadian property,

(iii) subsection (4) did not apply to the taxpayer for the purpose of computing the taxpayer's income in respect of the interest for any preceding taxation year, and

(iv) subsection (4) applies to the taxpayer for the purpose of computing the taxpayer's income in respect of the interest for the particular year; and

(b) nil in any other case, and

C is

(a) if paragraph (a) of the description of B applies in respect of the interest, the cost amount of the property immediately before the first time in the particular year at which the taxpayer was resident in Canada; and

(b) nil in any other case.

Technical Notes: The deferral amount of a taxpayer generally represents the gain or loss (in the event that the interest was capital property, one half of the gain or loss) in respect of the interest accrued to the time when the interest first became subject to the rules in section 94.2. The expression "deferral amount" in respect of a participating interest of a taxpayer in an entity applies principally for the purpose of determining the value of D in the "mark-to-market formula" (as defined in subsection 94.2(1)) for a taxation year of the taxpayer in respect of the participating interest. That formula applies in determining, under subsection 94.2(4), a taxpayer's income or loss (or capital gain or capital loss) from the participating interest for a taxation year. Subsection 94.2(4) generally provides for the recognition of a deferral amount in respect of a participating interest on the disposition of the interest. Because of paragraph 94.2(2)(a), identical participating interests are considered to be disposed of in the order in which they were acquired.

For a participating interest, in a non-resident entity, acquired after the beginning of the taxpayer's first taxation year that began after 2002, the deferral amount will be nil in the typical cases where the rules in section 94.2 apply to the interest for the year in which the interests were acquired.

The deferral amount is calculated, in conjunction with subsections 94.2(5) and subsection 128.1(4), so that gains and losses accruing while a taxpayer is not resident in Canada are ignored for the purposes of section 94.2, except in the unusual case where an interest in a FIE is taxable Canadian property.

Additional rules affecting the calculation of the deferral amount are contained in subsections 94.2(6) and (14) to (18), as described in the commentary below.

Related Provisions: 87(2)(j.95) — Amalgamation — continuing corporation; 94.2(6)(b), (c) — Application where member of foreign partnership becomes resident in Canada; 94.2(15)–(18) — Determination of deferral amount on emigration, change of status or superficial disposition; 95(2)(g.3) — Application to FAPI rules.

"gross-up factor", for a particular deferral amount, means

(a) if the amount determined for A in the definition "deferral amount" in respect of the particular deferral amount is ½, 2; and

(b) in any other case, 1.

Technical Notes: The definition "gross-up factor" for a particular deferral amount is 1, except where the 1/2 factor is relevant in computing the deferral amount because the property is capital property. In the latter case, the "gross-up factor" is 2 (i.e., the reciprocal of the 1/2 factor). For more information on the relevance of this definition, see the commentary on subsection 94.2(12).

"mark-to-market formula", for a taxation year of a taxpayer in respect of a participating interest of the taxpayer in a non-resident entity, means the formula

where

A is the total of all amounts each of which is the taxpayer's proceeds from a disposition of the participating interest in the taxation year (other than a disposition deemed to arise because of subsection 128.1(4) or 149(10)),

B is

(a) if the taxpayer held the participating interest at the end of the taxation year, the fair market value (determined before taking into account any amount payable at the end of the taxation year from the non-resident entity in respect of the participating interest) at that time of the participating interest, and

(b) in any other case, nil,

C is the total of all amounts (other than an amount to which the description of A applies) received by the taxpayer in the taxation year from the non-resident entity in respect of the participating interest,

D is

(a) the taxpayer's deferral amount in respect of the participating interest, if

(i) the deferral amount is a positive amount,

(ii) the participating interest was not disposed of by the taxpayer in the taxation year, and

(iii) the taxpayer so elects in respect of the participating interest in prescribed form filed with the Minister not later than the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxation year,

(b) the taxpayer's deferral amount in respect of the participating interest if

(i) the taxpayer disposed of the participating interest in the taxation year, and

(ii) no election was made under paragraph (a) in respect of the participating interest by the taxpayer for a preceding taxation year, and

(c) in any other case, nil,

E is the total of all amounts each of which is the cost at which the taxpayer acquired the participating interest in the taxation year (otherwise than because of an acquisition deemed to arise because of subsection 128.1(4) or 149(10)),

F is

(a) if the taxpayer held the participating interest at the beginning of the taxation year, the fair market value at that time of the participating interest (determined before taking into account any amount payable at that time from the non-resident entity in respect of the participating interest), and

(b) in any other case, nil, and

G is

(a) if the participating interest was deemed by paragraph (11)(b) to be a participating interest in an entity for the preceding taxation year of the taxpayer, the amount that would be deductible under subparagraph (4)(a)(ii) in computing the taxpayer's income for that preceding taxation

year in respect of the participating interest if that subparagraph were read without reference to clause (4)(a)(ii)(A), and

(b) in any other case, nil.

Technical Notes: The definition "mark-to-market formula" provides a formula that applies, for a taxation year of a taxpayer in respect of a participating interest of the taxpayer, in determining, under subsection 94.2(4), a taxpayer's income or loss (or, where subsection 94.2(20) applies in respect of the participating interest, the capital gain or capital loss) from the participating interest for a taxation year.

The amount determined under the formula for a taxpayer's taxation year in respect of a participating interest in a non-resident entity is computed as follows:

- [A] ADD the proceeds of disposition in the year from any disposition by the taxpayer in the year of the interest (other than a disposition arising from the application of subsection 128.1(4) or 149(10), given that the value of B would take into account the fair market value of the interest at the time of such deemed dispositions);
- [B] ADD, where the taxpayer held the interest at the end of the year, the fair market value of the interest at that time (determined before taking into account the FIE's liability in respect of any amount payable from the FIE in respect of the interest);
- [C] ADD the total payments received by the taxpayer in the year from the FIE, other than payments included in the value of A;
- [D] ADD, where the taxpayer so elects for a year during which the taxpayer did not dispose of the interest, any positive deferral amount in respect of the interest;
- [D] ADD, where the taxpayer disposed of the interest in the year and the election referred to above has not been previously made, the deferral amount in respect of the interest — the value of D will reduce the amount determined under the formula in the event that the deferral amount is a negative amount;
- [E] SUBTRACT the cost of the interest on any acquisition in the year of the interest (disregarding acquisitions arising because of the application of subsection 128.1(4) or 149(10), given that these acquisitions are taken into account in the value of F);
- [F] SUBTRACT, where the taxpayer held the interest at the beginning of the year, the fair market value of the interest at the beginning of the year; and
- [G] SUBTRACT, in the case of a foreign insurance policy to which subsection 94.2(3) applies because of the operation of new subsections 94.2(10) and (11), any loss denied for the preceding year because of the operation of clause 94.2(4)(a)(ii)(A).

Ignoring the descriptions of D and G, the mark-to-market formula in effect determines the net increase or decrease in the fair market value of a taxpayer's participating interest in a non-resident entity for a taxation year.

The value of D represents a taxpayer's accrued gain or loss when a participating interest first becomes subject to section 94.2. The amount of this accrued gain or loss (or one half of it, in the event so provided in paragraph (b) of the definition "deferral amount" in subsection 94.2(1)) is included in computing income under the description of D, but only for the taxation year in which the interest is disposed of unless the taxpayer elects for earlier recognition of a positive deferral amount. (An earlier recognition of a positive deferral amount may be beneficial for a taxpayer, particularly where section 94.4 applies.) Where the taxpayer is a trust, a disposition may occur as a consequence of the application of the 21-year deemed disposition rule. See, in this regard, new subsection 104(4.1).

For more detail, see the commentary on subsections 94.2(3) and (4) and the definitions "deferral amount" and "gross-up factor" in subsection 94.2(1).

Related Provisions: 94.1(2)(o) — Amount deemed not to have become "payable"; 94.2(5)–(8) — Exclusion of periods taxpayer is non-resident; 96(3) — Election under subpara. D(a)(iii) by member of a partnership; 257 — Formula amount cannot be less than zero.

"readily obtainable fair market value", if any, at any time of a particular participating interest in a non-resident entity held at that time by a taxpayer, means the fair market value at that time of the participating interest if

(a) in respect of the particular participating interest

(i) there is a regularly published price of the amount (or of the average of the amounts each of which is the amount) at which participating interests that are identical to the particular participating interest last traded on a prescribed stock exchange on each of the latest 10 consecutive trading days of the participating interests on that stock exchange in the 30-day period that begins before the day that includes that time,

(ii) the particular participating interest would, at that time, be an arm's length interest of the taxpayer if the definition "arm's length interest" were read without reference to paragraph (b) of that definition,

(iii) the identical participating interests are listed on that stock exchange throughout the period, in the taxpayer's taxation year that includes that time, during which the taxpayer held the particular participating interest, and

(iii) [(iv) — ed.] there are at least 10 trading days of the identical participating interests on that stock exchange in the period that begins 30 days before that time; or

(b) in respect of the particular participating interest

(i) the participating interests in the non-resident entity that are identical to the particular participating interest have, throughout the period, in the taxpayer's taxation year that includes that time, during which the taxpayer held the particular participating interest, conditions attached that require the non-resident entity to accept at the demand of the holders of the participating interests (or that require the holders of the participating interests to accept, at the demand of the non-resident entity), at a price determined and payable in accordance with the conditions, the surrender in whole or in part of the participating interests, and

(ii) that price

(A) is determined by reference to the fair market value, at the time the participating interest is surrendered, of the property of the non-resident entity, and

(B) would have been acceptable to entities dealing at arm's length with one another.

Technical Notes: The definition "readily obtainable fair market value" is relevant in determining whether a taxpayer may elect to have subsection 94.2(3) (and, as a result, subsection 94.2(4)) apply for a taxation year in respect of a particular participating interest (as defined in subsection 94.1(1)) of the taxpayer in a non-resident entity (as defined in subsection 94.1(1)).

In general terms, the readily obtainable fair market value of a particular participating interest is, if one of two sets of conditions is met, its fair market value.

The first set of conditions requires, in respect of the particular participating interest that:

- participating interests that are identical to the particular participating interest be listed on a prescribed stock exchange throughout the period, in the taxpayer's taxation year that includes that time, during which the taxpayer held the particular participating interest,
- the particular participating interest would, at that time, be an arm's length interest of the taxpayer (determined without regard to the 10% limitation that normally applies under paragraph (b) of the definition "arm's length interest" in subsection 94.1(1)),
- there be a regularly published price of the amount (or of the average of the amounts each of which is the amount) at which participating interests that are identical to the particular participating interest last traded on that stock exchange on each of the latest 10 consecutive "trading days" (as defined in subsection 94.2(1)) of the participating interests on that stock exchange,, and
- within the 30-day period that begins before the particular time there are at least 10 trading days of the identical participating interests on that stock exchange,

Note that, under paragraph 94.2(2)(c), where the identical participating interests are listed on more than one prescribed stock exchange, the taxpayer may generally elect which of the exchanges will be used in applying the definition "readily obtainable fair market value". For more information, see the commentary on paragraph 94.2(2)(c).

Where the first set of conditions is not met, the second set of conditions requires that the identical participating interests have, throughout the period, in the taxpayer's taxation year that includes that time, during which the taxpayer held the particular participating interest, conditions attached that require the non-resident entity to accept at the demand of the holders of the participating interests (or that require the holders of the participating interests to accept, at the demand of the non-resident entity), at a price ("the redemption price") determined and payable in accordance with the conditions, the surrender in whole or in part of the participating interests. In addition, the second set of conditions requires that the redemption price be determined by reference to the fair market value, at the time the participating interest is surrendered, of the property of the non-resident entity, and be a price that would have been acceptable to entities dealing at arm's length with one another.

Related Provisions: 94.2(2)(d) — Taxpayer may elect where interest is listed on more than one prescribed stock exchange; 94.2(2)(f) — Effect of failing to provide information on demand by CCRA; 94.2(3)(b)(ii) — Value required for mark-to-market method to be used.

"reconciliation amount", at a particular time in a taxation year of a taxpayer in respect of a participating interest of the taxpayer, means the amount (including a negative amount) determined at the particular time by the formula

where

A is the amount determined by the formula

where

C is the amount that would be the cost at the particular time of the participating interest to the taxpayer if this Act were read without reference to this section (other than paragraph (2)(a)), and

(a) if paragraph (12)(a) deems the taxpayer to have acquired the participating interest at a time in the taxation year, the cost at the particular time to the taxpayer of the participating interest, and

(b) in any other case, the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition from the last disposition in the taxation year by the taxpayer of the participating interest,

B is the amount determined by the formula

where

E is the total of all amounts each of which is an amount, in respect of the participating interest, that is deducted, or that would if this Act were read without reference to subsection (20) have been deducted, under subsection (4) in computing the taxpayer's income for

(a) if paragraph (12)(a) deems the taxpayer to have acquired the participating interest at a time in the taxation year, a taxation year (in this definition referred to as the "preceding taxation year") of the taxpayer that precedes the taxation year, and

(b) in any other case, the taxation year or a preceding taxation year,

F is the total of all amounts each of which is an amount, in respect of the participating interest, deducted under paragraph 94.4(2)(a) in computing the taxpayer's income for

(a) if paragraph (12)(a) deems the taxpayer to have acquired the participating interest at a time in the taxation year, a preceding taxation year, and

(b) in any other case, the taxation year or a preceding taxation year, and

G is the total of all amounts each of which is an amount, in respect of the participating interest, that is included, or that would if this Act were read without reference to subsection (20) have been included, under subsection (4) in computing the taxpayer's income for

(a) if paragraph (12)(a) deems the taxpayer to have acquired the participating interest at a time in the taxation year, a preceding taxation year, and

(b) in any other case, the taxation year or a preceding taxation year.

Technical Notes: The reconciliation amount in respect of a participating interest of a taxpayer is relevant in determining what adjustments, if any, to the cost of the interest may be required under subsection 94.2(12) and what amounts, generally, may be included or deductible, under subsection 94.2(21), by the taxpayer in computing the taxpayer's income for a taxation year in which the interest is disposed of. For more detail, see the commentary on subsections 94.2(12) and (21).

The reconciliation amount at a particular time in a taxation year of a taxpayer in respect of a participating interest of the taxpayer, means, in very general terms the amount (including a negative amount) that is the difference between the taxpayer's economic loss in respect of the interest (while the taxpayer held the interest and subsection 94.2(4) applied to it) and the taxpayer's deductions, in computing income, under sections 94.2

or 94.4 (net of income inclusions under section 94.2)) in respect of the interest.

More specifically, the reconciliation amount at a particular time in a taxation year in respect of a participating interest is the amount (including a negative amount) determined by the formula "A - B".

Under the formula, "A" is the positive amount (for more detail, see section 257) determined by subtracting from the cost of the participating interest to the taxpayer (determined without reference to section 94.2, except paragraph 94.2(2)(a)), the proceeds of disposition from the last disposition in the taxation year by the taxpayer of the participating interest (or, if paragraph 94.2(12)(a) deemed the taxpayer to have acquired the participating interest in the taxation year, the cost to the taxpayer of the participating interest).

Variable "B" is the positive amount determined by

- ADDING all amounts, in respect of the participating interest, that are, in computing the taxpayer's income for a specified year, deducted under paragraph 94.4(2)(a) or deducted, or that would if this Act were read without reference to subsection 94.2(20) have been deducted, under subsection 94.2(4), and
- SUBTRACTING all amounts in respect of the participating interest, that are, in computing the taxpayer's income for a specified year, included, or that would if this Act were read without reference to subsection 94.2(20) have been included, under subsection 94.2(4).

For this purpose, a specified year means, if paragraph 94.2(12)(a) deems the taxpayer to have acquired the participating interest at a time in the taxation year, a preceding taxation year, and in any other case, the taxation year that includes the particular time or a preceding taxation year.

For more detail, see the commentary on subsections 94.2(4), (12) and (21) and 94.4(2).

Related Provisions: 257 — Formula amounts cannot be less than zero.

"tracking entity", in respect of a particular participating interest of a taxpayer in a particular non-resident entity at a particular time, means the particular non-resident entity if

(a) the tracked properties described in paragraph (9)(d) in respect of the participating interest are at that time owned by the particular non-resident entity, and

(i) the total fair market value at that time of those tracked properties is less than 90% of the total fair market value at that time of all property owned at that time by the particular non-resident entity, and

(ii) the total fair market value at that time of those tracked properties that are at that time investment property exceeds 50% of the total fair market value at that time of those tracked properties; or

(b) any tracked property described in paragraph (9)(d) in respect of the participating interest is not at that time owned by the particular non-resident entity, the particular non-resident entity (or an entity with which the particular non-resident entity does not deal at arm's length) owns property that is at that time investment property, and it is reasonable to conclude that that investment property (or property that may be substituted for that investment property) may be used, or give rise to property used, to satisfy, directly or indirectly, the right referred to in paragraph (9)(d) in respect of the particular participating interest.

Technical Notes: The definition "tracking entity" is relevant in determining whether subsections 94.1(4) and 94.2(4) will apply for a taxation year of a taxpayer in respect of a participating interest, held by the taxpayer at the end of the year, in a non-resident entity. If the non-resident entity is, at the end of a taxation year of the non-resident entity that ends in the taxpayer's year, a tracking entity, and the other conditions described in subsection 94.2(9) are met, such that subsection 94.2(9) applies, then either of subsections 94.1(4) or 94.2(4) would generally apply for the year.

A particular non-resident entity is a tracking entity in respect of a particular participating interest of a taxpayer in the non-resident entity if either of paragraph (a) or (b) of the definition applies.

Under paragraph (a) of the definition, the particular non-resident entity is a tracking entity if

- the tracked properties described in paragraph 94.2(9)(d) in respect of the particular participating interest are at that time owned by the particular non-resident entity,
- the total fair market value at that time of those tracked properties is less than 90% of the total fair market value at that time of all property owned at that time by the particular non-resident entity, and
- the total fair market value at that time of those tracked properties that are at that time investment property exceeds 50% of the total fair market value at that time of those tracked properties.

Under paragraph (b) of the definition, the particular non-resident entity will be a tracking entity if

- any of the tracked property described in paragraph 94.2(9)(d) in respect of the participating interest is not at that time owned by the particular non-resident entity,
- the particular non-resident entity (or an entity with which the particular non-resident entity does not deal at arm's length) owns property that is at that time investment property, and
- it is reasonable to conclude that that investment property (or property that may be substituted for that investment property) may be used, or give rise to property used, to satisfy, directly or indirectly, the right referred to in paragraph 94.2(9)(d) in respect of the particular participating interest.

Note that an election under paragraph 94.1(2)(j) is relevant only in determining whether an entity is a "foreign investment entity" (and where stipulated, a "qualifying entity"), as those expressions are defined in subsection 94.1(1). Thus the determination of whether property is owned or not by an entity is made, for the purposes of the definition "tracking entity", without regard to that election.

Note also that the exclusion of "exempt property" from being treated as "investment property" (as those expressions are defined in subsection 94.1(1)) does not apply for the purposes of the definition "tracking entity".

For more information on the application of this definition, see the commentary on subsections 94.1(4) and 94.2(3) and (9). For more information on paragraph 94.2(1)(j) and the definitions "exempt property" and "investment property" in subsection 94.1(1), see the commentary on those provisions.

"trading day", of a participating interest on a prescribed stock exchange, means a day on which the participating interest trades on that stock exchange.

Technical Notes: The definition "trading day" is relevant in applying paragraph (a) of the definition "readily obtainable fair market value" in subsection 94.2(1). A trading day of a participating interest on a prescribed stock exchange, means a day on which the participating interest trades on that stock exchange.

(2) Rules of application — In this section,

(a) identical participating interests held by a taxpayer are deemed to be disposed of in the order in which they were acquired by the taxpayer, determined without reference to any other provision of this Act;

(b) subsection 94.1(2) applies;

(c) in applying paragraph (a) of the definition "readily obtainable fair market value" in respect of a particular participating interest, in a non-resident entity, held by a taxpayer in a taxation year, where participating interests, in the non-resident entity, that are identical to the particular participating interest are listed on more than one prescribed stock exchange, the references in that paragraph to a prescribed stock exchange shall be read as a reference to

(i) if the taxpayer so elects, by notifying the Minister in writing in the taxpayer's return of income for that taxation year or a preceding taxation year, the prescribed stock exchange identified by the taxpayer in that election, and

(ii) if the taxpayer has not filed an election in accordance with subparagraph (i) or if participating interests that are identical to the particular participating interest are no longer listed on the stock exchange identified in the election referred to in subparagraph (i), the prescribed stock exchange chosen by the Minister;

(d) paragraph (3)(b) does not apply to a taxpayer for a particular taxation year in respect of a participating interest, in a non-resident entity, held in the particular taxation year by the taxpayer if

(i) subsection (3) applied, because of an election under paragraph (3)(b), for a taxation year (referred to in this paragraph as the "preceding taxation year") that ended before the particular taxation year of the taxpayer in respect of the participating interest (or in respect of any other participating interests, in the non-resident entity, that are identical to the participating interest), and

(ii) subsection (3) did not apply for a taxation year of the taxpayer that was after the preceding taxation year and before the particular taxation year in respect of the participating interest (or in respect of any of the other participating interests);

(e) paragraph (3)(b) does not apply to a taxpayer for a particular taxation year in respect of a participating interest, in a non-resident entity, held in the particular taxation year by the taxpayer if the Minister sends a written demand to the taxpayer requesting additional information for the purpose of enabling the Minister to determine whether the participating interest has a readily obtainable fair market value and information satisfactory to the Minister to make the determination is not received by the Minister within 60 days (or within any longer period that is acceptable to the Minister) after the Minister sends the demand;

(f) in applying subparagraph (4)(a)(i) to a taxpayer, that is a trust, for a particular taxation year of the taxpayer and in respect of a participating interest of the taxpayer in a non-resident entity, the reference in that paragraph to the expression "as income from property from a property that is the participating interest" is to be read as a reference to the expression "as income from property that is a source outside Canada that is the participating interest", if the portion of the net accounting income of the non-resident entity, from sources outside Canada, for its last taxation year that ends in the particular taxation year exceeds 90% of the total net accounting income of the non-resident entity for that last taxation year; and

(g) in applying subparagraph (4)(b)(i) to a taxpayer, that is a trust, for a particular taxation year of the taxpayer and in respect of a participating interest of the taxpayer in a non-resident entity, the reference in that paragraph to the expression "a capital gain for the year" is to be read as a reference to the expression "a capital gain for the year from a source outside Canada and", if the portion of the net accounting income of the non-resident entity, from sources outside Canada, for its last taxation year that ends in the particular taxation year exceeds 90% of the total net accounting income of the non-resident entity for that last taxation year.

Technical Notes: New subsection 94.2(2) provides rules of application for the purpose of section 94.2.

Identical Properties

Paragraph 94.2(2)(a) provides that identical properties that were held and are disposed of by a taxpayer will be treated as having been disposed of in the order in which they were acquired by the taxpayer. For this purpose, paragraph 94.2(2)(a) makes it clear that the various acquisitions that are deemed to occur under the Act (e.g., section 47) are not to be taken into account. This measure is relevant primarily for the purpose of determining the amount to be added or deducted from a taxpayer's income for a taxation year under subsection 94.2(4), especially with reference to the "deferral amount" referred to in the description of D in the "mark-to-market formula" for the year (as those expressions are defined in subsection 94.2(1)).

Application

Paragraph 94.2(2)(b) provides that the rules in subsection 94.1(2) also apply for the purposes of section 94.2.

Readily Obtainable Fair Market Value

Paragraph 94.2(2)(c) applies for the purpose of paragraph (a) of the definition "readily obtainable fair market value" in subsection 94.2(1), referred to in the commentary above, in respect of a particular participating interest in a non-resident entity held by a taxpayer in a taxation year. Where participating interests in the non-resident entity that are identical to the particular participating interest are listed on more than one prescribed stock exchange, the references in that definition to a prescribed stock exchange shall be read as a reference to the prescribed stock exchange in respect of which the taxpayer files an election with the Minister of National Revenue.

If the taxpayer does not so elect or participating interests that are identical to the particular participating interest are no longer listed on the stock exchange identified in the taxpayer's election referred, the references in that definition to a prescribed stock exchange shall be read as a reference to the prescribed stock exchange chosen by the Minister of National Revenue.

Restrictions on Application of Mark-to-Market Rules

Paragraph 94.2(2)(d) provides that the mark-to-market regime in subsection 94.2(4) will not apply to a taxpayer in respect of certain participating interests of the taxpayer. The rule applies if the taxpayer has been subject to subsection 94.2(4) in respect of a participating interest because of an election in respect of the interest where the interest has a readily obtainable fair market value and subsection 94.2(3) ceases to apply. For example, paragraph 94.2(2)(d) would apply where the interest (other than a foreign insurance policy) ceases to have a readily obtainable fair market value or the Minister fails to receive, in response to a demand under paragraph 94.2(2)(e), information satisfactory to make a determination of whether the interest has a readily obtainable fair market value.

Where paragraph 94.2(2)(d) applies the taxpayer will become subject to 94.1(4) in respect of the participating interest if 94.1(3) continues to apply to the taxpayer in respect of the participating interest.

Note that if, subsection 94.2(4) applies to a taxpayer for a taxation year in respect of a participating interest in a tracking entity and in the immediately following year the interest ceases to be an interest in a tracking entity and becomes subject to subsection 94.1(3), then the taxpayer may elect to have subsection 94.2(4) apply for that immediately following year. In this regard, see the commentary on clause 94.2(3)(b)(ii)(B).

Paragraph 94.2(2)(e) provides that paragraph 94.2(3)(b) does not apply to a taxpayer for a particular taxation year in respect of a participating interest held in the particular taxation year by the taxpayer in a non-resident entity if the Minister sends a written demand to the taxpayer requesting additional information for the purpose of enabling the Minister to determine whether the participating interest has a readily obtainable fair market value and information satisfactory to the Minister to make the determination is not received by the Minister within 60 days (or within such longer period as is acceptable to the Minister) after the Minister sends the demand.

Paragraphs 94.2(2)(f) and (g) provide special rules for determining whether a taxpayer's income for a taxation year from the application of subsection 94.2(4) will be treated as income from a source outside Canada. Paragraph 94.2(2)(f) provides that in applying subparagraph 94.2(4)(a)(i) to a taxpayer (that is a trust) for a particular taxation year of the taxpayer and in respect of a participating interest of the taxpayer in a non-resident entity, the reference in that paragraph to "as income from property that is the participating interest" shall be read as a reference to "as income from property that is a source outside Canada that is the participating interest". However, this special rule applies only if the portion of the net accounting income of the non-resident entity, from sources outside Canada, for its last taxation year that ends in the particular taxation exceeds 90% of the total net accounting income of the non-resident entity for that last taxation year.

Paragraph 94.2(2)(g) provides that in applying subparagraph 94.2(4)(b)(i) to a taxpayer (that is a trust) for a particular taxation year of the taxpayer and in respect of a participating interest of the taxpayer in a non-resident entity, the reference in that paragraph to "a capital gain for the year" shall be read as a reference to "a capital gain for the year from a source outside Canada and". However, this special rule applies only if the portion of the net accounting income of the non-resident entity, from sources outside Canada, for its last taxation year that ends in the particular taxation year exceeds 90% of the total net accounting income of the non-resident entity for that last taxation year.

The application of paragraphs 94.2(2)(f) and (g) (and a related rule in paragraph 94.1(2)(d)) in respect of a participating interest of a taxpayer will not be relevant in determining a taxpayer's eligibility for a foreign tax credit under section 126. In this regard, see the commentary below on subsections 94.3(2) and 126(1.2). Rather, paragraph 94.2(2)(g) and (h) provide relief to trusts resident in Canada that hold participating interests in a FIE and that make payable to their non-resident beneficiaries all or part of the trusts' incomes arising under subsection 94.2(4). Where paragraph 94.2(2)(f) or (g) applies and the terms of the trust permit amounts of deemed income of the trust to be made payable to beneficiaries, the amounts of such trust income arising under subsection 94.2(4) that become payable to non-resident beneficiaries of the trust may qualify for reduced withholding if the non-resident beneficiary is resident in a country with which Canada has entered a tax treaty and the tax treaty contains a provision permitting such a reduction in withholding.

Where paragraphs 94.2(2)(f) and (g) do not apply, income and capital gains arising under subsection 94.2(4) are from a source inside Canada.

Related Provisions: 94.4(1)(c) — Rule in 94.2(2)(a) applies to 94.4; 96(1)(d)(iii) — Application to partnership; 96(3) — Election under subpara. (c)(i) by members of partnership; 104(4.1) — Mark-to-market property can be capital property for trust's 21-year deemed disposition.

(3) Application of mark-to-market method — Subject to paragraphs (2)(d) and (e) and (5)(b), this subsection applies to a taxpayer for a particular taxation year of the taxpayer in respect of a participating interest held in the particular taxation year by the taxpayer (and in respect of any other participating interests that are identical to the participating interest and that are held by the taxpayer in the particular taxation year)

(a) if paragraph (11)(a) applies to the taxpayer for the particular taxation year in respect of the participating interest; or

(b) if

(i) subsection (9) or 94.1(3) applies to the taxpayer for the particular taxation year in respect of the participating interest,

(ii) the participating interest has, at all times in the particular taxation year at which the taxpayer held the participating interest, a readily obtainable fair market value,

(iii) the taxpayer has elected that this subsection apply in respect of the participating interest by notifying the Minister in writing in the taxpayer's return of income for

(A) the first taxation year of the taxpayer in which subsection (9) or 94.1(3), as the case may be, applies to the taxpayer in respect of the participating interest (or any of the other participating interests), or

(B) the first taxation year of the taxpayer for which 94.1(3) applies to the taxpayer in respect of the participating interest (or any of the other participating interests) and that immediately follows a taxation year of the taxpayer for which subsection (9) applied to the taxpayer in respect of the participating interest (or any of the other participating interests), and

(iv) subsection 94.3(3) has never applied to the taxpayer for a taxation year in respect of the participating interest (or any of the other participating interests).

Technical Notes: Subsection 94.2(3) sets out those circumstances where, subject to paragraphs 94.2(2)(d) and (e) and 94.2(5)(b), subsection 94.2(4) applies to a taxpayer in respect of a participating interest in a non-resident entity. For the mark-to-market regime in subsection 94.2(4) to apply for a taxation year, subsection 94.2(3) must apply for the year.

Except as described above, subsection 94.2(3) will apply to a taxpayer for a particular taxation year in respect of a participating interest, in a non-resident entity, held by the taxpayer in the year (and in respect of any other participating interests in the non-resident entity that are identical to the participating interest and that are held by the taxpayer in the year) if either:

- Paragraph 94.2(11)(a) (foreign insurance policies) applies to the taxpayer for the year in respect of the interest; or
- Subsection 94.1(3) or 94.2(9) (interests in tracking entities) applies to the taxpayer in respect of the interest, the interest has at all times in the year at which the taxpayer held it a readily obtainable fair market value (as defined in subsection 94.2(1)) and the taxpayer elects, generally in the taxation year of the taxpayer in which the taxpayer is first subject to subsection 94.1(3) or 94.2(9) in respect of the participating interest or an identical interest, to have subsection 94.3(3) apply.

Note that under clause 94.2(3)(b)(iii)(B) a taxpayer may elect, to have subsection 94.3(3) apply, in a year other than the first taxation year in which subsection 94.1(3) or 94.2(9) applies to the taxpayer in respect of the participating interest or an identical interest if the election is made in the taxpayer's return of income for a taxation year in which subsection 94.1(3) applies and that taxation year immediately follows a taxation year for which the interest is subject to subsection 94.2(9) (i.e., an interest of the taxpayer in a tracking entity).

Related Provisions: 39(1)(a)(ii.3) — Property excluded from capital gain calculation; 70(3.1)(f) — Property excluded from "rights or things" calculation on death; 70(5.2)(e) — Deemed disposition on death; 85(1.1)(g)(ii.1) — Property excluded from s. 85 rollover eligibility; 87(2)(j.95) — Amalgamation — continuing corporation; 94.1(4) — No income inclusion under 94.1 if 94.2(3) applies; 94.2(4) — Application of mark-to-market rule; 94.2(9) — Tracked interests; 94.2(11)(a), (c) — Treatment of foreign insurance policies; 94.2(2)(d), (e) — Circumstances in which 94.2(3)(b) does not apply; 94.2(5)-(8) — Exclusion of periods taxpayer is non-resident; 94.3(3) — Taxation of interest in FIE where 94.2(3) does not apply; 95(2)(g.3) — Application to FAPI rules; 96(1)(d) — Where partnership owns participating interest; 96(3) — Election under 94.2(3)(b)(iii) by member of a partnership; 104(4.1) — Mark-to-market property can be capital property for trust's 21-year deemed disposition; 149(10)(c) — Where corporation becomes or ceases to be exempt; 248(1)"inventory" — Property under 94.2(3) excluded from definition of inventory.

(4) Income inclusion — mark-to-market regime — If subsection (3) applies to a taxpayer for a taxation year of the taxpayer in respect of a participating interest in a non-resident entity, this subsection applies and in computing the taxpayer's income for the taxation year in respect of the participating interest

(a) where subsection (20) does not apply for the taxation year in respect of the participating interest,

(i) there shall be added, as income from property from a property that is the participating interest, the positive amount, if any, determined by the mark-to-market formula for the taxation year in respect of the participating interest, and

(ii) there may be deducted, as a loss from property,

(A) if the participating interest was deemed by paragraph (11)(b) to be a participating interest in an entity for the year, nil, and

(B) in any other case, the absolute value of the negative amount, if any, determined by the mark-to-market formula for the taxation year in respect of the participating interest; and

(b) where subsection (20) applies for the taxation year in respect of the participating interest,

(i) the taxpayer is deemed to have a capital gain for the year from the disposition of capital property, that is the participating interest, in the taxation year equal to the amount, if any, by which the total of

(A) the positive amount, if any, determined by the mark-to-market formula for the taxation year in respect of the participating interest, and

(B) the positive amount, if any, that is the value of D in the mark-to-market formula for the taxation year in respect of the participating interest (where the gross-up factor for the deferral amount in respect of the participating interest is 2)

exceeds

(C) the absolute value of the negative amount, if any, that is the value of D in the mark-to-market formula for the taxation year in respect of the participating interest (where the gross-up factor for the deferral amount in respect of the participating interest is 2), and

(ii) the taxpayer is deemed to have a capital loss for the taxation year from the disposition of capital property, that is the participating interest, in the taxation year equal to

(A) if the participating interest was deemed by paragraph (11)(b) to be a participating interest in an entity for the year, nil, and

(B) in any other case, the amount, if any, by which the total of

(I) the absolute value of the negative amount, if any, determined by the mark-to-market formula for the taxation year in respect of the participating interest, and

(II) the absolute value of the negative amount, if any, that is the value of D in the mark-to-market formula for the taxation year in respect of the participating interest (where the gross-up factor for the deferral amount in respect of the participating interest is 2)

exceeds

(III) the positive amount, if any, that is the value of D in the mark-to-market formula for the taxation year in respect of the participating interest (where the gross-up factor for the deferral amount in respect of the participating interest is 2).

Technical Notes: Where subsection 94.2(3) applies (and subsection 94.2(20) does not apply) to a taxpayer's participating interest in a non-resident entity, subparagraph 94.2(4)(a)(i) requires the taxpayer to include in computing income as income from property (in this regard, see the commentary on paragraph 94.2(2)(f)) from a property that is the participating interest the positive amount resulting from the operation of the mark-to-market formula for the taxation year in respect of the participating interest. Under subparagraph 94.2(4)(a)(ii), the absolute value of any negative amount resulting from the operation of the same formula may be deducted in computing the taxpayer's income as a loss from property from a property that is the participating interest. (Note, however, that losses in respect of foreign insurance polices are denied because of clause 94.2(4)(a)(ii)(A). Instead, as described in the commentary to the definition "mark-to-market formula" in subsection 94.2(1), the denied losses are carried forward to offset later income inclusions.)

Where both subsections 94.2(3) and 94.2(20) apply to a taxpayer's participating interest in a non-resident entity, subparagraph 94.2(4)(b)(i) deems the taxpayer to have a capital gain for the year from the disposition of capital property (in this regard, see the commentary on paragraph 94.2(2)(g)), that is the participating interest, in the taxation year equal to the positive amount determined under the mark-to-market formula for the taxation year in respect of the participating interest plus or minus the positive or negative deferral amount included in "D" in that same formula in respect of the participating interest for the year. Subparagraph 94.2(4)(b)(ii) deems the taxpayer to have capital losses in the year equal to the negative amount determined under the market formula for the taxation year in respect of the participating interest plus or minus the negative or positive deferral amount included in "D" in that same formula in respect of the participating interest for the year.

The example below illustrates the operation of subsection 94.2(4) and the mark-to-market formula for a taxation year in respect of a participating interest.

Example

1. Leonard acquires a 1% interest in ABC Inc. in 1999 for $500. On December 31, 2000, it is capital property to Leonard. ABC Inc. is not a FIE in respect of the taxpayer at any time before 2004. Subsection 94.2(20) does not apply at any time in respect of the interest.

2. ABC Inc. becomes a FIE during 2004 and Leonard elects under subparagraph 94.2(3)(b)(iii) to have the rules in section 94.2 apply. Leonard's interest in ABC Inc. does not qualify as an "exempt interest".

3. The fair market values of Leonard's participating interest at the beginning and at the end of 2004 are $800 and $1,000 respectively.

4. Leonard disposes of his shares just before the end of 2005 for $1,200. ABC Inc. does not make any distributions to Leonard during his period of ownership.

Results

1. No amount is included in Leonard's income for 2003 under any of sections 94.1 to 94.3. For 2004, Leonard is required to include $200 in income under subparagraph 94.2(4)(a)(i).

2. The $200 inclusion is determined under the mark-to-market formula and subparagraph 94.2(4)(a)(i) as follows:

- "A" is nil, since no participating interest in ABC Inc. is disposed of in 2004,
- "B" is $1,000, the fair market value of the participating interest at the end of 2004,
- "C" is nil since no payments are received in 2004,
- "D" is nil since no participating interest is disposed of in 2004 and no election was otherwise made,
- "E" is nil since no participating interest in ABC Inc. is acquired in 2004, and
- "F" is $800, the fair market value of the participating interest at the beginning of 2004.

3. Although Leonard's participating interest has appreciated by $500 since the time of its acquisition, only $200 is required to be included in income under section 94.2 for 2004.

4. For 2005, the amount included in income under the mark-tomarket formula and subparagraph 94.2(4)(a)(i) is $350, computed as follows:

- "A" is $1,200, the proceeds of disposition of the participating interest,
- "B" is nil since Leonard does not own any participating interest in ABC Inc. at the end of 2005,
- "C" is nil since no payments or distributions were received in 2005,
- "D" is $150, the deferral amount in respect of the interest — the "deferral amount" is one half (the one-half factor applies because Leonard's interest in ABC Inc. is capital property held by Leonard on June 22nd 2000) of the amount by which $800 (the fair market value of the interest at the beginning of 2004 which is the first year in respect of which section 94.2 applies to the interest) exceeds $500 (the cost amount of the interest),
- "E" is nil since no participating interest in ABC Inc. is acquired in 2005, and
- "F" is $1,000, the fair market value of the participating interest at the beginning of 2005.

(5) Non-resident periods excluded — If a taxpayer is non-resident at any time in a taxation year of the taxpayer

(a) in applying subsection (4) and the definition "mark-to-market formula" (other than the description of D in that definition) in respect of a participating interest of the taxpayer, the taxation year is deemed to be the period, if any, that begins at the first time in the taxation year at which the taxpayer is resident in Canada and ends at the last time in the taxation year at which the taxpayer is resident in Canada;

(b) except for the purposes of subsection (4) and paragraph (c), subsection (3) does not apply to the taxpayer at that time; and

(c) where the taxpayer is an individual (other than a trust) who was non-resident throughout a particular period that is within a taxation year (determined under paragraph (a)) of the taxpayer, at any time in the particular period the individual holds a participating interest in a non-resident entity, and subsection (3) applies to the individual throughout the particular period in respect of the participating interest,

(i) for the purpose of section 114, the income or loss of the individual in respect of the participating interest for the particular period shall be determined without reference to this section, and

(ii) in computing the amount determined under paragraph 114(a) in respect of the individual for the taxation year

(A) there shall be deducted any amount that would be included under subparagraph (4)(a)(i) in computing the individual's income in respect of the participating interest for the particular period if

(I) the value of D in the mark-to-market formula for the taxation year in respect of the participating interest were nil, and

(II) the particular period were a taxation year, and

(B) there shall be added any amount that would be deductible under subparagraph (4)(a)(ii) in computing the individual's income in respect of the participating interest for the particular period if

(I) the value of D in the mark-to-market formula for the taxation year in respect of the participating interest were nil, and

(II) the particular period were a taxation year.

Technical Notes: New subsection 94.2(5) provides special rules dealing with the application of section 94.2 for a taxation year to persons who are not resident in Canada throughout the year.

Under paragraph 94.2(5)(a), the amounts determined under section 94.2 are generally determined as if the taxation year of the taxpayer excludes the period in the year during which the taxpayer is not resident in Canada. This rule, in conjunction with section 128.1, generally ensures that the increases and decreases in fair market values that are relevant in determining income inclusions and deductions under section 94.2 are the increases and decreases occurring while the taxpayer is resident in Canada. However, this rule does not affect the calculation of the taxpayer's deferral amount: paragraph (b) of the definition "deferral amount" in subsection 94.2(1) (in conjunction with subsection 128.1(1)) already ensures that gains or losses accru-ing prior to becoming resident in Canada are not taken into account for the purposes of computing a taxpayer's deferral amount in respect of a participating interest in a FIE, except in the unusual case where the FIE interest is taxable Canadian property.

Paragraph 94.2(5)(a) also ensures that subsection 94.2(4) does not apply to a taxpayer for a taxation year throughout which the taxpayer is not resident in Canada.

Under paragraph 94.2(5)(b), subsection 94.2(3) generally does not apply to a taxpayer at a particular time if the taxpayer is not resident in Canada at the particular time. This has relevance for the purposes of a number of new provisions, including subparagraph 39(1)(a)(ii.3). This subparagraph has the effect of excluding, from a taxpayer's capital property, a property in respect of which subsection 94.2(3) applies and is intended to ensure that there is no double taxation with respect to the same economic gain. Paragraph 94.2(5)(b) thus ensures that a non-resident taxpayer cannot claim that a taxable Canadian property consisting of a FIE interest is not capital property on the basis of subparagraph 39(1)(a)(ii.3). (Note: non-resident taxpayers are generally subject to tax on taxable capital gains from their dispositions of taxable Canadian properties.)

Paragraph 94.2(5)(c) applies in the unusual case where an individual changes his or her Canadian residence status more than once in the same calendar year. For example, an individual might leave Canada near the beginning of a calendar year but return later in the same year. In the event that such an individual is considered not to reside in Canada during a period in the calendar year, the individual's period of nonresidence would be included within the individual's taxation year and the rule in paragraph 94.2(5)(a) would have no effect. In order to not tax gains accrued while an individual was non-resident and to not provide relief for losses accrued during the same period, paragraph 94.2(5)(c) provides that:

- for the purposes of section 114, the individual's income or loss from the individual's period of non-residence is determined without reference to section 94.2, and
- in computing the individual's taxable income under section 114,
  - — there is to be deducted the increase in the fair market value of an interest in a FIE to which subsection 94.2(4) applies during the non-resident period (this fair market value appreciation would be reflected in the amount determined under the mark-to-market formula (as defined in subsection 94.1(1)) in respect of the interest in computing the taxpayer's income), and
  - — there is to be added the decline in the fair market value of an interest in a FIE to which subsection 94.2(4) applies that accrued during the non-resident period (this fair market value decline would be reflected in the amount determined under the mark-to-market formula in respect of the interest in computing the taxpayer's income).

The example below illustrates the operation of paragraph 94.2(5)(c).

Example

Bernard emigrates from Canada on February 1, 2003 in order to start permanent employment elsewhere. Due to unexpected changes in circumstances, he returns to Canada on December 1, 2003. Bernard owns an interest in a FIE to which section 94.2 applies. The fair market value of the interest in 2003 increases from $100 (January 1, 2003), to $105 (February 1, 2003), to $108 (December 1, 2003) and to $107 (December 31, 2003). It is assumed that Bernard establishes that he did not reside in Canada from February 1, 2003 to December 1, 2003.

Results

1. Under section 94.2(4), the amount included in computing Bernard's income for 2003 is equal to $7 (B = 107, F = 100).

2. Paragraph 94.2(5)(c) permits a deduction for the purposes of paragraph 114(a) equal to $3 (i.e., $108 - $105) equal to the appreciation in the fair market value of the interest while Bernard was not resident in Canada. As a consequence, Bernard's taxable income in respect of the FIE interest for 2003 is $4 (i.e., $7 minus $3).

Related Provisions: 95(2)(g.3) — Application to FAPI rules.

(6) Foreign partnership — member becoming resident — If, at a particular time in a fiscal period of a partnership, a person resident in Canada becomes a member of the partnership, or a person who is a member of the partnership becomes resident in Canada, and immediately before the particular time no member of the partnership is resident in Canada,

(a) all amounts determined under this section shall be determined as if that fiscal period began at the first time in that fiscal period (determined without reference to this paragraph) at which a member of the partnership was resident in Canada;

(b) for the purpose of the definition "deferral amount", as it applies in respect of dispositions that occur after the particular time and before the first subsequent time to which this subsection applies in respect of the partnership, subsection (4) is deemed not to have applied to the partnership for any preceding fiscal period; and

(c) where a negative deferral amount would, if this Act were read without reference to this paragraph, be determined in respect of a participating interest held by the partnership immediately before the particular time, the deferral amount in respect of the interest is deemed to be nil.

Technical Notes: New subsections 94.2(6) to (8) provide special rules for partnerships having non-resident members. These subsections are analogous to rules in existing subsections 96(8) and (9) and are designed, in general terms, to prevent partnership losses that accrue while no partnership member is resident in Canada from being used in Canada. A further rule for partnership members is set out in new subsection 96(1.9).

More specifically, subsection 94.2(6) applies where a partnership begins to have members who reside in Canada. Under subsection 94.2(7), a corresponding rule applies in a similar fashion where a partnership ceases to have members who reside in Canada. In either case, for the purposes of determining amounts under section 94.2 portions of the fiscal period of the partnership in which no member is resident in Canada will generally be disregarded.

Where subsection 94.2(6) applies to a partnership at any time, the deferral amount for a FIE interest held by the partnership immediately before that time is computed with reference to the fair market value and the cost amount of the interest. However, if a negative deferral amount is otherwise determined with respect to the interest, the deferral amount is deemed to be nil.

Related Provisions: 94.2(8) — Application — anti-avoidance and partnership look-through rules.

(7) Foreign partnership — member ceasing to be resident — If, at a particular time in a fiscal period of a partnership, a person resident in Canada ceases to be a member of the partnership, or a person who is a member of the partnership ceases to be resident in Canada and immediately after the particular time no member of the partnership is resident in Canada, all amounts determined under this section shall be determined as if that fiscal period ended at the last time in that fiscal period (determined without reference to this subsection) at which a member of the partnership was resident in Canada.

Technical Notes: As a consequence of subsections 94.2(6) and (7), amounts added or deductible under subsection 94.2(4) for a partnership in respect of a FIE interest will generally reflect increases or decreases in fair market value while the partnership has members resident in Canada. However, once the interest is disposed of, an amount reflecting gains accruing before any member became resident in Canada will be recognized because of the application of subsection 94.2(4).

Related Provisions: 94.2(8) — Application — anti-avoidance and partnership look-through rules.

(8) Application of subsecs. (6) and (7) — In subsections (6) and (7) and this subsection,

(a) if it can reasonably be considered that one of the main reasons that a member of a partnership is resident in Canada is to avoid the application of subsection (6) or (7), the member is deemed not to be resident in Canada; and

(b) if a particular partnership is a member of another partnership at any time,

(i) each person or partnership that is at that time a member of the particular partnership is deemed to be at that time a member of the other partnership,

(ii) each person or partnership that becomes at that time a member of the particular partnership is deemed to become at that time a member of the other partnership, and

(iii) each person or partnership that ceases at that time to be a member of the particular partnership is deemed to cease at that time to be a member of the other partnership.

Technical Notes: Subsection 94.2(8) contains an anti-avoidance rule, which is aimed at preventing the insertion of nominal Canadian resident partners for tax planning purposes. This rule is parallel to the rule in existing subsection 96(9).

Subsection 94.2(8) also contains a "look-through" rule. It allows for the "look-through" of one or more tiers of partnerships for the purposes of determining whether a person is a member of a partnership.

Related Provisions: 96(9) — Parallel rule for foreign partnerships.

(9) Tracking interests — This subsection applies to a taxpayer (other than an exempt taxpayer) for a particular taxation year of the taxpayer in respect of a particular participating interest, in a non-resident entity, held in the particular taxation year by the taxpayer (and in respect of any other participating interests that are identical to the particular participating interest and that are held by the taxpayer in the particular taxation year) only if

(a) subsection 94.1(3) does not apply to the taxpayer for the particular taxation year in respect of the particular participating interest;

(b) at the end of a taxation year of the non-resident entity that ends in the particular taxation year, the particular participating interest

(i) is held by the taxpayer, and

(ii) either

(A) is not an exempt interest in the non-resident entity, or

(B) would not be such an exempt interest if the definition "exempt interest" in subsection 94.1(1) were read without reference to subparagraph (a)(i) or (ii) of that definition;

(c) at the end of that taxation year of the non-resident entity, it is a tracking entity in respect of the particular participating interest;

(d) at any time in the particular taxation year, the amount of any payment (under a right to receive, in any manner whatever and from any entity, amounts in respect of the particular participating interest or any identical interests), or the value of such a right, is, directly or indirectly, determined primarily by one or more of the following criteria in respect of one or more properties (such property or properties together referred to, in this subsection and the definition "tracking entity", as "tracked property" or "tracked properties"):

(i) production from the property, use of the property, gains from the disposition of the property, profits from the disposition of the property, fair market value of the property,

(ii) income from the property, profits from the property, revenue from the property, cash flow from the property, or

(iii) any other criterion similar to a criterion referred to in either of subparagraphs (i) or (ii); and

(e) throughout each taxation year of the non-resident entity that ends in the particular taxation year, all or substantially all of the fair market value of the tracked property cannot be attributed, either directly or indirectly, to the fair market value of property

(i) that is a share or shares of the capital stock of a corporation that is at that time a particular foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that if held at that time by the taxpayer would be

(A) a qualifying interest (within the meaning assigned by paragraph 95(2)(m)) of the taxpayer in the particular foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, and

(B) throughout the period, in the particular taxation year, that the taxpayer held the share or shares, a participating interest of the taxpayer in a qualifying entity, and

(ii) that is not at that time tracked property in respect of a participating interest in a non-resident entity of an entity that is not related to the taxpayer.

Technical Notes: New subsection 94.2(9) is an anti-avoidance rule intended to prevent the circumvention of subsection 94.1(3) through the use of a participating interest, in a "tracking entity" (as defined in subsection 94.1(1)). Where subsection 94.2(9) applies with regard to an interest in a tracking entity for a taxation year, subsection 94.1(4) will apply to the taxpayer for that year unless subsection 94.2(3) applies for that year in respect of the interest.

Subsection 94.2(9) applies to a taxpayer (other than an exempt taxpayer, as defined in subsection 94.1(1)) for a particular taxation year of the taxpayer in respect of a particular participating interest of the taxpayer in a non-resident entity (and any participating interests of the taxpayer in the non-resident entity that are identical to the particular participating interest) if

- subsection 94.1(3) does not apply to the taxpayer for the particular taxation year in respect of the particular participating interest,
- the particular participating interest is, at the end of a taxation year of the non-resident entity that ends in the particular taxation year, held by the taxpayer, and generally not an "exempt interest" (as defined in subsection 94.1(1)); however, note that an interest of a taxpayer in a controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer or a "qualifying entity" (as defined in subsection 94.1(1)) will not qualify as an exempt interest for this purpose, with the result that subsection 94.2(9) may apply to such interests,

- the non-resident entity is, at the end of that taxation year of the non-resident entity, a "tracking entity" (as defined in subsection 94.2(1)) in respect of the particular participating interest,
- at any time in the particular taxation year, the amount of any payment (under a right to receive, in any manner whatever and from any entity, amounts in respect of the particular participating interest or any identical interests), or the value of such a right, is, directly or indirectly, determined primarily by one or more of the following criteria in respect of one or more properties (such property or properties together referred to in subsection 94.2(9) and the definition "tracking entity" in subsection 94.2(1) as "tracked property" or "tracked properties"):
  - production from the property, use of the property, gains from the disposition of the property, profits from the disposition of the property, fair market value of the property,
  - income from the property, profits from the property, revenue from the property, cash flow from the property, or
  - any other criterion similar to any of the above criteria and
- throughout each taxation year of the non-resident entity that ends in the particular taxation year, all or substantially all of the fair market value of the tracked property cannot be attributed, either directly or indirectly, to the fair market value of property:
  - that is a share or shares of the capital stock of a corporation that is at that time a particular foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that if held at that time by the taxpayer would be a qualifying interest (within the meaning assigned by paragraph 95(2)(m)) of the taxpayer in the particular foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, and a participating interest of the taxpayer in a qualifying entity, and
  - that is not at that time tracked property in respect of a participating interest in a non-resident entity of an entity that is not related to the taxpayer.

It should be noted that tracked properties can include any property, whether owned by the non-resident entity or not. For example, if the fair market value of shares issued by a non-resident entity were tracked to the worldwide price of gold bullion, the tracked properties in question would be the worldwide supply of gold bullion. Whether subsection 94.2(9) applies in this case or not would typically depend on whether the non-resident entity is a tracking entity, as defined in subsection 94.2(1).

Related Provisions: 91(1) — Tracked shares ignored for FAPI income inclusion; 94.1(4) — Income inclusion — imputed income regime; 94.2(3)(b)(i) — Application of mark-to-market method; 94.3(2)(b)(i), 94.3(3)(b)(ii) — Application where 94.2(9) applies.

(10) Treatment of foreign insurance policies — This subsection applies to a taxpayer for a particular taxation year of the taxpayer in respect of an interest in an insurance policy, if

(a) the taxpayer is not an exempt taxpayer for the particular taxation year;

(b) the taxpayer holds, at any time in the particular taxation year, an interest in the insurance policy; and

(c) the insurance policy is not an insurance policy issued by an insurer in the course of carrying on an insurance business in Canada, the income from which is subject to tax under this Part.

Technical Notes: New subsection 94.2(10) applies if a taxpayer (other than an exempt taxpayer, as defined in subsection 94.1(1)) holds, at any time in a particular taxation year of the taxpayer, an interest in a foreign insurance policy. For this purpose, a foreign insurance policy is one that is not issued by an insurer in the course of carrying on business in Canada the income from which is subject to tax under Part I.

Related Provisions: 94.2(11) — Effect of subsection applying.

(11) Treatment of foreign insurance policies — If subsection (10) applies to a taxpayer for a particular taxation year of the taxpayer in respect of an interest in an insurance policy

(a) subject to paragraph (c), this paragraph applies to the taxpayer for the particular taxation year in respect of the interest, and no amount shall be included or deducted, as the case may be, under section 12.2, paragraphs 56(1)(d) and (j) and 60(a) and (s) and sections 138.1 and 148 in respect of the interest for the purpose of computing the taxpayer's income for the particular taxation year;

(b) subject to paragraph (c), in applying subsections (1) to (4) and paragraph (d.1) of the definition "specified foreign property" in subsection 233.3(1) to the taxpayer in respect of the interest for the particular taxation year,

(i) the interest is deemed at each time in the particular taxation year that it is held by the taxpayer to be a participating interest in a non-resident entity, and

(ii) the value of D in the mark-to-market formula for the taxation year in respect of the participating interest is deemed to be nil;

(c) paragraphs (a) and (b) do not apply to a taxpayer for a taxation year in respect of an insurance policy if

(i) the taxpayer is an individual and the interest in the policy was acquired by the individual more than 60 months before the individual became resident in Canada unless, after the day that is 60 months before the day that the individual became resident in Canada, the individual paid premiums in respect of the policy that are in excess of the level that can reasonably be considered to have been contemplated at the time the first interest in the policy was acquired,

(ii) under the terms and conditions of the insurance policy, the taxpayer is entitled to receive only benefits payable as a consequence of the occurrence of risks insured under the policy, an experience rated refund of premiums for a year or a return of premiums previously paid upon the surrender, cancellation or termination of the insurance policy, or

(iii) the taxpayer can establish to the satisfaction of the Minister that

(A) the interest in the policy was, on the anniversary day (as defined in subsection 12.2(11)) of the policy that occurs in the taxation year, an exempt policy, or

(B) the taxpayer has included in computing the taxpayer's income for the particular year the amount, if any, required under section 12.2 to be included in computing the taxpayer's income for that year in respect of the interest;

(d) for the purpose of subsections (1) and (4), an interest in an insurance policy held by a taxpayer at the end of a particular taxation year is deemed to have been acquired by the taxpayer at the beginning of the following taxation year at a cost equal to the fair market value at the end of the particular taxation year of the interest if

(i) paragraphs (a) and (b) do not apply to the taxpayer in respect of the interest for the particular year, and

(ii) paragraphs (a) and (b) apply to the taxpayer in respect of the interest for the taxpayer's following taxation year;

(e) for the purpose of subsections (1) and (4), an interest in an insurance policy held by a taxpayer at the beginning of a particular taxation year is deemed to have been disposed of by the taxpayer at the end of the taxpayer's preceding taxation year for proceeds of disposition equal to its fair market value at the end of that preceding taxation year if

(i) paragraphs (a) and (b) do not apply to the taxpayer in respect of the interest for the particular taxation year, and

(ii) paragraphs (a) and (b) applied to the taxpayer in respect of the interest for the taxpayer's preceding taxation year;

(f) for the purposes of this subsection and subsections (1) and (4), the fair market value of an interest in an insurance policy, the proceeds of disposition of an interest in an insurance policy and amounts paid to a beneficiary in respect of an interest in an insurance policy are each determined without reference to benefits paid, payable or anticipated to be payable, under the insurance policy as a consequence only of the occurrence of the risks insured under the insurance policy;

(g) for the purposes of this subsection and subsections (1) and (4),

(i) an interest in an insurance policy is deemed to have been acquired by the taxpayer in a particular taxation year (notwithstanding that the interest was held by the taxpayer at the end of the preceding taxation year), where the taxpayer made a payment described in subparagraph (ii) in respect of a premium or a loan under the policy in the particular taxation year,

(ii) the cost to the taxpayer of an interest in an insurance policy acquired in a particular taxation year is the total of all amounts each of which is

(A) the amount of a premium paid by the taxpayer in the particular taxation year under the insurance policy to the extent that it cannot be refunded (otherwise than on termination or cancellation of the policy) and is not a payment in respect of a benefit described in subparagraphs (c)(i) to (vii) of the definition "premium" in subsection 148(9),

(B) the amount of a payment made by the taxpayer in the particular taxation year in respect of the principal amount of a loan made under the insurance policy in any taxation year to the extent that the loan was included in determining the value of C in the mark-to-market formula for the taxation year, in which the loan was made, in respect of the participating interest, and

(C) an amount (other than amount described in clause (A) or (B)) paid by the taxpayer to acquire the interest from an entity other than the insurer that issued the policy;

(h) if, under paragraph (d), a taxpayer is deemed to have acquired an interest in an insurance policy at the beginning of a taxation year (referred to in this paragraph as the "acquisition year"), the taxpayer may add to the cost of that interest, the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total amount of premiums paid by the taxpayer before the beginning of the acquisition year in respect of that interest at a time at which the taxpayer was resident in Canada and not an exempt taxpayer for the year in respect of the interest (to the extent that the premiums paid cannot be refunded otherwise than on termination or cancellation of the policy and are not premiums paid in respect of a benefit described in subparagraphs (c)(i) to (vii) of the definition "premium" in subsection 148(9))

(ii) the total of the fair market value, at the beginning of the acquisition year, of that interest and the total of the amounts received by the taxpayer before the beginning of the acquisition year under the policy at a time at which the taxpayer was resident in Canada and not an exempt taxpayer for the year in respect of the interest;

(i) for the purpose of subsections (1) and (4), if the amount determined under subparagraph (h)(ii) exceeds the amount determined under subparagraph (h)(i) in respect of an interest in an insurance policy of a taxpayer described in paragraph (h), the amount of the excess shall be added in computing the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition of that interest for the taxation year in which the taxpayer disposes of the interest otherwise than because of paragraph (e); and

(j) where an interest in an insurance policy is held by a taxpayer at the beginning of a particular taxation year, paragraphs (a) and (b) do not apply to the taxpayer in respect of the interest for the particular taxation year, and paragraphs (a) and (b) applied to the taxpayer in respect of the interest for the taxpayer's preceding taxation year, the interest is deemed to have been acquired by the taxpayer at the beginning of the particular taxation year at a cost equal to the amount, if any, by which

(i) the total of

(A) the fair market value, at the end of the taxpayer's preceding taxation year, of the interest, and

(B) the amount that would be determined under subparagraph (4)(a)(ii) in respect of the interest in respect of the taxpayer for the taxpayer's preceding taxation year if that subparagraph were read without reference to its clause (A),

exceeds

(ii) the amount determined under paragraph (i) in respect of the interest in respect of the taxpayer.

Technical Notes: Subsection 94.2(11) sets out the treatment under section 94.2 of an interest in the foreign insurance policy. Where subsection 94.2(10) applies, paragraph 94.2(11)(a) provides, subject to paragraph 94.2(11)(c), that

- it applies to the interest, with the result that, in conjunction with paragraph 94.2(3)(a), the mark-to-market rules in subsection 94.2(4) apply to the interest, and

- no amount shall be included or deducted, as the case may be, under section 12.2, paragraphs 56(1)(d) and (j) and 60(a) and (s) and sections 138.1 and 148 in respect of the interest for the purpose of computing the taxpayer's income for the particular taxation year.

Paragraph 94.2(11)(b) generally provides that, where a taxpayer (other than an exempt taxpayer) holds an interest in a foreign insurance policy, for the purposes of subsections 94.2(1) to (4) (and a corresponding foreign property reporting rule in subsection 233.3(1)) the particular interest is deemed to be a participating interest in a non-resident entity. However, the mark-to-market regime under subsection 94.2(4) applies differently to insurance policies in three respects:

- first, no deferral amount is calculated with regard to insurance policies,
- second, losses are not deductible, but instead can be used to offset future income amounts otherwise arising under subsection 94.2(4). (As to the treatment of losses, see the commentary on the definition "mark-to-market formula" in subsection 94.2(1)), and
- third, the interest will not be a participating interest for the purposes of subsection 94.2(20), so that paragraph 94.4(2)(b) will not apply to amounts determined under the mark-to-market formula in respect of the interest.

Paragraph 94.2(11)(c) provides that paragraphs 94.2(11)(a) and (b) do not apply to a taxpayer in respect of an insurance policy in the following situations:

- The taxpayer is an individual and the interest in the policy was acquired more than five years before the taxpayer became resident in Canada. However, this exception does not apply if premiums in excess of the level originally contemplated under the policy have been paid within 5 years of the policyholder becoming resident in Canada or while the policyholder was resident in Canada.
- Under the terms and conditions of the policy, the policyholder is entitled to receive only benefits payable as a consequence of the occurrence of the risks insured under the policy, an experience rated refund of premiums for a year and a return of premiums previously paid upon the surrender, cancellation or termination of the policy.
- The taxpayer can establish to the satisfaction of the Minister of National Revenue that
  - the interest in the policy was, on the anniversary day (as defined in subsection 12.2(11)) of the policy that occurs in the taxation year, an exempt policy, or
  - an appropriate amount of income has been included in the taxpayer's income under section 12.2 in respect of the policy or that the interest in the policy is an interest in an exempt policy for the purpose of that section.

In the event that new paragraphs 94.2(11)(a) and (b) do not apply to a taxpayer in respect of an interest in an insurance policy in a particular year but apply to that taxpayer in respect of that interest in the following year, paragraph 94.2(11)(d) provides that the taxpayer is deemed to have acquired the interest in the insurance policy, at its fair market value at the end of the particular year (determined with reference to paragraph 94.2(11)(f)), immediately after the beginning of the following taxation year.

In the event that paragraphs 94.2(11)(a) and (b) do not apply to a taxpayer in respect of an interest in an insurance policy for a taxation year but did apply in the preceding taxation year, paragraph 94.2(11)(e) provides that the taxpayer is deemed to have disposed of the interest in the insurance policy immediately before the end of the preceding taxation year for proceeds equal to its fair market value at that time.

Paragraph 94.2(11)(f) provides that the fair market value of an interest in an insurance policy and amounts of proceeds of disposition of an interest in an insurance policy and payments in respect of interests in insurance policy are determined without reference to benefits paid, payable or anticipated to be payable under the policy only as a consequence of the occurrence of the risks insured under the policy.

Paragraph 94.2(11)(g) provides that, where a taxpayer makes a premium or a policy loan payment in respect of an insurance policy in a taxation year, an interest in the insurance policy is deemed to have been acquired in the year. The cost of the interest is the total of the premiums paid, the payments of the principal amount of policy loans to the extent the loans were included in proceeds of disposition of the interest in prior years, and any amount paid by the taxpayer to acquire the interest from an entity other than the insurer that issued the policy.

Paragraph 94.2(11)(h) provides rules permitting additions to the deemed cost of an interest in a policy otherwise determined for a year where the actual costs exceed the fair market value of interest at the beginning of the first taxation year in which subsection 94.2(4) applies to the taxpayer in respect of these interests. The amount that may be added is the amount, if any, by which the qualifying premiums paid at or before that time in respect of the interest in the policy exceeds the fair market value of the interest at that time.

Paragraph 94.2(11)(i) provides rules adding to a taxpayer's proceeds of disposition otherwise determined of an interest in an insurance policy for the year in which it is disposed of, the amount by which the fair market value of the interest at the beginning of the first taxation year in which subsection 94.2(4) applies to the taxpayer in respect of the interest exceeds the cost of the interest at that time.

In the event that paragraphs 94.2(11)(a) and (b) do not apply to a taxpayer in respect of an interest in an insurance policy for one taxation year and did apply in the preceding year, paragraph 94.2(11)(j) deems the taxpayer to have acquired the interest at the beginning of the taxation year and provides that the cost of the interest is equal to the amount if any by which the total of the fair market value and the amount that would be determined under subparagraph 94.2(4)(a)(ii) (read without reference to its clause (A)) in respect of the interest at the end of the preceding taxation year exceeds the amount determined under paragraph 94.2(11)(i) in respect of the interest in respect of the taxpayer.

Subsections 94.2(10) and (11) apply for taxation years that begin after 2002.

Example

Assume that David, a long-term resident of Canada, pays premiums of $10,000 to an offshore insurer for a life insurance policy in 2000. The policy's fair market value is $9,000 and $10,700 at the end of 2003 and 2004 (respectively).

Results

1. For 2003, no income amount is determined under paragraph 94.2(4)(a) because the cost of the policy exceeds the fair market value at the end of 2003. The cost to David of the policy is deemed to be $10,000 ($9000 + $1000).

2. The loss for the year 2003 is $1000. ($9000 - $10,000). No claim in respect of the loss is permitted under paragraph 94.2(4)(b). The amount of the denied loss is equal to $1,000 and is included under G in the formula in paragraph 94.2(4)(a) in year 2004.

3. For 2004, the amount included in income under paragraph 94.2(4)(a) is $700 (= $10,700 ("B"), minus $9,000 ("F"), minus $1,000 ("G")).

It is possible that the cash surrender value of a policy may be less than its fair market value.

(12) Change of status — If a participating interest in a non-resident entity is held by a taxpayer at a time that is the beginning of a taxation year, subsection (4) applied for the purpose of computing the taxpayer's income for the preceding taxation year in respect of the participating interest, and that subsection does not apply for the purpose of computing the taxpayer's income for the taxation year in respect of the participating interest (otherwise than because the taxpayer became an exempt taxpayer or ceased to reside in Canada),

(a) subject to paragraph (c), the taxpayer is deemed to have acquired the participating interest at that time at a cost equal to its fair market value at that time;

(b) where the participating interest is capital property of the taxpayer, in computing the adjusted cost base after that time to the taxpayer of the interest

(i) there shall be deducted

(A) except where the taxpayer has made an election in respect of the participating interest under subparagraph (a)(iii) of the description of D in the mark-to-market formula for the taxation year in respect of the participating interest, the product of the positive deferral amount, if any, in respect of the participating interest and the gross-up factor for the deferral amount, and

(B) the absolute value of the negative reconciliation amount, if any, at that time in respect of the participating interest, and

(ii) there shall be added

(A) the product of the absolute value of the negative deferral amount, if any, in respect of the participating interest and the gross-up factor for the deferral amount, and

(B) the positive reconciliation amount, if any, at that time in respect of the participating interest; and

(c) where paragraph (b) does not apply,

(i) there shall be deducted in computing the cost to the taxpayer of the participating interest

(A) except where the taxpayer has made an election in respect of the participating interest under subparagraph (a)(iii) of the description of D in the mark-to-market formula for the taxation year in respect of the participating interest, the lesser of

(I) the product of the positive deferral amount, if any, in respect of the participating interest and the gross-up factor for the deferral amount, and

(II) the cost to the taxpayer of the participating interest, determined without reference to this subparagraph, and

(B) the absolute value of the negative reconciliation amount, if any, at that time in respect of the participating interest, and

(ii) there shall be included in computing the taxpayer's income for the taxation year in respect of the participating interest the amount, if any, by which

(A) the amount determined under subclause (i)(A)(I) in respect of the participating interest

exceeds

(B) the amount determined under subclause (i)(A)(II) in respect of the participating interest, and

(iii) there shall be added in computing the cost to the taxpayer of the participating interest

(A) the product of the absolute value of the negative deferral amount, if any, in respect of the participating interest and the gross-up factor for the deferral amount, and

(B) the positive reconciliation amount, if any, at that time in respect of the participating interest.

Technical Notes: New subsection 94.2(12) sets out rules that apply where a taxpayer holds a participating interest in a non-resident entity at a time that is the beginning of a particular taxation year and subsection 94.2(4) applied for the purpose of computing the taxpayer's income for the preceding taxation year in respect of the participating interest, but does not apply for the particular taxation year (otherwise than because the taxpayer ceased to reside in Canada or became an exempt taxpayer as defined in subsection 94.1(1)).

Where subsection 94.2(12) applies, the taxpayer is deemed to have acquired the particular interest at the beginning of the following taxation year at a cost equal to the fair market value of the particular interest at that time.

This subsection could apply, for example, where a taxpayer's interest in a foreign investment entity ceases to have a readily obtainable fair market value (as defined in subsection 94.2(1)) or where the entity ceases to be a foreign investment entity (as defined in subsection 94.1(1).

Since the taxpayer is deemed to have acquired the property at its fair market value at the beginning of the following year, all increases and decreases in the value of the interest from the time of its acquisition are reflected in the taxpayer's cost of the interest for tax purposes. However, only the gain or loss accruing while it was subject to subsection 94.2(4) has been brought into income. Because of the rules in respect of deferral amounts, the gain or loss in value for the period from the time of acquisition to the time it became subject to subsection 94.2(4) would not generally have been taken into consideration for tax purposes.

Accordingly, paragraph 94.2(12)(b) provides for a negative or positive adjustment to the adjusted cost base (ACB) of a participating interest held as capital property. Any positive "deferral amount" (as defined in subsection 94.2(1)) in respect of the interest is deducted in computing the ACB of the interest, but the deduction is grossed-up by a factor of two in the event that the deferral amount was calculated with reference to one-half of the accrued gains. The ACB deduction does not, however, apply in the event that a positive deferral amount has already been taken into account because of an election under the description of D in the mark-to-market formula (as defined in subsection 94.2(1)) for the taxation year in respect of the participating interest. The ACB is also reduced by the amount of any negative "reconciliation amount" (as defined in subsection 94.2(1)) in respect of the participating interest.

The absolute value of any negative deferral amount (or twice the amount if the 1/2 factor was used in computing the negative deferral amount) is added in computing the ACB of the interest. There is also added any positive reconciliation amount in respect of the participating interest.

Where capital property is not involved, a corresponding decrease or increase in cost (rather than adjusted cost basis) is provided under paragraph 94.2(12)(c). To the extent that the decrease in respect of the positive or negative deferral amount would otherwise result in a negative cost, the decrease is brought into the taxpayer's income under subparagraph 94.2(12)(c)(ii).

For more detail, see the commentary on paragraphs 53(1)(m.1) and 53(2)(w), the definitions "deferral amount", "mark-to-market formula" and "reconciliation amount" in subsection 94.2(1), and subsection 94.2(4).

Related Provisions: 53(1)(m.1) — Addition to adjusted cost base; 53(2)(w) — Deduction from adjusted cost base; 94.2(1)"reconciliation amount" — Calculation where para. (a) applies; 94.2(15) — Fresh start re change of status of entity.

(13) Cost of participating interest — If a taxpayer's participating interest in a non-resident entity is disposed of by the taxpayer at a particular time in a taxation year and subsection (4) applies for the purpose of computing the taxpayer's income for the taxation year in respect of the participating interest, in determining the taxpayer's cost of the participating interest immediately before the particular time

(a) if the participating interest was held by the taxpayer at the beginning of the taxation year, its cost to the taxpayer immediately before the particular time is deemed to be equal to the fair market value at the beginning of the taxation year of the participating interest; and

(b) in any other case, its cost to the taxpayer immediately before the particular time is deemed to be equal to the amount that would be its cost to the taxpayer at the particular time if this Act were read without reference to this section (other than subsection (2)).

Technical Notes: New subsection 94.2(13) provides a rule for determining the cost at a particular time of a participating interest in an entity for a taxation year in the event that the interest is disposed of by the taxpayer in the year.

The cost to the taxpayer immediately before the disposition of the property is deemed to be its fair market value at the beginning of the taxpayer's taxation year. In the event that the property was not held by the taxpayer at that time, its cost immediately before the disposition is its cost determined without reference to section 94.2 (other than subsection 94.2(2)). In identifying property for these purposes, identical properties of a taxpayer are considered to be disposed of on a "first in, first out" basis, as a consequence of the application of paragraph 94.2(2)(a).

Under new paragraph (c.2) of the definition "cost amount" in subsection 248(1), the cost determined at a particular time for a property under subsection 94.2(13) is also the "cost amount" of the property at the particular time.

Related Provisions: 248(1)"cost amount"(c.2) — Cost amount applies for entire Act.

(14) Deferral amount where same interest reacquired — Subject to subsections (15) to (18), if a taxpayer disposes of a participating interest in an entity at any time in a taxation year of the taxpayer and subsection (4) applies for the purpose of computing the taxpayer's income for the year in respect of the participating interest, in applying subsection (4) to a disposition after that time by the taxpayer of the participating interest, the deferral amount of the taxpayer in respect of the participating interest is nil.

Technical Notes: New subsection 94.2(14) generally provides that a "deferral amount" in respect of a property of a taxpayer is deemed to be nil, after the property has been disposed of by the taxpayer at a time when the mark-to-market rules in subsection 94.2(4) applied to the property. This is of relevance to property that is reacquired by a taxpayer. However, subsection 94.2(14) is subject to the rules in subsections 94.2(15) to (18).

It should be noted that identical properties of a taxpayer are considered to be disposed of on a "first in, first out" basis as a consequence of the application of paragraph 94.2(2)(a).

Related Provisions: 87(2)(j.95) — Amalgamation — continuing corporation.

(15) Deferral amount — fresh start re change of status of entity — If a participating interest is deemed by paragraph (12)(a) to have been acquired at a particular time in a taxation year by a taxpayer, in applying subsection (4) to a disposition after the taxation year by the taxpayer of the participating interest and to an election made after the taxation year by the taxpayer under subparagraph (a)(iii) of the description of D in the mark-to-market formula for the taxation year in respect of the participating interest, the deferral amount of the taxpayer in respect of the participating interest shall be determined

(a) for the purpose of subparagraph (a)(iii) of the description of B in the definition "deferral amount", as if subsection (4) had not applied to the taxpayer in respect of the participating interest for taxation years that began before the particular time; and

(b) without reference to the application of subsection (14) with regard to dispositions that occurred before the particular time.

Technical Notes: New subsection 94.2(15) applies where a taxpayer's participating interest in an entity was initially subject to the rules in subsection 94.2(4) and ceases to be subject to those rules (otherwise than because of the taxpayer having become an "exempt taxpayer"). For example, subsection 94.2(15) could apply where an entity ceases to be a FIE.

In these circumstances, the deferral amount in respect of the participating interest is determined without reference to previous applications of subsections 94.2(4) and (14). This rule is relevant only in the event that the same participating interest of the taxpayer again becomes subject to the rules in subsection 94.2(4).

Parallel "fresh-start" rules are contained in subsection 94.2(16) and (17). All of these "fresh-start" rules are expected to be only rarely involved, given that more than one change in status of an investment or a taxpayer is required for the rules to become relevant. For more information on the "deferral amount" defined in subsection 94.2(1), see the commentary on that definition.

(16) Deferral amount — fresh start after emigration of taxpayer — If a taxpayer ceases at a particular time to be resident in Canada, in applying subsection (4) to a disposition after the particular time by the taxpayer of a participating interest and to an election made after the particular time by the taxpayer under subparagraph (a)(iii) of the description of D in the mark-to-market formula for a taxation year in respect of the participating interest, the deferral amount of the taxpayer in respect of the participating interest shall be determined

(a) for the purpose of subparagraph (a)(iii) of the description of B in the definition "deferral amount", as if subsection (4) had not applied to the taxpayer in respect of the participating interest for taxation years that began before the particular time; and

(b) without reference to the application of subsection (14) with regard to dispositions that occurred before the particular time.

Technical Notes: New subsection 94.2(16) affects the calculation of the "deferral amount" in respect of a participating interest in an entity for a taxpayer who has ceased to reside in Canada. It is relevant in the event that, at a subsequent time, the taxpayer becomes resident in Canada again.

In these circumstances, the deferral amounts in respect of the taxpayer's FIE interests are determined without reference to the previous application of subsections 94.2(4) and (14).

For further detail, see the commentary on the related fresh-start rule in subsection 94.2(15).

(17) Deferral amount — fresh start on becoming an exempt taxpayer — If a taxpayer is an exempt taxpayer for a particular taxation year of the taxpayer because of the application of paragraph (a) or (b) of the definition "exempt taxpayer" in subsection 94.1(1), and the taxpayer was not an exempt taxpayer for the taxation year of the taxpayer that preceded the particular taxation year, in applying subsection (4) to a disposition after the particular taxation year by the taxpayer of a participating interest and to an election made after the particular taxation year by the taxpayer under subparagraph (a)(iii) of the description of D in the mark-to-market formula for a taxation year in respect of the participating interest, the deferral amount of the taxpayer in respect of the participating interest shall be determined

(a) for the purpose of subparagraph (a)(iii) of the description of B in the definition "deferral amount", as if subsection (4) had not applied to the taxpayer in respect of the participating interest for taxation years that ended before the particular taxation year; and

(b) without reference to the application of subsection (14) with regard to dispositions that occurred before the particular taxation year.

Technical Notes: New subsection 94.2(17) affects the calculation of the "deferral amount" in respect of an interest in an entity for a taxpayer that initially was not an "exempt taxpayer" under paragraph (a) or (b) of that definition in subsection 94.1(1) and then subsequently obtains that status.

In these circumstances, the deferral amounts in respect of the FIE interests of the taxpayer are determined without reference to previous applications of subsections 94.2(4) and (14).

For further context, see the commentary on the related fresh-start rule in subsection 94.2(15). In addition, it should be noted that amended subsection 149(10) applies to changes of tax-exempt status for taxpayers that are corporations. Where subsection 149(10) applies, the rules in subsection 94.2(17) do not apply.

(18) Superficial dispositions — If a taxpayer disposes of a participating interest, the deferral amount in respect of the participating interest would otherwise be a negative amount, and the disposition would, if the participating interest were a capital property and a loss arose on the disposition, give rise to a superficial loss (within the meaning that would be assigned by section 54 if the definition "superficial loss" in that section were read without the reference to subsection 40(3.4) in paragraph (h) of that definition),

(a) except for the purpose of applying paragraph (b) in respect of the disposition, the deferral amount of the taxpayer in respect of the participating interest is deemed to be nil; and

(b) the deferral amount of the taxpayer in respect of the property that would be the substituted property referred to in that definition if the assumptions described in this subsection applied is deemed to be equal to the deferral amount of the taxpayer in respect of the participating interest.

Technical Notes: New subsection 94.2(18) applies where a taxpayer disposes of a participating interest in an entity in respect of which a negative amount is determined under the description of D in the formula in subsection 94.2(4). This would be the case where there is a negative deferral amount associated with the interest. In these circumstances, the deferral amount is instead generally deemed to be nil if, during the period beginning 30 days before the disposition and ending 30 days after the disposition, identical property is acquired by the taxpayer or certain related persons.

Subsection 94.2(18) operates in a manner similar to the "superficial loss" rules for capital properties and is intended to prevent the premature realization of losses in respect of a property in which a taxpayer effectively retains an economic interest. "Superficial loss" has the same meaning as assigned in section 54, except that the definition for the purposes of subsection 94.2(18) does not contain the exception for transactions covered by subsection 40(3.4).

Property substituted for the particular property is, in these circumstances, considered to have the deferral amount associated with the property disposed of.

(19) Determination of capital dividend account — If an amount has been included or deducted under paragraph (4)(a) in computing the income of a corporation resident in Canada for a taxation year in respect of a participating interest, in computing the capital dividend account of the corporation

(a) the corporation is deemed to have

(i) a capital gain from a disposition at the end of the taxation year of property equal to twice the amount of the taxable capital gain determined under subparagraph (ii), and

(ii) a taxable capital gain from the disposition at the end of the taxation year of property equal to the lesser of

(A) the positive amount, if any, that is the value of D in the mark-to-market formula for the taxation year in respect of the participating interest (where the gross-up factor for the deferral amount in respect of the participating interest is 2), and

(B) the amount included in computing the income of the corporation for the taxation year under subsection (4); and

(b) the corporation is deemed to have

(i) a capital loss from a disposition at the end of the taxation year of property equal to twice the amount of the allowable capital loss determined under subparagraph (ii), and

(ii) an allowable capital loss from the disposition at the end of the taxation year of property equal to the lesser of

(A) the absolute value of the negative amount, if any, that is the value of D in the mark-to-market formula for the taxation year in respect of the participating interest (where the gross-up factor for the deferral amount in respect of the participating interest is 2), and

(B) the amount deducted in computing the income of the corporation for the taxation year under subsection (4).

Technical Notes: New subsection 94.2(19) provides rules that deem a positive or negative deferral amount in respect of a disposition of what would, but for section 94.2, be a capital property of a taxpayer that is a corporation resident in Canada, to be a taxable capital gain or an allowable capital loss, as the case may be, and twice such an amount to be a capital gain or capital loss of the corporation, as the case may be, for the purposes of computing the capital dividend account of the corporation. This rule ensures that ½ of a capital gain or a capital loss that is attributable to a deferral amount is reflected in the capital dividend account of a corporation.

Related Provisions: 95(2)(g.3)(ix) — Application to FAPI rules.

(20) Application of para. (4)(b) — This subsection applies for a taxation year of a taxpayer in respect of a participating interest, in a particular non-resident entity, held in the taxation year by the taxpayer, if

(a) the participating interest would, if paragraph 39(1)(a) and the definition "inventory" in subsection 248(1) were read without reference to this section, be a capital property of the taxpayer at the last time in the taxation year at which the taxpayer held the participating interest; and

(b) all or substantially all of the amount determined under the mark-to-market formula for the taxation year in respect of the participating interest can be attributed to

(i) capital gains or capital losses from the disposition of capital property (other than a participating interest in a foreign investment entity) by the particular non-resident entity or by any foreign investment entity in which the particular non-resident entity has a direct or indirect interest, and

(ii) increases or decreases in the fair market value of capital property (other than a participating interest in a foreign investment entity) of the particular non-resident entity or of any foreign investment entity in which the particular non-resident entity has a direct or indirect interest.

Technical Notes: New subsection 94.2(20) provides a special rule that requires a taxpayer to report, as capital gains or losses under paragraph 94.2(4)(b) rather than as income or losses from property under paragraph 94.2(4)(a), amounts determined under the "mark-to-market formula" for a particular year in respect of a participating interest of the taxpayer in a non-resident entity.

This rule applies where two conditions are met. The first condition is that the participating interest of the taxpayer would, if the Act were read without reference to section 94.2, be a capital property of the taxpayer at the last time in the particular taxation year at which the taxpayer held the participating interest.

The second condition is that all or substantially all of the amount required to be added or deducted under the mark-to-market formula for the taxation year in respect of the participating interest, in a particular non-resident entity, can be attributed to

- capital gains or capital losses from the disposition of capital property (other than a participating interest in a foreign investment entity) by the particular non-resident entity or by any foreign investment entity in which the particular non-resident entity has a direct or indirect interest, and
- increases or decreases in the fair market value of capital property (other than a participating interest in a foreign investment entity) of the particular non-resident entity or of any foreign investment entity in which the particular non-resident entity has a direct or indirect interest.

In the event that any entity in a chain or tier of entities holds capital properties that are particular participating interests in foreign investment entities, changes in value of the particular participating interests and gains or losses from the disposition of those interests are ignored in applying the "all or substantially all" requirement. Instead, the requirement would be computed with regard to gains or losses from the disposition of, or changes in value in, capital properties of the foreign investment entities. This is intended to prevent the use of intermediary entities, contrary to the intent of subsection 94.2(20), as a means of triggering the application of paragraph 94.2(4)(b).

Related Provisions: 39(1)(a)(ii.3) — Capital gain on property to which 94.2(20) applies; 70(3.1)(f) — "Rights or things" treatment on death; 94.2(4), (21) — Effect of subsection (20) applying.

(21) Disposition of interest — reconciliation — If a taxpayer's participating interest in a non-resident entity is disposed of by the taxpayer at a particular time in a particular taxation year, and subsection (4) applies for the purpose of computing the taxpayer's income for the particular taxation year in respect of the participating interest, in computing that income

(a) where subsection (20) does not apply for the particular taxation year, and has never applied for a preceding taxation year, in respect of the participating interest,

(i) there may be deducted, as a loss from property from a property that is the participating interest, the positive reconciliation amount, if any, at that time in respect of the participating interest, and

(ii) there shall be included, as income from property from a property that is the participating interest, the absolute value of the negative reconciliation amount, if any, at that time in respect of the participating interest; and

(b) in any other case,

(i) the taxpayer is deemed to have a capital loss for the particular taxation year from the disposition of capital property that is the participating interest in the particular taxation year equal to the positive reconciliation amount, if any, at that time in respect of the participating interest, and

(ii) the taxpayer is deemed to have a capital gain for the particular taxation year from the disposition of capital property that is the participating interest in the particular taxation year equal to the absolute value of the negative reconciliation amount, if any, at that time in respect of the participating interest.

Technical Notes: New subsection 94.2(21) applies where a taxpayer disposes of an interest in a non-resident entity at a particular time in a particular taxation year. If subsection 94.2(4) applies for the purpose of computing the taxpayer's income for the particular taxation year in respect of the participating interest, in computing that income the taxpayer may be required to include an amount of income (or to have capital gains) or may be permitted to deduct as a loss (or to have capital losses) determined with regard to the reconciliation amount (as defined in subsection 94.1(1)) at that time in respect of the participating interest.

More specifically, under paragraph 94.2(21)(a), where paragraph 94.2(4)(a) applies for the particular taxation year, and subsection 94.2(20) has never applied for a preceding taxation year, in respect of the participating interest,

- there may be deducted, as a loss from property from a property that is the participating interest, the positive reconciliation amount, if any, at that time in respect of the participating interest, and
- there shall be included, as income from property from a property that is the participating interest, the absolute value of the negative reconciliation amount, if any, at that time in respect of the participating interest.

In any other case where subsection 94.2(4) applies for the purpose of computing the taxpayer's income for the particular taxation year in respect of the participating interest, paragraph 94.2(21)(b) provides that

- the taxpayer is deemed to have a capital loss for the taxation year from the disposition in the taxation year of capital property that is the participating interest equal to the positive reconciliation amount, if any, in respect of the participating interest, and
- the taxpayer is deemed to have a capital gain for the taxation year from the disposition in the taxation year of capital property that is the participating interest equal to the absolute value of the negative reconciliation amount, if any, in respect of the participating interest.

Where a taxpayer disposes of a participating interest in a taxation year of the taxpayer and subsection 94.2(21) does not apply (i.e., because subsection 94.2(4) does not apply for the purpose of computing the taxpayer's income for the particular taxation year in respect of the participating interest), subsection 94.2(12) may apply to adjust, with reference to the reconciliation amount in respect of the interest, the taxpayer's adjusted cost base (or cost) of the interest.

For more detail, see the commentary on subsection 94.2(12) and the definition "reconciliation amount" in subsection 94.2(1).

94.3 Foreign investment entities — accrual — (1) Definitions — The definitions in subsections 94.1(1) and 94.2(1), and the following definitions, apply in this section.

Technical Notes: New section 94.3 sets out new rules for the taxation of interests in FIEs where subsections 94.1(4) and 94.2(3) do not apply.

Section 94.3 applies to taxation years that begin after 2002.

New subsection 94.3(1) sets out a number of definitions and provides that those definitions and the definitions in subsections 94.1(1) and 94.2(1) apply for the purposes of section 94.2.

"fresh-start year", of a non-resident entity in respect of a taxpayer, means a taxation year of the non-resident entity

(a) that ends in a taxation year of the taxpayer that begins after 2002 if, at the end of the taxation year of the non-resident entity, the non-resident entity is a foreign investment entity and the taxpayer holds a participating interest, other than an exempt interest, in the non-resident entity; and

(b) that begins immediately after a preceding taxation year of the non-resident entity at the end of which the non-resident entity was not a foreign investment entity or the taxpayer did not hold a participating interest in the non-resident entity.

Technical Notes: The definition "fresh-start year" is relevant to calculating a taxpayer's "income allocation" (as defined in subsection 94.3(1)) in respect of a FIE. In general terms, a fresh-start year of an entity in respect of a taxpayer that holds a participating interest in the entity means a taxation year of the entity at the end of which it becomes an entity in respect of which subsection 94.1(3) may apply to the taxpayer in respect of the participating interest.

For more detail, see the commentary on subsection 94.3(4) and on the definition "income allocation" in subsection 94.3(1).

Related Provisions: 95(2)(g.3)(v) — Application to FAPI rules; 96(1)(d)(iii)(C) — Application to partnership.

"income allocation", of a particular taxpayer in respect of a particular participating interest, in a non-resident entity, held by the particular taxpayer at the end of a particular taxation year of the non-resident entity that ends in a taxation year of the taxpayer, means the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the amount that would be the income of the non-resident entity for the particular taxation year if

(a) except for the purposes of section 91, subparagraph (2)(b)(ii), subsection 107.4(1) and paragraph (f) of the definition "disposition" in subsection 248(1), the non-resident entity had been a taxpayer resident in Canada throughout its existence,

(b) each property held by the non-resident entity at the particular time that is the beginning of a fresh-start year of the non-resident entity in respect of the particular taxpayer had been

(i) disposed of by the non-resident entity immediately before the particular time for proceeds equal to its fair market value at the particular time, and

(ii) reacquired by the non-resident entity at the particular time at a cost equal to that fair market value,

(c) for a fresh-start year of the non-resident entity in respect of the particular taxpayer and for each following taxation year of the non-resident entity, each deduction in computing the non-resident entity's income that is contingent on a claim by the non-resident entity had been claimed by the non-resident entity to the extent, and only to the extent, designated by the particular taxpayer in prescribed form filed with the Minister with the particular taxpayer's return of income for the particular taxpayer's taxation year in which that fresh-start year or the following year, as the case may be, ends,

(d) the non-resident entity had deducted the greatest amounts that it could have claimed or deducted as a reserve under sections 20, 138 and 140 for its taxation year that precedes a fresh-start year of the non-resident entity in respect of the particular taxpayer,

(e) in applying sections 37, 65 to 66.4, and 66.7, the non-resident entity had not existed before a fresh-start year of the non-resident entity in respect of the particular taxpayer,

(f) this Act were read without reference to subsections 20(11) and (12) and to subsections 104(4) to (6),

(g) in the case where the particular taxpayer is a corporation resident in Canada, dividends received by the non-resident entity in the particular taxation year from a foreign affiliate of the particular taxpayer were included in computing the income of the non-resident entity for the particular taxation year only where

(i) the particular taxpayer did not have a qualifying interest (within the meaning assigned by paragraph 95(2)(m)) in the foreign affiliate at the time the dividends were received, or

(ii) taking into account the application of paragraphs (a) and (i), subsection 94.2(4) applied for the purpose of computing the non-resident entity's income for the particular taxation year in respect of the non-resident entity's participating interest in the foreign affiliate,

(h) where the non-resident entity holds at any time in the particular taxation year a participating interest in another non-resident entity, the description of D in the definition "mark-to-market formula" did not apply in respect of that interest,

(i) the expression "controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer" in paragraph (a) of the definition "exempt interest" referred to a controlled foreign affiliate of the particular taxpayer and not to a controlled foreign affiliate of the non-resident entity,

(j) the amount included in computing the non-resident entity's income for the particular taxation year in respect of capital gains were the amount, if any, by which the amount determined under subparagraph 3(b)(i) exceeds the amount determined under subparagraph 3(b)(ii) in respect of the non-resident entity for the particular taxation year,

(k) the amount deducted in computing the non-resident entity's income for the particular taxation year in respect of capital losses (other than business investment losses) were the amount, if any, by which the amount determined under subparagraph 3(b)(ii) exceeds the amount determined under subparagraph 3(b)(i) in respect of the non-resident entity for the particular taxation year, and

(l) the amount deducted in computing the non-resident entity's income for the particular taxation year in respect of business investment losses were the amount of its allowable business investment losses for the particular taxation year;

B is the amount that is the fair market value, at the end of the particular taxation year, of the particular participating interest; and

C is the fair market value, at the end of the particular taxation year, of all of the participating interests in the non-resident entity (other than an interest that would not be a participating interest, in the non-resident entity, if the definition "participating interest" were read without reference to paragraph (d) of that definition).

Technical Notes: The definition "income allocation" applies in determining the amount to be included, under "A" of the formula in subsection 94.3(4), in computing a taxpayer's income or loss for the taxpayer's taxation year in respect of a property that is a participating interest of the taxpayer in a FIE.

A taxpayer's income allocation (in respect of a participating interest in a FIE held by the taxpayer at the end of a particular taxation year of the FIE that ends in a taxation year of the taxpayer) is determined by the formula set out in that definition. In general terms, the taxpayer's income allocation is the proportion of the FIE's income for the particular taxation year ("A" in the formula) that the fair market value of the interest ("B" in the formula) is of the fair market value of all participating interests in the FIE ("C" in the formula). (Note that subsection 94.3(4) is unavailable in respect of a particular interest that would not be a participating interest if the definition "participating interest" in subsection 94.1(1) were read without reference to its paragraph (d).)

The calculation of a taxpayer's income allocation in respect of a FIE depends on a calculation of income for the FIE in accordance with rules set out in paragraphs (a) to (l) of "A" in the formula. This permits taxpayers to make independent calculations of a FIE's income for the purpose of determining income allocations under section 94.3 for the FIE's fresh-start year (as defined in subsection 94.3(1)) in respect of the taxpayer and subsequent years.

The special rules that apply in calculating a FIE's income in respect of a taxpayer that is a participating interest holder for the FIE's fresh-start year and subsequent years are as follows:

(a) Subject to three exceptions, the FIE is generally treated as having been a taxpayer resident of Canada throughout its existence. First, this rule does not apply for the purposes of subsection 107.4(1) or paragraph (f) of the definition "disposition" in subsection 248(1), with the result that property that is transferred to the FIE without there being any change in the beneficial ownership of the property is considered to have been transferred to the FIE under subsection 69(1) at its fair market value. Second, this rule does not apply for the purpose of section 91 with the result that the FIE will not itself be required to include an amount in respect of foreign accrual property income in computing the FIE's income. Third, this rule does not apply for the purpose of subparagraph 94.3(2)(b)(ii) with the result that section 94.1 or 94.2 (rather that section 94.3) potentially applies in the event that the FIE owns a participating interest in another FIE.

(b) Each property held by the FIE at the beginning of the fresh-start year is deemed to have been disposed of for its fair market value immediately before that time and reacquired for the same amount at that time.

(c) Each discretionary deduction permitted in computing the FIE's income for the FIE's fresh-start year and subsequent taxation years is deemed to have been claimed to the extent designated by the investor taxpayer. Thus, in calculating an income allocation in respect of the FIE, the investor taxpayer will be permitted to claim deductions such as capital cost allowance.

(d) The FIE is assumed to have deducted the greatest amounts permissible, for its taxation year preceding the fresh-start year, under sections 20, 138 and 140. These amounts are added in computing the FIE's income for the fresh-start year, but appropriate deductions under these sections can be claimed for the fresh-start year and subsequent taxation years. In the context of the reserve for life insurers under subsection 138(3), it is intended that paragraph (c) of the definition "reported reserve" in subsection 1408(1) of the Regulations be amended so that the FIE can have a "reported reserve".

(e) The FIE is deemed not to have been in existence before the fresh-start year for the purposes of sections 37, 65 to 66.4 and 66.7. As a consequence, the scientific research and resource expenditure pools to which these sections refer are ignored, to the extent that these pools were generated before the fresh-start year.

(f) The FIE is not permitted to deduct any amount under subsection 20(11) or (12) in respect of its foreign tax. However, foreign tax will be taken into account because the FIE's specified tax allocation (as defined under subsection 94.3(1)) can offset amounts otherwise included in income under subsection 94.3(4). Further, if the FIE is a trust, no amount is considered deductible under subsection 104(6) in determining its income for the year. Double taxation for the investor taxpayer is avoided through the application of new section 94.4. In addition, no deemed disposition day under subsection 104(4) is determined in respect of the trust, whether the FIE falls outside the restricted meaning of "trust" for this purpose under subsection 108(1) or not.

(g) If the investor taxpayer is a corporation resident in Canada and the FIE is a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, any dividends received by the FIE from a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer in respect of which the taxpayer has a qualifying interest (as determined under paragraph 95(2)(m)) are not included in the FIE's income. Note, that this rule does not apply in the event that the FIE's interest in the foreign affiliate is subject to the mark-to-market regime in section 94.2. However, an income inclusion resulting from the application of subsection 94.2(4) for the FIE can, in some cases, be offset by the deduction provided under new subsection 94.4(2).

(h) Where the FIE has an interest in another FIE, there is no "deferral amount" taken into account in computing the FIE's income pursuant to new subsection 94.2(4). (The fresh-start rule described above eliminates the need for a "deferral amount".)

(i) Participating interests in controlled foreign affiliates of the investor taxpayer (rather than controlled foreign affiliates of the FIE) are treated as "exempt interests" of the FIE.

(j) Where the FIE has net capital gains for the particular taxation year, the amount to be included in computing the FIE income in respect of the capital gains is the amount, if any, by which the amount determined under subparagraph 3(b)(i) exceeds the amount determined under subparagraph 3(b)(ii) in respect of the FIE for the year.

(k) Where the FIE has net capital losses for the particular taxation year the amount deductible in computing the FIE income in respect of capital losses (other business investment losses) is the amount, if any, by which the amount determined under subparagraph 3(b)(ii) exceeds the amount determined under subparagraph 3(b)(i) in respect of the FIE for the year.

(l) Where the FIE has business investment losses for the year the amount deducted in computing the entity's income for the year in respect of business investment losses is the amount of its allowable business investment losses for the year.

For further details, see the related commentary on the definitions "foreign investment entity" and "exempt interest" in subsection 94.1(1) and "loss allocation" and "specified tax allocation" in subsection 94.3(1).

Related Provisions: 95(2)(g.3)(xiv) — Application to FAPI rules; 96(1)(d)(iii)(L) — Application to partnership.

"loss allocation", of a particular taxpayer in respect of a participating interest, in a non-resident entity, held by the taxpayer at the end of a particular taxation year of the non-resident entity that ends in a taxation year of the taxpayer, means the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the total of all amounts each of which is

(a) an amount that would, if paragraphs (a) to (i) of the description of A in the definition "income allocation" applied in respect of the particular taxpayer and the participating interest, be a loss of the non-resident entity for the particular taxation year from a business or property,

(b) the amount, if any, by which the amount determined under subparagraph 3(b)(ii) exceeds the amount determined under subparagraph 3(b)(i) in respect of the non-resident entity for the particular taxation year, or

(c) an allowable business investment loss of the non-resident entity for the particular taxation year;

B is the amount that would, if paragraphs (a) to (i) of the description of A in the definition "income allocation" applied in respect of the particular taxpayer and the participating interest, be determined under paragraph 3(c) in respect of the entity for the particular taxation year;

C is the amount that is the fair market value, at the end of the particular taxation year, of the participating interest; and

D is the fair market value, at the end of the particular taxation year, of all of the participating interests in the non-resident entity (other than an interest that would not be a participating interest, in the non-resident entity, if the definition "participating interest" were read without reference to paragraph (d) of that definition).

Technical Notes: The definition "loss allocation" applies in determining the amount to be included, under "B" of the formula in subsection 94.3(4), in computing a taxpayer's income or loss for the taxpayer's taxation year in respect of a property that is a participating interest of the taxpayer in a FIE. A taxpayer is entitled, under the formula in subsection 94.3(4), to deduct the taxpayer's loss allocation in respect the participating interest.

In general, a taxpayer's loss allocation in respect of a participating interest, in a non-resident entity, held by the taxpayer at the end of a particular taxation year of the non-resident entity that ends in a taxation year of the taxpayer, is the proportion of the FIE's net loss for the particular taxation year that the fair market value of the taxpayer's participating interest in the FIE is of the fair market value of all participating interests in the FIE. More specifically, a taxpayer's loss allocation is determined as follows:

- ADD the amount of the entity's total losses for the particular taxation year from businesses and properties, the amount, if any, by which the amount determined under subparagraph 3(b)(ii) exceeds the amount determined under subparagraph 3(b)(i) in respect of the entity for the particular taxation year, and the amount of the entity's allowable business investment losses for the particular taxation year,
- SUBTRACT the amount determined under paragraph 3(c) for the entity for the particular taxation year (i.e., the total amount of its income from businesses and properties and taxable capital gains in excess of allowable capital losses, for the particular taxation year), and
- MULTIPLY any positive remainder by the percentage that the fair market value of the interest represents of the fair market value of all participating interests in the entity. (Note that subsection 94.3(4) is unavailable in respect of a particular interest that would not be a participating interest if the definition "participating interest" in subsection 94.1(1) were read without reference to its paragraph (d).)

The determination of a taxpayer's loss allocation is subject to the same special rules that apply for the purposes of computing a taxpayer's "income allocation" (as defined in subsection 94.3(1)). For more detail, see the commentary on the definition "income allocation".

Related Provisions: 257 — Formula cannot calculate to less than zero.

"specified tax allocation", of a taxpayer in respect of a participating interest, in a non-resident entity, held by the taxpayer at the end of a particular taxation year of the non-resident entity that ends in a taxation year of the taxpayer, means the total of all amounts each of which is the amount determined, in respect of the particular taxation year, by the formula

$$A \times (B/C) \times D$$

where

A is

(a) if that taxation year of the taxpayer begins after 2002, the income or profits tax paid by the non-resident entity in respect of the particular taxation year, to the extent that that tax can reasonably be considered to be in respect of the income or profits of the non-resident entity included in computing the amount determined in respect of the non-resident entity and the participating interest under the description of A in the definition "income allocation" for the particular taxation year or any of the five taxation years of the non-resident entity that precede the particular taxation year and that end after 2002, and

(b) in any other case, nil;

B is the amount that is the fair market value, at the end of the particular taxation year, of the participating interest;

C is the fair market value, at the end of the particular taxation year, of all of the participating interests in the non-resident entity (other than an interest that would not be a participating interest, in the non-resident entity, if the definition "participating interest" were read without reference to paragraph (d) of that definition); and

D is the taxpayer's relevant tax factor (as defined by subsection 95(1)) for that taxation year of the taxpayer.

Technical Notes: The definition "specified tax allocation" applies in determining the amount to be included, under "C" of the formula in subsection 94.3(4), in computing a taxpayer's income or loss for the taxpayer's taxation year in respect of a property that is a participating interest of the taxpayer in a FIE. A taxpayer is entitled to deduct, under C of the formula in subsection 94.3(4), the taxpayer's specified tax allocation in respect of the participating interest

A taxpayer's specified tax allocation in respect of a participating interest, in a FIE, held by the taxpayer at the end of a particular taxation year of the FIE that ends in a taxation year of the taxpayer, means the total of all amounts each of which is the amount determined, in respect of the particular taxation year, by the formula set out in the definition.

More specifically, the taxpayer's specified tax allocation is the product obtained by the following:

- MULTIPLY, if the taxation year of the taxpayer begins after 2002, the income or profits tax paid by the FIE in respect of the particular taxation year, to the extent that that tax can reasonably be considered to be in respect of the income or profits of the FIE included in computing the amount determined in respect of the FIE and the participating interest under the description of "A" in the definition "income allocation" for the particular taxation year or any of the 5 taxation years of the FIE that precede the particular taxation year and that end after 2002, BY
- the percentage that the fair market value of the interest represents of the fair market value of all participating interests in the entity. (Note that subsection 94.3(4) is unavailable in respect of a particular interest that would not be a participating interest if the definition "participating interest" in subsection 94.1(1) were read without reference to its paragraph (d)), AND
- MULTIPLY any positive remainder by the taxpayer's relevant tax factor (as defined by subsection 95(1)) for that taxation year of the taxpayer.

Income or profits tax is normally expected to be tax that is paid by an entity to a foreign government. However, it could also include income tax paid to the government of Canada or a province with respect to income earned by the entity from Canadian sources. In each case, only income or profits tax payable for taxation years of entities that end in a taxation year of a taxpayer that begins after 2002 is taken into account.

(2) Rules of application — In this section,

(a) subsection 94.1(2) applies;

(b) subsection (3) does not apply to a taxpayer for a particular taxation year of the taxpayer in respect of a particular participating interest, in a non-resident entity, held in the particular taxation year by the taxpayer (and in respect of any other participating interests, in the non-resident entity, that are identical to the particular participating interest and that are held in the particular taxation year by the taxpayer) if

(i) subsection 94.2(3) or 94.2(9) applies to the taxpayer for the particular taxation year in respect of the particular participating interest,

(ii) the taxpayer is a foreign investment entity at the end of the particular taxation year,

(iii) the Minister sends a written demand to the taxpayer requesting additional information for the purpose of enabling the Minister to determine whether an amount with respect to the particular participating interest would be required under subsection (4) to be added (or permitted under subsection (4) to be deducted) in computing the income of the taxpayer for the particular taxation year, and information satisfactory to the Minister to make the determination is not received by the Minister within 60 days (or within any longer period that is acceptable to the Minister) after the Minister sends the demand,

(iv) the particular participating interest is an interest that would not, at each time in the particular taxation year at which the taxpayer held the particular participating interest (or any of the other participating interests) and at which a taxation year of the non-resident entity ends, be a participating interest, in the non-resident entity, if the definition "participating interest" were read without reference to paragraph (d) of that definition,

(v) subsection (3)

(A) applied for a taxation year (referred to in this subparagraph as the "preceding taxation year") that ended before the particular taxation year of the taxpayer in respect of the particular participating interest, and

(B) did not apply for a taxation year of the taxpayer that was after the preceding taxation year and before the particular taxation year in respect of the particular participating interest, or

(vi) the participating interest is a specified interest in a trust that is an exempt foreign trust because of paragraph (g) of the definition "exempt foreign trust" in subsection 94(1) and the trust holds, at any time in the particular taxation year, property in respect of which it has waived a right to receive an amount.

Technical Notes: New subsection 94.3(2) sets out rules that apply in applying section 94.3.

Paragraph 94.3(2)(a) provides that the rules of application in subsection 94.1(2) apply in section 94.3.

Paragraph 94.3(2)(b) identifies a number of circumstances in which subsection 94.3(3) (and hence subsection 94.3(4)) is not available, even though the conditions in paragraphs 94.3(3)(a) to (e) may be met, for a particular taxation year of a taxpayer in respect of a particular participating interest, in a non-resident entity, held in the particular taxation year by the taxpayer. More specifically those circumstances are:

- where, either of subsection 94.2(3) or subsection 94.2(9) (tracked interests) applies to the taxpayer in respect of the particular participating interest for the particular taxation year,
- where the taxpayer is itself a FIE,
- where the Minister of National Revenue sends a written demand to the taxpayer requesting additional information for the purpose of enabling the Minister to determine if an amount with respect to the particular participating interest would be required under subsection 94.3(4) to be added (or permitted under that subsection to be deducted) in computing the income of the taxpayer for the taxation year, and information satisfactory to the Minister to make the determination is not received by the Minister within 60 days (or within such longer period as is acceptable to the Minister) after the Minister sends the demand,
- where the particular participating interest is an interest that would not, at each time in the particular taxation year at which the taxpayer held the particular participating interest and at which a taxation year of the non-resident entity ends, be a participating interest, in the non-resident entity, if the definition "participating interest" were read without reference to paragraph (d) of that definition — that is, without reference to the rule which deems a property that is convertible into, exchangeable for, or confers a right to acquire a participating interest in a FIE or a property the fair market value of which is determined primarily by reference to the fair market value of participating interests in the FIE, to be a participating interest.
- where subsection 94.3(3) applied for a taxation year (the "preceding taxation year") that ended before the particular taxation year of the taxpayer in respect of the particular participating interest, and did not apply for a taxation year of the taxpayer that was after the preceding taxation year and before the particular taxation year in respect of the particular participating interest. For example, where a taxpayer has sufficient information to apply the accrual regime in one year and in the subsequent year does not. The accrual regime would be unavailable to the taxpayer in respect of the interest and any identical interests in the subsequent year (because of paragraph 94.3(3)(e)) and any of the following years (because of subparagraph 94.3(2)(b)(v)), or
- where the participating interest is a specified interest (as defined in subsection 94.1(1)) in a trust that is an exempt foreign trust because of paragraph (g) of the definition "exempt foreign trust" in subsection 94(1) and the trust holds, at any time in the particular taxation year, property in respect of which it has waived a right to receive an amount.

Related Provisions: 96(1)(d)(iii)(K) — Application to partnership.

(3) Where accrual method applies — Subject to paragraph (2)(b), this subsection applies to a taxpayer for a particular taxation year of the taxpayer in respect of a particular participating interest, in a non-resident entity, held in the particular taxation year by the taxpayer (and in respect of any other participating interests, in the non-resident entity, that are held in the particular taxation year by the taxpayer and that are identical to the particular participating interest) if

(a) subsection 94.1(3) applies to the taxpayer for the particular taxation year in respect of the particular participating interest;

(b) the taxpayer has elected that this subsection apply in respect of the particular participating interest, by notifying the Minister in writing in the taxpayer's return of income filed on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the first taxation year of the taxpayer for which

(i) subsection 94.1(3) applies to the taxpayer in respect of the particular participating interest, or

(ii) subsection 94.2(9) does not apply to the taxpayer in respect of the particular participating interest and that immediately follows a taxation year for which subsection 94.2(9) applied to the taxpayer in respect of the particular participating interest;

(c) neither subsection 94.1(4) nor 94.2(3) applied to the taxpayer for a taxation year (referred to in this paragraph as the "preceding taxation year") that ended before the particular taxation year in respect of the particular participating interest, unless subsection 94.2(9) applied for that preceding taxation year to the taxpayer in respect of the particular participating interest (or any of the other participating interests);

(d) the particular participating interest is, at each time in the particular taxation year at which the taxpayer held the particular participating interest (or any of the other participating interests) and at which a taxation year of the non-resident entity ends, capital property of the taxpayer; and

(e) the taxpayer files, with the taxpayer's return of income filed on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the particular taxation year, prescribed information in prescribed form.

Technical Notes: Subsection 94.3(3) provides that the accrual regime is available, subject to the limitations set out in paragraph 94.3(2)(b), to a taxpayer for a particular taxation year of the taxpayer in respect of a particular participating interest, in a non-resident entity, held in the particular taxation year by the taxpayer (and in respect of any other participating interests, in the non-resident entity, that are held in the particular taxation year by the taxpayer and that are identical to the particular participating interest) if

- subsection 94.1(3) applies to the taxpayer for the particular taxation year in respect of the particular participating interest;
- the taxpayer has elected that subsection 94.3(3) apply in respect of the particular participating interest, by notifying the Minister in writing in the taxpayer's return of income filed on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the first taxation year of the taxpayer for which
  - — subsection 94.1(3) applies to the taxpayer in respect of the particular participating interest, or
  - — subsection 94.2(9) does not apply to the taxpayer in respect of the particular participating interest and that immediately follows a taxation year for which subsection 94.2(9) applied to the taxpayer in respect of the particular participating interest;
- neither subsection 94.1(4) (i.e., the imputed income regime) nor 94.2(3) (i.e., the mark-to-market regime) applied to the taxpayer for a taxation year (referred to in this commentary as the "preceding taxation year") that ended before the particular taxation year in respect of the particular participating interest, unless subsection 94.2(9) applied for that preceding taxation year to the taxpayer in respect of the particular participating interest (or any of the other participating interests);

- the particular participating interest is, at each time in the particular taxation year at which the taxpayer held the particular participating interest (or any of the other participating interests) and at which a taxation year of the non-resident entity ends, capital property of the taxpayer; and

- the taxpayer files, with the taxpayer's return of income filed on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the particular taxation year, prescribed information in prescribed form. It is contemplated that the prescribed information required would include: the entity's financial statements (as defined in subsection 94.1(1)); capital cost allowance schedules; capital gains and capital loss calculations; a detailed calculation of the taxpayer's specified tax allocation and any income allocation or loss allocation; a reconciliation of the entity's income reported in its financial statement income with its income computed under "A" of the formula in the "income allocation" provisions; and a description of reserves claimed.

Related Provisions: 94.2(3)(b)(iv) — Application of mark-to-market method; 94.3(2)(b) — Application of 94.3(3); 94.3(4) — Effect of subsection applying; 96(1)(d) — Where partnership owns participating interest; 96(3) — Election under 94.3(3)(b) by a partner; 149(10)(c) — Where corporation becomes or ceases to be exempt.

(4) Income inclusion or deduction — accrual method — If subsection (3) applies to a taxpayer resident in Canada for a particular taxation year of the taxpayer in respect of a participating interest in a non-resident entity, in computing the taxpayer's income for the particular taxation year

(a) there shall be added, as income from property from a property that is the participating interest, the positive amount, if any, determined by the formula

where

A is the total of all amounts each of which is the taxpayer's income allocation in respect of the participating interest for each taxation year of the non-resident entity that ends in the particular taxation year,

B is the total of all amounts each of which is the taxpayer's loss allocation in respect of the participating interest for each taxation year of the non-resident entity that ends in the particular taxation year,

C is the total of all amounts each of which is the specified tax allocation of the taxpayer in respect of the participating interest for each taxation year of the non-resident entity that ends in the particular taxation year, and

D is the amount, if any, by which

(i) the amount determined under subparagraph (b)(i) in respect of the taxpayer and the participating interest for the taxation year (referred to in this paragraph as the "preceding taxation year") of the taxpayer that immediately preceded the particular taxation year

exceeds

(ii) the amount determined under subparagraph (b)(ii) in respect of the taxpayer and the participating interest for the preceding taxation year; and

(b) there may be deducted, as a loss from a property that is the participating interest, the lesser of

(i) the absolute value of the negative amount, if any, determined by the formula in paragraph (a) in respect of the taxpayer and the participating interest for the particular taxation year, and

(ii) the amount, if any, by which

(A) the total of all amounts added under paragraph (a) in computing the taxpayer's income, from a property that is the participating interest, for a taxation year of the taxpayer that ended before the particular taxation year

(B) the total of all amounts deductible under this paragraph in computing the taxpayer's income, from a property that is the participating interest, for a taxation year of the taxpayer that ended before the particular taxation year.

Technical Notes: If subsection (3) applies to a taxpayer resident in Canada for a particular taxation year of the taxpayer in respect of a participating interest in a non-resident entity, in computing the taxpayer's income for the particular taxation year, subsection 94.3(4) will apply in computing the taxpayer's income or loss for the particular taxation year from property from a property that is the participating interest. More specifically, under paragraph 94.3(4)(a), the taxpayer's income from property from a property that is the participating interest, is the positive amount, if any, determined as follows:

- ADD the taxpayer's "income allocation" in respect of the participating interest for each taxation year of the non-resident entity that ends in the particular taxation year;

- SUBTRACT the taxpayer's "loss allocation" in respect of the participating interest for each taxation year of the non-resident entity that ends in the particular taxation year;

- SUBTRACT the taxpayer's specified tax allocation in respect of the participating interest for each taxation year of the non-resident entity that ends in the particular taxation year; and

- SUBTRACT the net cumulative positive balance determined under paragraph 94.3(4)(b) in respect of the taxpayer for such property in respect of preceding taxation years of the non-resident entity.

Where a negative amount results in applying the formula under paragraph 94.3(4)(a), paragraph 94.3(4)(b) may permit a deduction of the negative amount, as a loss from property from a property that is the participating interest, in computing the taxpayer's income for the particular taxation year. However, the deduction is limited by net cumulative positive balance determined under subparagraph 94.3(4)(b)(ii) in respect of the taxpayer for such property in respect of preceding taxation years of the non-resident entity.

An unused loss allocation is treated as a loss from property and is carried forward to offset the total amount otherwise required to be included in computing the taxpayer's income from property under subsection 94.3(4) for a subsequent taxation year of the non-resident entity. For more detail, see the commentary on the definition "loss allocation" in subsection 94.3(1).

The following examples illustrate the operation of subsection 94.3(4).

Example 1

Canco owns shares in the capital stock of FIE-1, which like Canco has a calendar taxation year. Canco's income (loss) allocations for, 2003, 2004, 2005, 2006 and 2007 are ($100), $25, $90, ($20) and $50, respectively. FIE-1 pays no income or profits taxes.

Results

1. The amount included under paragraph 94.3(4)(a) in Canco's income for 2003 is nil (B = $100). The amount determined under paragraph 94.3(4)(b) for 2002 is $100, which can be carried forward to 2004.

2. The amount included under paragraph 94.3(4)(a) in Canco's income for 2004 is nil (A = $25, D = $100). The amount determined under paragraph 94.3(4)(b) for 2004 is $75, which can be carried forward to 2005.

3. The amount included under paragraph 94.3(4)(a) in Canco's income for 2005 is $15 (A = $90, D = $75). The amount determined under paragraph 94.3(4)(b) for 2005 is nil.

4. The amount included under paragraph 94.3(4)(a) in Canco's income for 2006 is nil (B = $20, D = $0). The amount deductible under paragraph 94.3(4)(b) is $15 (= the lesser of $20 and $15). The remaining $5 unused loss allocation can be carried forward to 2007.

5. The amount included under paragraph 94.3(4)(a) in Canco's income for 2007 is $45 (A = $50, D = $5).

Canco owns shares in the capital stock of FIE-1, which like Canco has a calendar taxation year. Canco's income (loss) allocations for, 2003, 2004, 2005, 2006 and 2007 are: ($100), ($125), ($175), $300 and $150. FIE-1 pays no income or profits taxes.

Results

1. The amount included under paragraph 94.3(4)(a) in Canco's income for 2003 is nil (B = $100). The amount determined under subparagraph 94.3(4)(b)(i) for 2002 is $100 (= B), which can be carried forward to 2004.

2. The amount included under paragraph 94.3(4)(a) in Canco's income for 2004 is nil (B = $125, D = $100). The amount determined under subparagraph 94.3(4)(b)(i) for 2004 is $225 (= B+D), which can be carried forward to 2005.

3. The amount included under paragraph 94.3(4)(a) in Canco's income for 2005 is nil (B = $175, D = $225). The amount determined under subparagraph 94.3(4)(b)(i) for 2005 is $400 (= B+D).

4. The amount included under paragraph 94.3(4)(a) in Canco's income for 2006 is nil (A = $300, D = $400). The amount deductible under paragraph 94.3(4)(b) is nil (= the lesser of $100 and nil). The remaining $100 unused loss allocation (= D - A) can be carried forward to 2007.

5. The amount included under paragraph 94.3(4)(a) in Canco's income for 2007 is $50 (A = $150, D = $100).

Example 3

1. Canco, FIE-1 and ABC Inc. each have taxation years that coincide with calendar years and each issue only one class of shares.

2. Canco is a corporation resident in Canada that holds 20% of the shares of the capital stock of FIE-1.

3. FIE-1 owns 75% of the shares of the capital stock of ABC Inc.

4. ABC Inc. is not a FIE, but would be a controlled foreign affiliate of FIE-1 if FIE-1 were resident in Canada. Although ABC Inc. is a foreign affiliate of Canco, it is not a controlled foreign affiliate of Canco.

5. FIE-1 earns $5,000 in interest income in 2003. It also receives a dividend of $1,000 from ABC Inc. FIE-1 pays no income or profits taxes.

6. The fair market value of FIE-1's shares in ABC Inc. increases by $6,500 in 2003.

Results

1. Under the definition "income allocation" in subsection 94.3(1), Canco is required to compute its share of FIE-1's income. For this purpose, FIE-1's income is generally computed as if FIE-1 were resident in Canada. Canco is required, under "A" of the formula in paragraph 94.3(4)(a), to include in computing income its income allocation in respect of its shares in the capital stock of FIE-1.

2. FIE-1's income, in computing Canco's income allocation, includes the $5,000 of interest income (as per paragraph 12(1)(c)). However, the $1,000 dividend from ABC Inc. is disregarded because of paragraph (g) of "A" in the definition "income allocation".

3. Section 91 is not applicable in computing Canco's income allocation in respect of its shares in FIE-1 because of paragraph (a) of "A" in the definition "income allocation".

4. Since ABC Inc. is not a FIE, sections 94.1 to 94.4 are not applicable to FIE-1's interest in ABC Inc. in computing Canco's income allocation in respect of is shares in FIE-1.

5. Canco's income allocation, therefore, is $1,000 (i.e., 20% × $5,000). This amount is included under "A" of the formula in paragraph 94.3(4)(a).

Example 4

Same facts as in example 3, except that ABC Inc. is itself a FIE.

Results

1. Because of subparagraph 94.3(2)(b)(ii), the accrual regime will not apply in the calculation of FIE-1's income in respect of its interest in ABC Inc. Instead, FIE-1 may rely upon subsections 94.2(3) and (4), and if not applicable, subsection 94.1(4). Assume that FIE-1 qualifies, and so elects, to have subsection 94.2(3) apply to it in respect of its interest in ABC Inc. Thus, the mark-to-market regime under subsection 94.2(4) will apply to determine its FIE income from the interest.

2. For the purpose of computing Canco's income allocation in respect of its shares in FIE-1, FIE-1's income would include the $5,000 of interest (as per example 3), but not include any share of foreign accrual property income (as per example 3). However, FIE-1's income would include the $1,000 dividend paid in addition to its gain determined under subsection 94.2(4) in respect of its participating interest in ABC Inc. This gain so determined is $7,500, which is equal to the $6,500 increase in the value of shares plus the $1,000 dividend paid. However, for the purposes of computing Canco's income allocation, a deduction for the $1,000 dividend is permitted for FIE-1 because section 94.4 would have permitted the deduction if FIE-1 had been resident in Canada.

3. Consequently, Canco's income allocation in respect of its shares of the capital stock of FIE-1 is equal to $2,500 [i.e., ($5,000 + $7,500 + $1,000 - $1,000) × 20%)]. This amount is required to be included in computing Canco's income under subsection 94.3(4).

Example 5

In 1999, Mireille (a resident of Canada) purchased a 30% participating interest in an entity (FIE-1) that is a FIE. The rate of foreign tax applicable to FIE-1's income is 20%. FIE-1's taxation years coincide with calendar years. For the purposes of computing Mireille's income or loss in respect of the interest under subsection 94.3(4), the income (loss) and the foreign tax of FIE-1 for taxation years 2003 to 2006 are as follows:

Year	2003	2004	2005	2006	Total
Income (loss)	$ 100,000	($120,000)	$95,000	$130,000	$205,000
*Foreign tax paid	$20,000	Nil	Nil	$21,000	$41,000

Notes:

* Assume foreign tax paid in the same taxation year as liability arose.

 Assume that an equivalent amount is carried forward under the laws of the relevant foreign jurisdiction to reduce FIE-1's tax liabilities after 2004.

Results

Mireille's income allocations, loss allocations and specified tax allocations are shown in the table below, as are the resulting income inclusions and deductions under subsection 94.3(4). The specified tax allocations in the table below are obtained by multiplying the related figures in the above table by 30% (Mireille's percentage interest) and 2.2 (specified tax factor for Mireille). For example, for 2003 Mireille's specified tax allocation is $13,200 ($20,000 × 30% × 2.2).

Year	2003	2004	2005	2006

Related Provisions: 94.1(2)(d) — Interpretation; 94.3(5) — Adjustments to adjusted cost base.

(5) Adjusted cost base — In computing the adjusted cost base to a taxpayer of a participating interest, in a non-resident entity, at any time

(a) there shall be added the total of all amounts each of which is

(i) the amount added, as income from a property that is the participating interest, under paragraph (4)(a) in computing the taxpayer's income for a taxation year of the taxpayer that ended before that time (or that would have been so added if this Act were read without reference to subsection 56(4.1) and sections 74.1 to 75), and

(ii) the product obtained when the amount determined under paragraph (j) of the description of A in the definition "income allocation" in respect of the taxpayer and the participating interest for a particular taxation year of the non-resident entity that ended in a taxation year of the taxpayer that ended before that time and at the end of which particular taxation year the taxpayer held the participating interest is multiplied by the amount that is determined by the fraction B/C described in the formula in that definition and that was used in computing the taxpayer's income allocation in respect of the participating interest for the particular taxation year; and

(b) there shall be deducted the total of all amounts each of which is

(i) the amount deducted, as a loss from a property that is the participating interest, under paragraph (4)(b) in computing the taxpayer's income for a taxation year of the taxpayer that ended before that time (or that would have been so deducted if this Act were read without reference to subsection 56(4.1) and sections 74.1 to 75),

(ii) the product obtained when the amount determined under paragraph (k) of the description of A in the definition "income allocation" in respect of the taxpayer and the participating interest for a particular taxation year of the non-resident entity that ended in a taxation year of the taxpayer that ended before that time and at the end of which particular taxation year the taxpayer held the participating interest is multiplied by the amount that is determined by the fraction C/D described in the formula in the definition "loss allocation" that was used in computing the taxpayer's loss allocation in respect of the participating interest for the particular taxation year, and

(iii) the product obtained when the amount determined under paragraph (l) of the description of A in the definition "income allocation" in respect of the taxpayer and the participating interest for a particular taxation year of the non-resident entity that ended in a taxation year of the taxpayer that ended before that time and at the end of which particular taxation year the taxpayer held the participating interest is multiplied by the amount determined by the fraction C/D described in the formula in the definition "loss allocation" that was used in computing the taxpayer's loss allocation in respect of the participating interest for the particular taxation year.

Technical Notes: New subsection 94.3(5) provides for adjustments to the adjusted cost base (ACB) of a participating interest in an entity held by a taxpayer.

Paragraph 94.3(5)(a) provides for an addition to the ACB of a taxpayer of a participating interest, in a non-resident entity, at any time of the amount that is the total of the amount included in computing the taxpayer's income under paragraph 94.3(4)(a) for a taxation year of the taxpayer that ended before that time and the product obtained when the amount determined under paragraph (j) of the description of "A" in the definition "income allocation" in subsection 94.3(1) (taxable capital gains of the non-resident entity) in respect of the taxpayer and the participating interest for a particular taxation year of the non-resident entity that ended in a taxation year of the taxpayer that ended before that time and at the end of which particular taxation year the taxpayer held the participating interest is multiplied by the percentage that the fair market value of the interest represents of the fair market value of all participating interests in the entity.

Conversely, paragraph 94.3(5)(b) provides for a reduction to the ACB of a taxpayer of a participating interest, in a non-resident entity, at any time, of the total of three amounts. The first is the amount deducted, as a loss from a property that is the participating interest, under paragraph (4)(b) in computing the taxpayer's income for a taxation year of the taxpayer that ended before that time. The second and third amounts are the product obtained when the amount determined under paragraph (k) or (l), as the case may be, of the description of A in the definition "income allocation" (allowable capital losses of the non-resident entity and allowable business investment losses of the non-resident entity) in respect of the taxpayer and the participating interest for a particular taxation year of the non-resident entity that ended in a taxation year of the taxpayer that ended before that time and at the end of which particular taxation year the taxpayer held the participating interest is multiplied by the percentage that the fair market value of the interest represents of the fair market value of all participating interests in the entity.

94.4 Foreign investment entities — relief from double taxation — (1) Definitions and rules of application — In this section

(a) the definitions in subsection 94.1(1) apply;

(b) subsection 94.1(2) applies; and

(c) paragraph 94.2(2)(a) applies.

Technical Notes: New section 94.4 provides rules to eliminate double taxation of income where an amount of income of a non-resident entity, in respect of which any of sections 94.1 to 94.3 has applied in calculating the income for a year of a holder of an interest in the non-resident entity, becomes payable (determined by reference to paragraph 94.1(2)(o)), to that interest holder.

Subsection 94.4(1) provides that the definitions in subsections 94.1(1), and the rules of application in subsection 94.1(2) and paragraph 94.2(2)(a), apply in section 94.4.

(2) Prevention of double taxation — designated cost and mark-to-market regimes — If one or more amounts become, at a particular time in a particular taxation year of a taxpayer that begins after 2002 or in a preceding taxation year of the taxpayer that begins after 2002, payable to the taxpayer from a particular entity or another entity in respect of a participating interest in the particular entity (other than an amount that is proceeds of disposition of the participating interest, or of a part of it, or that is included in the total determined under clause (4)(a)(i)(A) in respect of the taxpayer and the participating interest for any of those taxation years), and the taxpayer is at the particular time resident in Canada,

(a) there may be deducted in computing the taxpayer's income for the particular taxation year the lesser of

(i) the amount, if any, by which

(A) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount that is in respect of any of those amounts payable and that is included (otherwise than because of variable C in applying the formula in the definition "mark-to-market formula" in subsection 94.2(1)) in computing the taxpayer's income for any of those taxation years

(B) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount that is in respect of the participating interest and that is deducted under this paragraph in computing the taxpayer's income for any of those preceding taxation years, and

(ii) the amount, if any, by which the total of all amounts each of which is

(A) an amount, in respect of the participating interest, that is included, or that would if this Act were read without reference to subsection 94.2(20) have been included, under subsection 94.1(4) or 94.2(4) in computing the taxpayer's income for any of those taxation years, or

(B) the amount, if any, by which all amounts each of which is an amount required by paragraph 94.3(5)(a) to be added in computing at the particular time the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the participating interest, exceeds the total of all amounts each of which is an amount, in respect of the participating interest,

(C) required by paragraph 94.3(5)(b) or paragraph (4)(b) to be deducted in computing at the particular time the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the participating interest,

(D) that is deducted, or that would if this Act were read without reference to subsection 94.2(20) have been deducted, under subsection 94.2(4) in computing the taxpayer's income for any of those preceding taxation years, or

(E) that is deducted under this paragraph in computing the taxpayer's income for any of those preceding taxation years; and

(b) in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the participating interest after the particular time there shall be deducted the amount deducted under paragraph (a) in computing the taxpayer's income.

Technical Notes: Under subsection 94.4(2), where an amount becomes payable (at a particular time in a particular taxation year of a taxpayer that begins after 2002 or in a preceding taxation year of the taxpayer that begins after 2002) to the taxpayer from a non-resident entity in respect of a participating interest in the entity held by the taxpayer (otherwise than as consideration for the disposition of the interest), and the taxpayer is resident in Canada at the particular time, a deduction is permitted to offset (against any income included in respect of the interest under subsection 94.1(4) or 94.2(4)) any net income inclusion resulting from the amount payable.

The permitted deduction for the taxpayer's taxation year is equal to the lesser of:

- the amount, if any, by which the total of those amounts payable that are included (otherwise than because of subsection 94.2(4)) in computing the taxpayer's income for any of those years, exceeds the total of all amounts deductible in respect of the participating interest in any of those preceding years under paragraph 94.4(2)(a), and
- the amount, if any, by which the total of
- the amounts included (or that, but for subsection 94.2(20), would have been included) in respect of the participating interest under subsection 94.1(4) or 94.2(4) in computing the taxpayer's income for the taxation year or a preceding taxation year, and
- the amounts required by paragraph 94.3(5)(a) to be added in computing at the particular time the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the participating interest
- exceeds the total of all amounts each of which is an amount, in respect of the participating interest,
- that is required by paragraph 94.3(5)(b) or paragraph 94.4(4)(b) to be deducted in computing at the particular time the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the participating interest,

- that is deducted (or that, but for subsection 94.2(20), would have been deducted) under subsection 94.2(4) in computing the taxpayer's income for any of those taxation years, or
- that is deducted under paragraph 94.4(2)(a) in computing the taxpayer's income for any of those preceding taxation years.

The amount deducted from income under paragraph 94.4(2)(a) in respect of the interest must also be deducted in computing the adjusted cost base of the interest. For more information, see the commentary on new paragraph 53(2)(w).

The example below illustrates the operation of subsection 94.4(2).

Example

1. A taxpayer resident in Canada, Canco, purchases a 20% interest in Foreignco, a non-resident corporation. Foreignco is a FIE. Participating interests in Foreignco do not qualify as "exempt interests". Both Canco and Foreignco have taxation years that coincide with calendar years. Subsection 94.1(4) applies to Canco in respect of the interest.

2. Canco's income under subsection 94.1(4) in respect of its participating interest in Foreignco for 2003 is $100,000. Foreignco pays a dividend of $50,000 to Canco in 2003. Canco includes the dividend in income pursuant to section 90 and claims a deduction of $20,000 in computing its taxable income pursuant to subsection 113(1). No foreign withholding taxes were paid by Canco on the $50,000 dividend.

Results

1. Canco's deduction from income under subsection 94.4(2) is equal to $50,000, being the lesser of the income inclusion as a result of the payment (= $50,000) and the amount of the income inclusion under subsection 94.1(4) ($100,000).

2. The result would generally be the same if the $50,000 dividend were instead paid in a subsequent year.

Related Provisions: 53(2)(w) — Deduction from ACB; 87(2)(j.95) — Amalgamation — continuing corporation; 149(10)(c) — Where corporation becomes or ceases to be exempt.

(3) Foreign taxes paid — If a particular amount is included in computing, in respect of a taxpayer, the amount determined under subparagraph (2)(a)(i) in respect of a participating interest, in a foreign investment entity (other than, where the taxpayer is a corporation, a foreign investment entity that is, at the time the particular amount was received by the taxpayer, a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer), of the taxpayer for a taxation year of the taxpayer, the taxpayer may deduct in computing the taxpayer's income for the taxation year the product obtained when the taxpayer's relevant tax factor (as defined by subsection 95(1)) for the taxation year is multiplied by the lesser of

(a) the amount of the non-business income tax (as defined in subsection 126(7)) paid by the taxpayer for the taxation year in respect of the particular amount, and

(b) 15% of the amount determined under subparagraph (2)(a)(ii) in respect of the taxpayer in respect of the participating interest for the taxation year.

Technical Notes: Under subsection 94.4(3), if a particular amount is included in computing, in respect of a taxpayer, the amount determined under subparagraph 94.4(2)(a)(i) in respect of the taxpayer's participating interest in a foreign investment entity (other than, where the taxpayer is a corporation, a foreign investment entity that is, at the time the particular amount was received by the taxpayer, a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer) for a taxation year of the taxpayer, the taxpayer may deduct in computing the taxpayer's income for the taxation year the product obtained when the taxpayer's relevant tax factor (as defined by subsection 95(1)) for the taxation year is multiplied by the lesser of

- the amount of non-business income tax (as defined in subsection 126(7)) paid by the taxpayer for the taxation year in respect of the particular amount, and
- 15% of the amount determined under subparagraph 94.3(2)(a)(ii) in respect of the participating interest of the taxpayer for the taxation year.

Subsection 94.4(3) is relevant where a FIE distribution is made in respect of a taxpayer's participating interest and the distribution is subject to non-business income tax imposed by the government of a country in which the FIE is resident. Because of new subsection 126(1.2), described in the commentary below, a taxpayer is not entitled to a tax credit under subsection 126(1) in respect of non-business income tax paid by a taxpayer in respect of the distribution if the taxpayer made a deduction under subsection 94.4(3) in respect of the particular amount.

(4) Prevention of double taxation — accrual regime — If one or more amounts become, at a particular time in a particular taxation year of a taxpayer that begins after 2002 or in a preceding taxation year of the taxpayer that begins after 2002, payable to the taxpayer from a particular entity or another entity in respect of a participating interest in the particular entity (other than an amount that is proceeds of disposition of the participating interest or a part of it), and the taxpayer is at the particular time resident in Canada,

(a) there may be deducted in computing the taxpayer's income for the particular taxation year the lesser of

(i) the amount, if any, by which

(A) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount that is in respect of any of those amounts payable and that is included (otherwise than because of variable C in applying the formula in the definition "mark-to-market formula" in subsection 94.2(1)) in computing the taxpayer's income for any of those taxation years exceeds the total of all amounts each of which is an amount, that is in respect of the participating interest,

(B) that is deducted under this paragraph in computing the taxpayer's income for any of those preceding taxation years,

(C) that is deducted under paragraph (2)(a) in computing the taxpayer's income for any of those preceding taxation years,

(D) that is deductible under subsection 91(5) in computing the taxpayer's income for the particular taxation year or any of those preceding taxation years, or

(E) that is deductible under section 113 in computing the taxpayer's taxable income for the particular taxation year or any of those preceding taxation years, and

(ii) the amount, if any, by which

(A) the total of all amounts each of which is an amount required by paragraph 94.3(5)(a) to be added in computing at the particular time the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the participating interest, exceeds the total of all amounts each of which is an amount

(B) required by paragraph 94.3(5)(b) to be deducted in computing at the particular time the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the participating interest, or

(C) that is deducted under this paragraph in respect of the participating interest in computing the taxpayer's income for any of those preceding taxation years; and

(b) in computing the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the participating interest after the particular time there shall be deducted the amount deducted under paragraph (a) in computing the taxpayer's income.

Technical Notes: Under subsection 94.4(4), where an amount becomes payable (at a particular time in a particular taxation year of a taxpayer that begins after 2002 or in a preceding taxation year of the taxpayer that begins after 2002) to the taxpayer from a non-resident entity in respect of a participating interest in the entity held by the taxpayer (otherwise than as consideration for the disposition of the interest), and the taxpayer is resident in Canada at the particular time, a deduction is permitted to offset (against any income included in respect of the interest under subsection 94.3(4)) any net income inclusion resulting from the amount payable.

More specifically, the permitted deduction for the taxpayer's taxation year is equal to the lesser of:

- the amount, if any, by which the total of those amounts payable that are included (otherwise than because of subsection 94.2(4)) in computing the taxpayer's income for any of those years, exceeds the total of all amounts deducted in respect of the participating interest in any of those preceding years under paragraph 94.4(2)(a) or 94.4(4)(a) or deductible in respect of the participating interest in any of those preceding years under subsection 91(5) or section 113, in computing the taxpayer's income or taxable income, as the case may be, and

- the amount, if any, by which the total additions required by paragraph 94.3(5)(a) in computing at the particular time the taxpayer's ACB of the participating interest exceeds the total of the deductions required by paragraph 94.3(5)(b) in computing that ACB and the deductions under paragraph 94.4(4)(a) in respect of the participating interest in computing the taxpayer's income for any of those preceding taxation years.

The amount deducted from income under paragraph 94.4(4)(a) in respect of the interest must also be deducted in computing the adjusted cost base of the interest. For more information, see the commentary on new paragraph 53(2)(w).

(a) any election referred to in any of ss. 94.1 to 94.3 made by a taxpayer is deemed to have been filed with the Minister of National Revenue on a timely basis if it is filed with the Minister on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day of Royal Assent (for the October 30, 2003 Notice of Ways and Means Motion); and

Notice of Ways and Means Motion, federal budget, February 16, 1999: Non-resident trusts and foreign-based investment funds

(8) That the provisions of the Act governing the taxation of

(a) trust beneficiaries and non-resident trusts, and

(b) taxpayers resident in Canada who hold interests in foreign-based investment funds

be modified in accordance with proposals described in the budget documents tabled by the Minister of Finance in the House of Commons on February 16, 1999.

Federal budget, Supplementary Information, February 16, 1999: Non-resident trust and foreign-based investment fund rules

Canadians have significantly increased their holdings of investments in foreign countries over the past ten years. This reflects the globalization of capital markets and recognizes the benefits of portfolio diversification. However, tax planning techniques have developed to create advantages from using foreign-based investment funds and non-resident trusts in comparison with Canadian-based investment vehicles.

The Income Tax Act contains provisions that are designed to prevent the use by taxpayers of foreign-based investment funds and non-resident trusts to avoid Canadian tax. The purpose of the rules is to ensure that an appropriate amount of Canadian tax is paid on the foreign investment income earned by taxpayers through such vehicles in order to provide a level playing field with Canadian-based investment vehicles.

There is growing evidence that the objectives of the current provisions of the Act are not being fully met and that high-income individuals are able, in some cases, to avoid Canadian tax by investing in foreign-based investment funds and by contributing property to non-resident trusts. Such an outcome is inconsistent with a fair and neutral tax system, erodes the Canadian tax base and is contrary to the policy intent of the current rules.

Background

Canadian investment funds are taxed annually on the income and capital gains accumulated in the funds but not allocated to investors. Investors in such funds are taxed annually on the income and capital gains of the funds allocated to them, as well as on any taxable capital gains arising on the disposition of their interest in the fund. As a result, the Canadian tax base is protected.

Investment funds located outside Canada are generally not subject to tax in Canada. Where such funds face little or no tax in their country of residence, Canadian investors holding interests in such vehicles may benefit from a significant deferral of tax on income and realized capital gains retained in the funds over the years. Furthermore, on the disposition of their interest in a foreign- based investment fund, investors may also be able to convert ordinary income to capital gains, which are taxed at a lower rate. These tax advantages have resulted in a growing number of Canadians investing in foreign-based funds.

Issue

The Income Tax Act contains rules that attempt to eliminate these tax advantages. Where a Canadian makes an investment in a foreign-based investment fund and one of the main reasons for acquiring, holding or having the interest in such property is to avoid Canadian tax, a notional annual allocation of income is imputed to the taxpayer and subject to tax. This notional amount is determined by multiplying the cost of the taxpayer's interest in the fund by a prescribed interest rate.

The current provision, however, has rarely been applied. Revenue Canada has had difficulty in enforcing this provision because of the frequent lack of information and the challenge of establishing that the interest in the foreign-based investment fund was acquired primarily to avoid Canadian tax. Although the provision may have been effective when first introduced in 1984, its impact has weakened over the years. When the provision has been applied; it has been criticized as subjecting to tax an arbitrary amount that may bear no relationship to the actual income accruing in the fund.

These deficiencies and the resulting erosion of the Canadian tax base necessitate the actions that the government is proposing in this budget.

[See also portions reproduced under 94 — ed.]

Proposal

The budget sets forth an approach to address the deficiencies in the current rules governing foreign-based investment funds and non-resident trusts. The objective of the proposals is to enhance fairness in the tax system in relation to the taxation of income earned from investing in foreign-based investment funds and contributing property to non-resident trusts on the one hand, and income earned from investing in similar entities resident in Canada. These proposals would not prevent Canadians from investing in foreign-based investment funds or from contributing property to non-resident trusts, but are intended to ensure that there is no tax advantage in doing so.

Consultations will be initiated on the following proposed modifications to the tax rules governing foreign-based investment funds:

- That the proposed rules apply to interests in a foreign-based investment fund, subject to a number of exceptions noted below. Taxpayers would be subject, annually, to tax on their pro-rata share of all the undistributed income of the foreign-based investment fund where they have access to sufficient information about the income of the fund (the income accrual approach that applies in respect of controlled foreign affiliates of Canadian taxpayers), subject to a foreign tax credit for foreign income taxes paid by the fund. Alternatively, taxpayers would be required to add to or deduct from their income, as the case may be, the annual increase or decrease in the market value of their interest in the fund (the "mark-to-market" approach). These rules would replace the tax motivation test that "one of the main reasons for the taxpayer acquiring, holding or having an interest in a foreign-based investment fund was to avoid Canadian taxation". The rules would not apply where the foreign-based investment fund annually distributes or allocates to Canadian investors all of the fund's income to which those investors are entitled.
- That a foreign-based investment fund be defined as any non-resident corporation, trust, fund or other entity where more than 50 per cent of the cost of the entity's assets are investment properties. Look-through rules would apply in respect of significant investments in other entities for the purpose of making this determination. Where trusts are subject to the proposed non-resident trust rules, such trusts would not be subject to these rules.
- That investment funds situated in the United States not be subject to these rules since tax avoidance and deferral opportunities are not a concern through the use of such vehicles.
- That a five-year exception for temporary residents and new immigrants apply. Additional exemptions could be contemplated to remove from the rules foreign- based investment funds that are clearly not used to avoid or defer Canadian tax.
- That the proposed rules apply to any taxation year commencing after 1999, with respect to any interest in a foreign-based investment fund (in which the taxpayer does not already own an interest) not covered by the exceptions, acquired by a Canadian resident on or after February 16, 1999. All interests in any foreign-based investment fund not covered by the exceptions would be subject to the proposed rules for taxation years commencing after 2000.

95. (1) Definitions for this subdivision — In this subdivision,

Proposed Amendment — 95(1) opening words

95. Definitions re foreign affiliates — (1) In this subdivision (other than sections 94 to 94.4),

Application: The October 30, 2003 Notice of Ways and Means Motion (NRTs and FIEs), subsec. 17(1), will amend the opening words of subsec. 95(1) to read as above, applicable to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after 2002.

Technical Notes: Subsection 95(1) sets out definitions that are relevant for the purposes of sections 90 to 95.

Subsection 95(1) is amended so that these definitions do not apply for the purposes of sections 94 to 94.4, except where the definition applies for the purposes of the Act as a whole because of subsection 248(1). This amendment applies to taxation years that begin after 2002.

As set out below, various definitions in subsection 95(1) are also being amended.

"active business" of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer means any business carried on by the affiliate other than

(a) an investment business carried on by the affiliate, or

(b) a business that is deemed by subsection (2) to be a business other than an active business carried on by the affiliate;

Related Provisions: 95(1)"income from an active business" — What income included; 248(1) — Meanings of "active business" and "business".

History: The definition "active business" added to subsec. 95(1) by 1995, c. 21, subsec. 46(3), applicable to taxation years of foreign affiliates of taxpayers that begin after 1994 except that, where there has been a change in the taxation year of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer in 1994 and after February 22, 1994, the new definition applies to taxation years of such foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that end after 1994, unless

(a) such foreign affiliate had requested that change in the taxation year in writing before February 22, 1994 from the income taxation authority of the country in which it was resident and subject to income taxation; or

(b) the first taxation year of such foreign affiliate that began after 1994 began at a time in 1995 that is earlier than the time that that taxation year would have begun if there had not been that change in the taxation of such foreign affiliate.

"controlled foreign affiliate", at any time, of a taxpayer resident in Canada means a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that was, at that time, controlled by

Proposed Amendment — 95(1)"controlled foreign affiliate" opening words

"controlled foreign affiliate", at any time of a taxpayer resident in Canada, means a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that is, at that time, a controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer because of paragraph 94.1(2)(h) or that is, at that time, controlled by

Application: The October 30, 2003 Notice of Ways and Means Motion (NRTs and FIEs), subsec. 17(2), will amend the opening words of the definition "controlled foreign affiliate" in subsec. 95(1) to read as above, applicable to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after 2002.

Technical Notes: The income for a taxation year of a taxpayer resident in Canada includes, under subsection 91(1), a specified percentage of the foreign accrual property income (FAPI) of any controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer. In order to eliminate overlap between the FAPI rules and the rules for foreign investment entities in sections 94.1 and 94.2, the latter rules generally do not apply in respect of a taxpayer's interest in a controlled foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada. An election is provided under new paragraph 94.1(2)(h) under which a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer can be treated as the taxpayer's controlled foreign affiliate.

The definition "controlled foreign affiliate" is amended to refer to foreign affiliates that are deemed by paragraph 94.1(2)(h) to be controlled foreign affiliates.

(a) the taxpayer,

(b) the taxpayer and not more than four other persons resident in Canada,

(c) not more than 4 persons resident in Canada, other than the taxpayer,

(d) a person or persons with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length, or

(e) the taxpayer and a person or persons with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length;

Proposed Amendment — 95(1)"controlled foreign affiliate"

"controlled foreign affiliate", at any time of a taxpayer resident in Canada, means a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that

(a) is, at that time, a controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer because of paragraph 94.1(2)(h),

(b) is, at that time, controlled by the taxpayer, or

(c) would, at that time, be controlled by the taxpayer if the taxpayer owned each share of the capital stock of the foreign affiliate that is owned, at that time, by

(i) the taxpayer,

(ii) each person that does not deal at arm's length with the taxpayer,

(iii) each of not more than four persons (other than the taxpayer or a person described in subparagraph (ii)) resident in Canada, and

(iv) each person that does not deal at arm's length with a person resident in Canada described in subparagraph (iii);

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 133(1), will amend the definition "controlled foreign affiliate" in subsec. 95(1) to read as above, applicable to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after 1995, except that

(a) for taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after 2002 and on or before February 27, 2004, the definition is to be read as follows:

"controlled foreign affiliate", at any time of a taxpayer resident in Canada, means a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that

(a) is, at that time, a controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer because of paragraph 94.1(2)(h),

(b) is, at that time, controlled by the taxpayer, or

(c) would, at that time, be controlled by the taxpayer if the taxpayer owned each share of the capital stock of the foreign affiliate that is owned, at that time, by

(i) the taxpayer and not more than four other persons resident in Canada,

(ii) not more than four persons resident in Canada (other than the taxpayer or persons with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length), or

(iii) the taxpayer and each person with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length.

(b) for taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after 1995 and before 2003, that definition is to be read as follows:

"controlled foreign affiliate", at any time of a taxpayer resident in Canada, means a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that

(a) is, at that time, controlled by the taxpayer, or

(b) would, at that time, be controlled by the taxpayer if the taxpayer owned each share of the capital stock of the foreign affiliate that is owned, at that time, by

(i) the taxpayer and not more than four other persons resident in Canada,

(ii) not more than four persons resident in Canada (other than the taxpayer or persons with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length), or

(iii) the taxpayer and each person with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length.

Technical Notes: In subsection 95(1), a "controlled foreign affiliate", at any time, of a taxpayer is defined to mean a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that is, at that time, controlled by

- the taxpayer,
- the taxpayer and not more than four other persons resident in Canada,
- not more than four persons resident in Canada, other than the taxpayer,
- a person or persons with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length, or
- the taxpayer and a person or persons with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length.

The definition "controlled foreign affiliate" is amended to provide that a "controlled foreign affiliate", at any time, of a taxpayer resident in Canada means a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer at that time that

- is, at that time, a controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer because of proposed new paragraph 94.1(2)(h),
- is, at that time, controlled by the taxpayer,

  - — each of not more than four persons (other than the taxpayer or a person that does not deal at arm's length with the taxpayer) resident in Canada, and
  - — each person that does not deal at arm's length with any of the four persons resident in Canada.

For information about proposed new paragraph 94.1(2)(h), see the October 30, 2003 legislative proposals released by the Department of Finance dealing with non-resident trusts and foreign investment entities.

With respect to applying the definition "controlled foreign affiliate", note the rules in proposed new paragraphs 95(2)(u) to (x). For more detail, see the commentaries for those paragraphs.

The new definition of "controlled foreign affiliate" applies to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after 1995. However, for taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer that begin after 2002 and on or before February 27, 2004, the term "controlled foreign affiliate" would be defined as described below:

"controlled foreign affiliate", at any time, of a taxpayer resident in Canada means a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that

- is, at that time, a controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer because of proposed new paragraph 94.1(2)(h),
- is, at that time, controlled by the taxpayer, or
- would, at that time, be controlled by the taxpayer if the taxpayer owned each share of the capital stock of the foreign affiliate that is owned, at that time, by
  - — the taxpayer and not more than four other persons resident in Canada,

— not more than four persons resident in Canada (other than the taxpayer or persons with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length), or

— the taxpayer and each person with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length.

For taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer that begin after 1995 and before 2003, the term "controlled foreign affiliate" would be defined as described below:

"controlled foreign affiliate", at any time, of a taxpayer resident in Canada means a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that

- is, at that time, controlled by the taxpayer, or
- would, at that time, be controlled by the taxpayer if the taxpayer owned each share of the capital stock of the foreign affiliate that is owned, at that time, by

— the taxpayer and not more than four other persons resident in Canada,

— not more than four persons resident in Canada (other than the taxpayer or persons with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length), or

— the taxpayer and each person with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length.

Proposed Addition — 95(1)"entity"

"entity" includes an association, a corporation, a fund, a natural person, a joint venture, an organization, a partnership, a syndicate and a trust;

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 133(7), will add the definition "entity" to subsec. 95(1), applicable in respect of taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that end after December 19, 2002.

Technical Notes: The new definition "entity" in subsection 95(1) is relevant for proposed new subsection 95(3.6). An entity is defined as including an association, a corporation, a fund, a natural person, a joint venture, an organization, a partnership, a syndicate and a trust.

This new definition applies in respect of taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that end on or after December 20, 2002.

"excluded property" of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer means any property of the foreign affiliate that is

(a) used or held by the foreign affiliate principally for the purpose of gaining or producing income from an active business,

(b) shares of the capital stock of another foreign affiliate of the taxpayer where all or substantially all of the property of the other foreign affiliate is excluded property, or

(c) an amount receivable the interest on which is, or would be if interest were payable thereon, income from an active business by virtue of subparagraph (2)(a)(ii),

(a) used or held by the foreign affiliate principally for the purpose of gaining or producing income from an active business carried on by it,

(b) shares of the capital stock of another foreign affiliate of the taxpayer where all or substantially all of the fair market value of the property of the other foreign affiliate is attributable to property, of that other foreign affiliate, that is excluded property,

(c) property all or substantially all of the income from which is, or would be, if there were income from the property, income from an active business including income that would be deemed to be income from an active business by paragraph (2)(a) if that paragraph were read without reference to subparagraph (v), or

(c.1) property arising under or as a result of an agreement that

(i) provides for the purchase, sale or exchange of currency, and

(ii) can reasonably be considered to have been made by the affiliate to reduce its risk, with respect to an amount that was receivable under an agreement that relates to the sale of excluded property or with respect to an amount that was receivable and was a property described in paragraph (c), of fluctuations in the value of the currency in which the amount receivable was denominated,

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 133(2), will amend paras. (a) to (c) of the definition "excluded property" in subsec. 95(1) to read as above, and add para. (c.1), applicable to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after December 20, 2002. Paras. (a), (c) and (c.1) may, by election, be applicable to taxation years that begin after 1994: see Application note to 95(2)(a) proposed amendments.

Notwithstanding subsections 152(4) to (5) of the Act, any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year shall be made that is necessary to take the election or revocation referred to above, into account.

If a taxpayer has made what would, but for this paragraph, be a valid election as described above, and the taxpayer has, on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day that is the third anniversary of the day on which the amending Act receives Royal Assent, filed with the Minister of National Revenue a notice in writing to revoke the election, the election is deemed, otherwise than for the purpose of this paragraph, never to have been made.

Notwithstanding subsecs. 152(4) to (5) of the Act, any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year shall be made that is necessary to take an election or revocation referred to above into account.

Technical Notes: [Global Section 95 Election — See under 95(2)(a) — ed.]

[Fresh Start Section 95 Election — See under 95(1)"taxable Canadian business" — ed.]

The definition "excluded property" in subsection 95(1) of the Act is relevant for the purposes of computing the foreign accrual property income (FAPI) and the tax surpluses and deficits of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer. Under the definition "foreign accrual property income" in subsection 95(1), capital gains and losses from the disposition of excluded property are disregarded in computing FAPI except in the circumstances set out in the description of B in the definition of FAPI.

Paragraph (a) of the definition "excluded property" provides that any property used or held by the foreign affiliate principally for the purpose of gaining or producing income from an active business is excluded property under that definition. Paragraph (a) of the definition is amended to clarify that property does not meet the requirements of that paragraph unless the property is used or held by the foreign affiliate principally for the purpose of gaining or producing income from an active business that is carried on by it.

Paragraph (b) of the definition "excluded property" provides that shares owned by a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer in the capital stock of another foreign affiliate of the taxpayer are excluded property if all or substantially all of the property of the other foreign affiliate is excluded property. Paragraph (b) of the definition is amended to clarify that shares owned by a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer in the capital stock of another foreign affiliate of the taxpayer do not meet the requirements of that paragraph unless all or substantially all of the fair market value of the property of the other foreign affiliate is attributable to property of that other foreign affiliate that is excluded property.

Paragraph (c) of the definition "excluded property" provides that an amount receivable is excluded property of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer if the interest on the amount receivable is, or would be if interest were payable on it, income from an active business because of subparagraph 95(2)(a)(ii). Paragraph (c) of the definition is amended to broaden the meaning of "excluded property" to include property all or substantially all of the income from which would be income from an active business including income that would be deemed to be income from an active business by amended paragraph 95(2)(a) if that paragraph were read without reference to subparagraph (v). For additional information, see the commentary to paragraph 95(2)(a).

New paragraph (c.1) is added to the definition "excluded property" to include property arising under or as a result of an agreement that

- provides for the purchase, sale or exchange of currency, and
- can reasonably be considered to have been made by a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer to reduce the affiliate's risk, with respect to an amount that was receivable under an agreement that relates to the sale of excluded property or with respect to an amount that was receivable and was a property described in amended paragraph (c) of the definition, of fluctuations in the value of the currency in which the amount receivable was denominated.

New paragraph (c.1) of the definition "excluded property" will, for example, address a situation where the affiliate enters into an agreement (the "sale agreement"), relating to the sale of excluded property, in which the amount receivable under the sale agreement is denominated in a currency other than the affiliate's calculating currency, and then, in order to reduce the affiliate's risk of fluctuations in the value of the currency in which the amount receivable under the sale agreement is denominated, enters into a currency hedging agreement with respect to all or a portion of that amount receivable. In such a situation, new paragraph (c.1) ensures that the income or loss from that hedge receives the same income characterization as the income or loss from the property being hedged; i.e., the income or loss from that hedge is considered to be income or loss from the sale of excluded property.

New paragraphs (a), (c) and (c.1) of the definition "excluded property" apply to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after December 20, 2002. Those paragraphs are part of the Global Section 95 Election package described [under 95(2)(a) — ed.].

New paragraph (b) of the definition "excluded property" applies to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after December 20, 2002.

and, for the purposes of the definitions "foreign affiliate" in this subsection and "direct equity percentage" in subsection (4) as they apply to this definition, where at any time a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer has an interest in a partnership,

(d) the partnership shall be deemed to be a non-resident corporation having capital stock of a single class divided into 100 issued shares, and

(e) the affiliate shall be deemed to own at that time that proportion of the issued shares of that class that

(i) the fair market value of the affiliate's interest in the partnership at that time

is of

(ii) the fair market value of all interests in the partnership at that time;

Related Provisions: 85.1(4)(a) — Exception to share-for-share exchange rules where foreign affiliate's property is substantially all excluded property; 93(1.4) — Disposition by FA of share of FA — share deemed not to be excluded property; 94.1(1)"exempt property"(b)(ii) — Excluded property exempt from foreign investment entity rules; Reg. 5907(5.1) — Rules on disposition of excluded property by FA.

History: That portion of the definition "excluded property" following para. (c) substituted by 1994, c. 7, Sch. II (1991, c. 49), subsec. 71(2), applicable after 1989. That portion formerly read:

> and for the purpose of this definition, where a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer has an interest in a partnership and the fair market value of the interest is equal to or greater than 10% of the fair market value of all interests in the partnership, the partnership shall be deemed to be another foreign affiliate of the taxpayer and the interest of the foreign affiliate in the partnership shall be deemed to be shares of the capital stock of that other foreign affiliate;

"foreign accrual property income" of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, for any taxation year of the affiliate, means the amount determined by the formula

$$(A + A.1 + A.2 + B + C) - (D + E + F + G + H)$$

Proposed Amendment — 95(1)"foreign accrual property income" formula

$$(A + A.1 + A.2 + B) - (D + E + F + G + H)$$

Application: The October 30, 2003 Notice of Ways and Means Motion (NRTs and FIEs), subsec. 17(3), will amend the formula in the definition "foreign accrual property income" in subsec. 95(1) to read as above, applicable to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after 2002.

Technical Notes: The FAPI of a controlled foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada is allocated to the taxpayer in accordance with subsection 91(1). Under its definition in subsection 95(1), FAPI includes certain amounts that would be included in the affiliate's income under existing subsection 94.1(1) if that subsection were read in the manner specified in the description of C of the definition.

Existing section 94.1 is being repealed. Accordingly, the description of C in the definition "foreign accrual property income" is also repealed. There are, however, special rules in new paragraph 95(2)(g.3) with regard to the application of sections 94.1 to 94.4. Amounts determined under paragraph 95(2)(g.3) will be included in FAPI under the description of "A" in the definition "foreign accrual property income". For detail on paragraph 95(2)(g.3), see the commentary on that paragraph.

A is the amount that would, if section 80 did not apply to the affiliate for the year or a preceding taxation year, be the total of the affiliate's incomes for the year from property and businesses (other than active businesses) determined as if each amount described in clause (2)(a)(ii)(D) that was paid or payable, directly or indirectly, by the affiliate to another foreign affiliate of either the taxpayer or a person with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length were nil where an amount in respect of the income derived by the other foreign affiliate from that amount that was paid or payable to it by the affiliate was added in computing its income from an active business, other than

(a) interest that would, by virtue of paragraph 81(1)(m), not be included in computing the income of the affiliate if it were resident in Canada,

(b) a dividend from another foreign affiliate of the taxpayer,

(c) a taxable dividend to the extent that the amount thereof would, if the dividend were received by the taxpayer, be deductible by the taxpayer under section 112, or

(d) any amount included because of subsection 80.4(2) in the affiliate's income in respect of indebtedness to another corporation that is a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer or of a person resident in Canada with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length,

A.1 is twice the total of all amounts included in computing the affiliate's income from property or businesses (other than active businesses) for the year because of subsection 80(13),

A.2 is the amount determined for G in respect of the affiliate for the preceding taxation year,

B is such portion of the affiliate's taxable capital gains for the year from dispositions of property, other than dispositions of excluded property to which none of paragraphs (2)(c), (d) and (e) apply, as may reasonably be considered to have accrued after its 1975 taxation year,

Proposed Amendment — 95(1)"foreign accrual property income"B

B is the portion of the affiliate's income (to the extent that the income is not included under the description of A), or of the affiliate's taxable capital gains that can reasonably be considered to have accrued after its 1975 taxation year, as the case may be, for the year

(a) from the dispositions of property other than dispositions of excluded property,

(b) from dispositions of excluded property to which any of paragraphs (2)(c), (c.2), (d), (d.1), (e), (e.1), (e.3) to (e.5) and (f.4) and 88(3)(a) applies, or

(c) arising because of a gain under subsection 40(3) in respect of a share because of a dividend on the share referred to in subparagraph (2)(e.3)(iv) or (e.4)(v),

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 133(3), will amend the description of B in the definition "foreign accrual property income" in subsec. 95(1) to read as above, applicable in respect of taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that end after December 19, 2002.

Technical Notes: The definition "foreign accrual property income" in subsection 95(1) is relevant for the purposes of section 91 and for the purposes of computing the tax surpluses and deficits of the foreign affiliate of a taxpayer. Section 91 provides rules for determining amounts that a taxpayer resident in Canada is to include in computing that taxpayer's income for a particular year as income from a share of a controlled foreign affiliate of that taxpayer.

First, the description of B in the definition "foreign accrual property income" in subsection 95(1) is amended to include income (other than income included in the description of A in the definition "foreign accrual property income") and capital gains, as the case may be,

- from dispositions of excluded property where any of paragraphs 88(3)(a) and 95(2)(c), (c.2), (d), (d.1), (e), (e.1), (e.3) to (e.5) and (f.4) applies in respect of the disposition and, and
- gains arising under subsection 40(3) in respect of a share because of a dividend referred to in subparagraph 95(2)(e.3)(iv) or (e.4)(v) on the share, which income or capital gain can reasonably be considered to have accrued after the affiliate's 1975 taxation year.

Second, the description of E in the definition of "foreign accrual property income" is amended to remove the reference to dispositions of excluded property to which none of paragraphs 95(2)(c), (d) or (e) apply, and replace it with a reference to dispositions of excluded property.

C is where the affiliate is a controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, the amount that would be required to be included in computing its income for the year if

(a) subsection 94.1(1) were applicable in computing that income,

(b) the words "earned directly by the taxpayer" in that subsection were replaced by the words "earned by the person resident in Canada in respect of whom the taxpayer is a foreign affiliate",

(c) the words "other than a controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer or a prescribed non-resident entity" in paragraph 94.1(1)(a) were replaced by the words "other than a prescribed non-resident entity or a controlled foreign affiliate of a person resident in Canada of whom the taxpayer is a controlled foreign affiliate", and

(d) the words "other than a capital gain" in paragraph 94.1(1)(g) were replaced by the words "other than any income that would not be included in the taxpayer's foreign accrual property income for the year if the value of C in the definition "foreign accrual property income" in subsection 95(1) were nil and other than a capital gain",

Proposed Repeal — 95(1)"foreign accrual property income"C

Application: The October 30, 2003 Notice of Ways and Means Motion (NRTs and FIEs), subsec. 17(4), will repeal the description of C in the definition "foreign accrual property income", applicable to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after 2002.

Technical Notes: See under 95(1)"foreign accrual property income" formula above.

D is the total of the affiliate's losses for the year from property and businesses (other than active businesses) determined as if there were not included in the affiliate's income any amount described in any of paragraphs (a) to (d) of the description of A and as if each amount described in clause (2)(a)(ii)(D) that was paid or payable, directly or indirectly, by the affiliate to another foreign affiliate of either the taxpayer or a person with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length were nil where an amount in respect of the income derived by the other foreign affiliate from that amount that was paid or payable to it by the affiliate was added in computing its income from an active business,

E is such portion of the affiliate's allowable capital losses for the year from dispositions of property, other than dispositions of excluded property to which none of paragraphs (2)(c), (d) and (e) apply, as may reasonably be considered to have accrued after its 1975 taxation year,

Proposed Amendment — 95(1)"foreign accrual property income"E

E is the amount of the foreign affiliate's allowable capital losses for the year from dispositions of property (other than excluded property) that may reasonably be considered to have accrued after its 1975 taxation year,

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 133(4), will amend the description of E in the formula in the definition "foreign accrual property income" in subsec. 95(1) to read as above, applicable in respect of taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that end on or after December 20, 2002.

Technical Notes: See under 95(1)"foreign accrual property income"B above.

F is the amount claimed by the taxpayer, which amount may not be greater than the amount prescribed to be the deductible loss of the affiliate for the year,

G is the amount, if any, by which

(a) the total of amounts determined for A.1 and A.2 in respect of the affiliate for the year, and

exceeds

(b) the total of all amounts determined for D to F in respect of the affiliate for the year, and

H is

(a) where the affiliate was a member of a partnership at the end of the fiscal period of the partnership that ended in the year and the partnership received a dividend at a particular time in that fiscal period from a corporation that was, for the purposes of sections 93 and 113, a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer at that particular time, the portion of the amount of that dividend that is included in the value of A in respect of the affiliate for the year and that is deemed by paragraph 93.1(2)(a) to have been received by the affiliate for the purposes of sections 93 and 113, and

(b) in any other case, nil;

History: The formula in the definition "foreign accrual property income" in subsec. 95(1) amended to add " + H" by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 73(1), applicable after November 1999.

The description of A.1 in the definition "foreign accrual property income" amended by the said c. 17, subsec. 73(2) to replace the reference to the expression "4/3 of" with a reference to the word "twice", applicable to taxation years that end after February 27, 2000 except that, where a taxation year of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer includes February 28, 2000 or October 17, 2000, or began after February 28, 2000 and ended before October 17, 2000, the reference to the word "twice" shall be read as a reference to the expression "the fraction that is the reciprocal of the fraction in para. 38(a), as amended by 2001, c. 17, that applies to the foreign affiliate for the year, multiplied by".

The description of F in the definition "foreign accrual property income" amended by the said c. 17, subsec. 73(3), applicable to foreign affiliates' taxation years that begin after November 1999. The description of F formerly read:

F is the amount prescribed to be the deductible loss of the affiliate for the year and the five immediately preceding taxation years, and

Paras. (c) and (d) added to the description of C in the definition "foreign accrual property income" in subsec. 95(1) by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 122(2), para. (c) applicable to taxation years that end after November 1991, para. (d) applicable to taxation years that begin after June 19, 1996.

The formula in the definition "foreign accrual property income" in subsec. 95(1) amended, and the descriptions of A.1 and A.2 added, by 1995, c. 21, subsecs. 32(1), (2), applicable to taxation years that end after February 21, 1994. The formula formerly read:

$$(A + B + C) - (D + E + F)$$

The opening words of the description of A in the definition "foreign accrual property income" in subsec. 95(1) amended by 1995, c. 21, subsec. 78(2), applicable to taxation years of foreign affiliates of taxpayers that begin after 1994 except that, where there has been a change in the taxation year of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer in 1994 and after February 22, 1994, the amended description of A applies to taxation years of such foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that end after 1994, unless

(a) such foreign affiliate had requested that change in the taxation year in writing before February 22, 1994 from the income taxation authority of the country in which it was resident and subject to income taxation; or

(b) the first taxation year of such foreign affiliate that began after 1994 began at a time in 1995 that is earlier than the time that that taxation year would have begun if there had not been that change in the taxation year of such foreign affiliate.

In these instances, for taxation years that end after February 21, 1994, the opening words of the description of A should be read as follows (1995, c. 21, subsec. 78(1)):

"foreign accrual tax" applicable to any amount included in computing a taxpayer's income by virtue of subsection 91(1) for a taxation year in respect of a particular foreign affiliate of the taxpayer means

(a) the portion of any income or profits tax that was paid by

(i) the particular affiliate, or

(ii) any other foreign affiliate of the taxpayer in respect of a dividend received from the particular affiliate and that may reasonably be regarded as applicable to that amount, and

(b) any amount prescribed in respect of the particular affiliate to be foreign accrual tax applicable to that amount;

Regulations: 5907(1.3) (prescribed foreign accrual tax).

"foreign affiliate", at any time, of a taxpayer resident in Canada means a non-resident corporation in which, at that time,

(a) the taxpayer's equity percentage is not less than 1%, and

(b) the total of the equity percentages in the corporation of the taxpayer and of each person related to the taxpayer (where each such equity percentage is determined as if the determinations under paragraph (b) of the definition "equity percentage" in subsection (4) were made without reference to the equity percentage of any person in the taxpayer or in any person related to the taxpayer) is not less than 10%, except that a corporation is not a foreign affiliate of a non-resident-owned investment corporation;

History: The definition "foreign affiliate" in subsec. 95(1) amended by 1995, c. 21, subsec. 46(1), applicable to taxation years of foreign affiliates of taxpayers that begin after 1994 except that, where there has been a change in the taxation year of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer in 1994 and after February 22, 1994, the amended legislation applies to taxation years of such foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that end after 1994, unless

(a) such foreign affiliate had requested that change in the taxation year in writing before February 22, 1994 from the income taxation authority of the country in which it was resident and subject to income taxation; or

(b) the first taxation year of such foreign affiliate that began after 1994 began at a time in 1995 that is earlier than the time that that taxation year would have begun if there had not been that change in the taxation of such foreign affiliate.

The definition formerly read:

"foreign affiliate", at any time, of a taxpayer (other than a non-resident-owned investment corporation) resident in Canada means a corporation (other than a corporation resident in Canada), in which, at that time, the taxpayer's equity percentage was not less than 10%;

"foreign bank" means an entity that would be a foreign bank within the meaning assigned by the definition of that expression in section 2 of the Bank Act if

(b) the entity had not been exempt under section 12 of that Act from being a foreign bank;

Related Provisions: 94.1(1)"exempt business"(a) — Foreign bank exempt from foreign investment entity rules.

History: The definition "foreign bank" added to subsec. 95(1) by 1995, c. 21, subsec. 46(3), applicable to taxation years of foreign affiliates of taxpayers that begin after 1994 except that, where there has been a change in the taxation year of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer in 1994 and after February 22, 1994, the new definition applies to taxation years of such foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that end after 1994, unless

(a) such foreign affiliate had requested that change in the taxation year in writing before February 22, 1994 from the income taxation authority of the country in which it was resident and subject to income taxation; or

(b) the first taxation year of such foreign affiliate that began after 1994 began at a time in 1995 that is earlier than the time that that taxation year would have begun if there had not been that change in the taxation of such foreign affiliate.

"income from an active business" of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer for a taxation year includes, for greater certainty, any income of the affiliate for the year that pertains to or is incident to that business but does not include

(a) other income that is its income from property for the year, or

(b) its income for the year from a business that is deemed by subsection (2) to be a business other than an active business carried on by the affiliate;

(a) such foreign affiliate had requested that change in the taxation year in writing before February 22, 1994 from the income taxation authority of the country in which it was resident and subject to income taxation; or

"income from property" of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer for a taxation year includes its income for the year from an investment business and its income for the year from an adventure or concern in the nature of trade, but, for greater certainty, does not include its income for the year that is because of subsection (2) included in its income from an active business or in its income from a business other than an active business;

(a) such foreign affiliate had requested that change in the taxation year in writing before February 22, 1994 from the income taxation authority of the country in which it was resident and subject to income taxation; or

(b) the first taxation year of such foreign affiliate that began after 1994 began at a time in 1995 that is earlier than the time that that taxation year would have begun if there had not been that change in the taxation of such foreign affiliate.

"investment business" of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer means a business carried on by the affiliate in a taxation year (other than a business deemed by subsection (2) to be a business other than an active business carried on by the affiliate) the principal purpose of which is to derive income from property (including interest, dividends, rents, royalties or any similar returns or substitutes therefor), income from the insurance or reinsurance of risks, income from the factoring of trade accounts receivable, or profits from the disposition of investment property, unless it is established by the taxpayer or the affiliate that, throughout the period in the year during which the business was carried on by the affiliate,

(a) the business (other than any business conducted principally with persons with whom the affiliate does not deal at arm's length) is

(i) a business carried on by it as a foreign bank, a trust company, a credit union, an insurance corporation or a trader or dealer in securities or commodities, the activities of which are regulated in the country in which the business is principally carried on, or

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 133(5), will amend subpara. (a)(i) of the definition "investment business" in subsec. 95(1) to read as above, applicable to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after 1999.

Technical Notes: The definition "investment business" in subsection 95(1) is relevant for the purposes of the definitions "income from property" and "foreign accrual property income" in that subsection.

Under the definition "investment business", the investment business of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer means, in general, a business carried on by the affiliate the principal purpose of which is to derive income from property, income from the insurance or reinsurance of risks, income from the factoring of trade accounts receivable, or profits from the disposition of investment property, unless it is established that the business meets the requirements of paragraphs (a) and (b) of that definition.

Paragraph (a) of the definition "investment business" requires that the affiliate conduct the business principally with arm's length persons and that the business be either

- carried on by the affiliate as a foreign bank, a trust company, a credit union, an insurance corporation or a trader or dealer in securities or commodities, the activities of which are regulated in the country in which the business is principally carried on (subparagraph (a)(i) of the definition), or
- the development of real estate for sale, the lending of money, the leasing or licensing of property or the insurance or reinsurance of risks (subparagraph (a)(ii) of the definition).

In general terms, paragraph (b) of the definition requires that the affiliate or (as described in the preamble to paragraph (b) of the definition, where the affiliate carries on the business as a member of a partnership (except where the affiliate is a "specified member" of the partnership)), the partnership

- employs more than 5 employees full time in the active conduct of the business (subparagraph (b)(i) of the definition), or
- employs the equivalent of more than 5 employees in the active conduct of the business, taking into account only services provided by the employees of the affiliate and services provided outside Canada by employees of
  - — a corporation related to the affiliate (clause (b)(ii)(A) of the definition), or
  - — members of the partnership, other than a "specified member" of the partnership (clause (b)(ii)(B) of the definition).

The definition "investment business" is amended in the following ways.

First, subparagraph (a)(i) of definition is amended to refer to a business carried on by a foreign affiliate as a foreign bank, a trust company, a credit union, an insurance corporation or a trader or dealer in securities or commodities, the activities of which are regulated under the laws

- of each country in which the business is carried on through a permanent establishment (the definition, in proposed new Regulation 8202, of "permanent establishment" applies for this purpose) in that country and of the country under whose laws the affiliate is governed and any of exists, was (unless the affiliate was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or was last continued,
- of the country in which the business is principally carried on, or
- if the affiliate is related to a non-resident corporation, of the country under whose laws that non-resident corporation is governed and any of exists, was (unless that non-resident corporation was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or was last continued, if those regulating laws are recognized under the laws of the country in which the business is principally carried on and all of those countries are members of the European Union.

Second, the "preamble" to paragraph (b) of the definition "investment business" is amended so that the concept of "member of a partnership (except where the affiliate is a specified member of the partnership)" is replaced by the concept of "qualifying member of a partnership".

Third, clause (b)(ii)(B) of the definition "investment business" is replaced by new clauses (b)(ii)(B) and (C) so that, in general terms, in determining whether the affiliate or the partnership employs the equivalent of more than 5 employees full time in the active conduct of the business, there is taken into account only services provided by the employees of the affiliate and services provided outside Canada by employees of

- a corporation related to the affiliate (clause (b)(ii)(A) of the definition), or
- where the affiliate carries on the business as a member of the partnership,
  - — a person who was a "qualifying member" of the partnership,
  - — a designated corporation in respect of the affiliate (if the affiliate was a qualifying member of the partnership), or
  - — a designated partnership in respect of the affiliate (if the affiliate was a qualifying member of the partnership), or
- where the affiliate carries on the business (otherwise than as a member of the partnership),
  - — a corporation that was a "qualifying shareholder" of the affiliate,
  - — a designated corporation in respect of the affiliate, or
  - — a designated partnership in respect of the affiliate.

Fourth, the "postamble" to subparagraph (b)(ii) of the definition "investment business" is amended to reflect the changes to clauses (b)(ii)(B) and (C) of that definition.

The expression "qualifying member" is a newly introduced term and is defined in new paragraph 95(2)(o) for the purposes of subdivision i of Division B of Part I of the Act. That expression is, for the purposes of the Act generally, defined in amended subsection 248(1) as a person who would, at the relevant time, be determined to be a qualifying member of the partnership under paragraph 95(2)(o). For more information about the expression "qualifying member", see the commentary to paragraph 95(2)(o) and subsection 248(1).

The expressions "qualifying shareholder", "designated corporation" and "designated partnership" are also newly introduced terms and are defined in new paragraphs 95(2)(p), (s) and (t), respectively. For additional information, see the commentary to those paragraphs.

Amended subparagraph (a)(i) of the definition "investment business" applies to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after 1999.

The amendments to the "preamble" of paragraph (b), and to subclause (b)(ii)(B)(I), of the definition "investment business", in conjunction with the new definition "qualifying member", ensure that, in applying paragraph (b) of the definition "investment business", limited partners who are qualifying members of a limited partnership are treated in the same manner as general partners of a general partnership. These amendments also ensure that, even if the activities of the relevant partner do not meet the business activity requirements in new subparagraph 95(2)(o)(i), a partnership may qualify under the "preamble" to paragraph (b) of the definition "investment business" (or a partner may qualify under clause (b)(ii)(C) of that definition) if the relevant partner has an equity interest in the partnership that meets the criteria set out in new subparagraph 95(2)(o)(ii). For more detail, see the commentary to new paragraph 95(2)(o).

New clause (b)(ii)(C) of the definition "investment business", in conjunction with the new definition "qualifying shareholder", ensures that in the case where the affiliate carries on the business (other than as a member of the partnership), services that are rendered outside of Canada by a corporation that was a "qualifying shareholder" of the affiliate, and otherwise meet the conditions set out in paragraph (b) of the definition, may be taken into account in determining whether the "more than 5 employees full time" equivalency test in subparagraph (b)(ii) is met. For more detail, see the commentary to the definition "qualifying shareholder" in paragraph 95(2)(p).

New subclauses (b)(ii)(B)(II), (III) and (C)(II) and (III) expand the scope of partnerships or corporations that may be taken into account in determining whether the "more than 5 employees full time" equivalency test in subparagraph (b)(ii) is met by introducing the concepts of a designated corporation and a designated partnership. For additional information, see commentary to paragraphs 95(2)(s) and (t).

The amendments to the "preamble" of paragraph (b), to clauses (b)(ii)(B) and (C), and to the "postamble" of subparagraph (b)(ii), of the definition "investment business" apply to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that end after 1999. These amendments are included in the Global Section 95 Election package described [under 95(2)(a) — ed.]

(ii) the development of real estate for sale, the lending of money, the leasing or licensing of property or the insurance or reinsurance of risks, and

(b) the affiliate or, where the affiliate carries on the business as a member of a partnership (except where the affiliate is a specified member of the partnership in a fiscal period of the partnership that ends in the year), the partnership employs

(i) more than 5 employees full time in the active conduct of the business, or

(ii) the equivalent of more than 5 employees full time in the active conduct of the business taking into consideration only the services provided by its employees and the services provided outside Canada to the affiliate or the partnership by the employees of

(A) a corporation related to the affiliate (otherwise than because of a right referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b)), or

(B) members of the partnership (other than a member of the partnership that was a specified member of the partnership in a fiscal period of the partnership that ends in the year)

where the corporation or members referred to in clause (A) or (B) receive compensation from the affiliate or the partnership for the services provided to the affiliate or the partnership by those employees the value of which is not less than the cost to such corporation or members of the compensation paid or accruing to the benefit of those employees that performed the services during the time the services were performed by those employees;

Proposed Amendment — 95(1)"investment business"(b)

(b) the affiliate or, if the affiliate carries on the business as a qualifying member of a partnership (which partnership is referred to in this paragraph and paragraph (2)(t) as the "operating partnership"), the operating partnership employs

(i) more than five employees full time in the active conduct of the business, or

(ii) the equivalent of more than five employees full time in the active conduct of the business taking into consideration only the services provided by its employees and the services provided outside Canada to the affiliate or to the operating partnership by employees of

(A) a corporation related to the affiliate (otherwise than because of a right referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b)),

(B) in the case where the affiliate carries on the business as a member of the operating partnership

(I) a person (referred to in this subparagraph as a "providing member") who was a qualifying member of the operating partnership,

(II) if the affiliate was a qualifying member of the operating partnership, a designated corporation in respect of the affiliate, or

(III) if the affiliate was a qualifying member of the operating partnership, a designated partnership in respect of the affiliate, or

(C) in the case where the affiliate carries on the business (otherwise than as a member of the operating partnership),

(I) a corporation (referred to in this subparagraph as a "providing shareholder") that was a qualifying shareholder of the affiliate,

(II) a designated corporation in respect of the affiliate, or

(III) a designated partnership in respect of the affiliate,

if the corporations referred to in clause (A), the providing members referred to in subclause (B)(I), the designated corporations referred to in subclause (B)(II) or (C)(II), the designated partnerships referred to in subclause (B)(III) or (C)(III), or the providing shareholders referred to in subclause (C)(I) receive compensation from the affiliate or the operating partnership, as the case may be, for the services provided to the affiliate or to the operating partnership, as the case may be, by those employees the value of which is not less than the cost to those corporations, members, partnerships or shareholders of the compensation paid or accruing to the benefit of those employees that performed the services during the time the services were performed by those employees;

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 133(6), will amend para. (b) of the definition "investment business" in subsec. 95(1) to read as above, applicable to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that end after 1999. Para. (b) may also, by election, be applicable to taxation years that begin after 1994: see Application note to 95(2)(a) proposed amendments.

If a taxpayer has made what would, but for this paragraph, be a valid election as described above, and the taxpayer has, on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day that is the third anniversary of the day on which the amending Act receives Royal Assent, filed with the Minister of National Revenue a notice in writing to revoke the election, the election is deemed, otherwise than for the purpose of this paragraph, never to have been made.

Notwithstanding subsecs. 152(4) to (5) of the Act, any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year shall be made that is necessary to take an election or revocation referred to above into account.

Technical Notes: See under 95(1)"investment business"(a)(i) above.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, December 18, 2000:

Angelo Nikolakakis, Stikeman Elliott, Toronto

Dear Mr. Nikolakakis:

We are responding to your letters of July 19, July 26 and November 20, 2000 concerning paragraph (b) of the definition "investment business" in subsection 95(1), the interaction of subsection 95(2.2) and paragraph 95(2)(f), and the scope of paragraph 95(2)(a.3) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act").

In your letter of July 19, 2000, you submitted that the definition "investment business" in subsection 95(1) of the Act unfairly discriminates against certain very common forms of business organizations to which an affiliate may be a party. You requested an amendment to paragraph (b) of the definition to remove this discrimination and to treat, in the investment business definition, limited partners and limited partnerships in the same fashion as general partners and general partnerships.

We are sympathetic to your request. Consequently it will be recommended to the Minister of Finance that paragraph (b) of the definition "investment business" in subsection 95(1) of the Act be amended. The amendment will ensure that limited partners and limited partnerships are treated in the same manner as general partners and general partnerships in the investment business definition. It will be recommended that the amendment be applicable to taxation years of foreign affiliates ending after 1999. This will be achieved by modifying the definition "specified member" of a partnership, for this purpose, so that the definition in subsection 248(1) of the Act is read without reference to paragraph (a) of that definition.

Thank you for bringing these matters to our attention.

Yours sincerely,
Brian Ernewein
Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Letter from Dept. of Finance, March 21, 2002:

Dear [xxx]

I am writing in reply to your letter dated July 3, 2001 to Mr. Wally Conway, in which you requested amendments in connection with paragraph (b) of the definition "investment business" in subsection 95(1) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act").

"Specified member"

The first suggestion in your letter is that the definition "specified member" in subsection 248(1) of the Act be amended for the purpose of paragraph (b) of the definition "investment business" in subsection 95(1).

In general terms, a business carried on by a foreign affiliate in a particular taxation year is an "investment business" (as that expression is defined in subsection 95(1)) if the principal purpose of the business is to derive income from property, income from the insurance or reinsurance of risks, income from the factoring of trade accounts receivable, or profits from the disposition of investment property. The example used by you in your letter is the business of deriving income from real estate.

A business can avoid being classified as an "investment business" where the conditions described in paragraphs (a) and (b) of the investment business definition are satisfied. However, if those conditions are not satisfied and the affiliate does not, in turn, satisfy the rules in subsection 95(2) of the Act to have the income from the business deemed to be included in computing active business income, the income from the business will be included in computing the affiliate's foreign accrual property income (FAPI).

The requirement in paragraph (b) of the definition will be satisfied if the affiliate employs the equivalent of more than five employees full time in the active conduct of the business. If the affiliate carries on the business as a member of a partnership, the partnership will not satisfy the requirement in paragraph (b) unless it employs the equivalent of more than five employees full time in the active conduct of the business. The employee equivalency test takes into account only the services performed outside Canada by employees

- of a corporation related to the affiliate (see clause (b)(ii)(A) of the investment business definition), or
- of members of the partnership, other than a member of the partnership that was a "specified member" of the partnership (see clause (b)(ii)(B) of the investment business definition).

However, the preamble of paragraph (b) of the definition provides that, if the affiliate is itself a "specified member" of the partnership, the business of the partnership will per se be an "investment business" to the affiliate and the income from the business will be included in computing FAPI unless the provisions in subsection 95(2) apply to include the income in computing the affiliate's income from an active business.

The expression "specified member" of a partnership as employed in the preamble of paragraph (b) and in clause (b)(ii)(B) is defined in subsection 248(1) of the Act to be

- any partner of the partnership who is a limited partner within the meaning assigned by subsection 96(2.4) of the Act, and
- any partner of the partnership unless, on a regular, continuous and substantial basis, the partner

  1. is actively engaged in the activities of the partnership other than its financing, or

  2. carries on directly a similar business to that of the partnership throughout the relevant period.

As I stated in a letter dated December 18, 2000 to another tax practitioner, we will be recommending to the Minister of Finance that paragraph (b) of the definition "investment business" in subsection 95(1) of the Act be amended to ensure that, in cases where limited partners carry on directly a business similar to that of the limited partnership, limited partners and limited partnerships are treated in the same manner as general partners and general partnerships in the investment business definition. It will be recommended that the amendment be applicable to taxation years of foreign affiliates which end after 1999. This would be achieved by reading the definition "specified member", in subsection 248(1) of the Act, without reference to paragraph (a) of that definition when that definition applies for the purpose of the investment business definition.

In your letter, you have submitted that, for the purpose of the investment business definition, the definition "specified member" in subsection 248(1) should be further amended to ensure that a person who would otherwise be included in the definition "specified member" because of paragraph (b) would not be considered a "specified member" of the partnership if that person holds at least a 10% fair market value equity interest in the partnership. You argue that such an amendment would, for the purposes of the investment business definition, eliminate the distinction that might exist, for example, between a corporate structure where the real estate business in a corporate group is carried on through a United States limited liability corporation (and would therefore benefit from the relieving provision in the investment business definition) and a corporate structure where the real estate business in the corporate group is carried on through a limited partnership (and therefore would not benefit from the relieving provision in the investment business definition).

We agree that the difference in Canadian tax results as illustrated by this example is not appropriate from a Canadian tax policy perspective. We also agree that a 10% fair market value partnership equity test would be reasonable to maintain the policy objectives of the investment business definition in the context of the FAPI rules. We are therefore prepared to recommend amendments to ensure that, for the purpose of paragraph (b) of the definition "investment business" in subsection 95(1) (and for the purposes of subsection 95(2) of the Act), a member of a partnership would not be treated as a "specified member" if the member is a "qualifying member" of the partnership. A person would be a "qualifying member" of a partnership if the person holds 1% or more of the fair market value of all interests in the partnership and that person and related persons hold 10% or more of the fair market value of all interests in the partnership. For the purpose of the qualifying member definition, if an interest in a particular partnership is held by another partnership or by a non-discretionary trust (as that expression is defined in subsection 17(15) of the Act), each member of that other partnership, or each beneficiary of that trust, would be treated as holding that percentage of the interests in the particular partnership that the fair market value of the interests in that other partnership or the trust held by that member or beneficiary is of the fair market value of all the interests in that other partnership or in the trust.

If these recommendations are acted upon, I would anticipate that they would be included in the next technical bill.

We will recommend that the amendments apply to taxation years of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer which end after 1999. However, where the taxpayer so elects in respect of all the foreign affiliates of the taxpayer, the amendments will apply to taxation years of these affiliates of the taxpayer that begin after 1994 and, notwithstanding subsections 152(4) and (5) of the Act, any assessment of a taxpayer's tax payable under the Act for any of those taxation years shall be made that is necessary to take into account the application of the amendments. The ability to elect to have the amendments apply to these earlier taxation years will be contingent on the taxpayer electing to have other amendments to the foreign affiliate rules to be included in the technical bill apply to the taxpayer's foreign affiliates for these earlier taxation years.

Five Employee Test

In your letter, you have suggested that the five employee test in paragraph (b) of the investment business definition should also be amended so that the qualifying employees could be aggregated within the corporate group as a whole. In particular, you have suggested that the test be modified so that the qualifying employees could be drawn (in any combination) from employees of the affiliate, any other affiliate of the taxpayer, or where either affiliate carries on business as a member of a partnership, members of the partnership (other than specified members). In support of your suggestion, you indicated that it is a common occurrence in the United States for those carrying on real estate businesses to hold separate real properties in separate corporate entities (e.g., for business reasons such as financing and risk management).

However, we are of the view that the five employee test, currently found in the Act, is appropriate in tax policy terms. In particular, it seems to us that if no single business exists in respect of which there are more than five qualifying full-time employees, the application of the current rules, to characterize the income from the activity as income from property, is appropriate.

As I indicated in the first part of this letter, we are, however, prepared to recommend amendments to the definition "specified member" of a partnership for the purpose of the investment business definition which would ensure that the current five employee test can be satisfied in a wider range of circumstances.

Thank you for writing.

Yours sincerely,
Brian Ernewein

(b) the first taxation year of such foreign affiliate that began after 1994 began at a time in 1995 that is earlier than the time that that taxation year would have begun if there had not been that change in the taxation of such foreign affiliate.

Regulations: 8202 (meaning of "permanent establishment").

(a) such foreign affiliate had requested that change in the taxation year in writing before February 22, 1994 from the income taxation authority of the country in which it was resident and subject to income taxation; or

(b) the first taxation year of such foreign affiliate that began after 1994 began at a time in 1995 that is earlier than the time that that taxation year would have begun if there had not been that change in the taxation of such foreign affiliate.

"lease obligation" of a person includes an obligation under an agreement that authorizes the use of or the production or reproduction of property including information or any other thing;

History: The definition "lease obligation" added to subsec. 95(1) by 1995, c. 21, subsec. 46(3), applicable to taxation years of foreign affiliates of taxpayers that begin after 1994 except that, where there has been a change in the taxation year of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer in 1994 and after February 22, 1994, the new definition applies to taxation years of such foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that end after 1994, unless

(a) such foreign affiliate had requested that change in the taxation year in writing before February 22, 1994 from the income taxation authority of the country in which it was resident and subject to income taxation; or

(b) the first taxation year of such foreign affiliate that began after 1994 began at a time in 1995 that is earlier than the time that that taxation year would have begun if there had not been that change in the taxation of such foreign affiliate.

and for the purpose of this definition, the definition "lending asset" in subsection 248(1) shall be read without the words "but does not include a prescribed property";

History: Closing words added to the definition "lending of money" in subsec. 95(1) by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 122(3), applicable to taxation years of foreign affiliates of taxpayers that begin after 1994, but where there was a change in the taxation year of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer in 1994 and after February 22, 1994, the amendment applies to taxation years of the foreign affiliate that end after 1994 unless

(a) the foreign affiliate had requested the change in writing before February 22, 1994 from the income taxation authority of the country in which the foreign affiliate was resident and subject to income taxation, or

(b) the foreign affiliate's first taxation year that began after 1994 began at a time in 1995 that is earlier than the time when that taxation year would have begun if the change had not occurred, except that, for taxation years of a foreign affiliate that ended before October 1997, the closing words of the definition "lending of money" shall be read as follows:

and for the purpose of this definition, the definition "lending asset" in subsection 248(1) shall be read without the words "but does not include a prescribed security";

The definition "lending of money" added to subsec. 95(1) by 1995, c. 21, subsec. 46(3), applicable to taxation years of foreign affiliates of taxpayers that begin after 1994 except that, where there has been a change in the taxation year of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer in 1994 and after February 22, 1994, the new definition applies to taxation years of such foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that end after 1994, unless

"licensing of property" includes authorizing the use of or the production or reproduction of property including information or any other thing;

History: The definition "licensing of property" added to subsec. 95(1) by 1995, c. 21, subsec. 46(3), applicable to taxation years of foreign affiliates of taxpayers that begin after 1994 except that, where there has been a change in the taxation year of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer in 1994 and after February 22, 1994, the new definition applies to taxation years of such foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that end after 1994, unless

(a) such foreign affiliate had requested that change in the taxation year in writing before February 22, 1994 from the income taxation authority of the country in which it was resident and subject to income taxation; or

(b) where the foreign accrual property income of the affiliate for that year exceeds $5,000,

(i) where the affiliate and each corporation that is relevant to the determination of the taxpayer's equity percentage in the affiliate has only one class of issued shares at the end of that taxation year of the affiliate, the percentage that would be the taxpayer's equity percentage in the affiliate at that time on the assumption that the taxpayer owned no shares other than the particular share (but in no case shall that assumption be made for the purpose of determining whether or not a corporation is a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer), and

(ii) in any other case, the percentage determined in prescribed manner;

Related Provisions: 95(1) — Foreign accrual property income; 95(1) — Foreign affiliate; 95(4) — Equity percentage.

Regulations: 5904 (prescribed manner).

"relevant tax factor" means

(a) where the taxpayer is an individual, 2, or

(b) where the taxpayer is a corporation, the quotient obtained when one is divided by the percentage set out in paragraph 123(1)(a);

Proposed Amendment — 95(1)"relevant tax factor"

"relevant tax factor", of a person or partnership for a taxation year, means

(a) in the case of a corporation, or of a partnership all the members of which, other than non-resident persons, are corporations, the quotient obtained by the formula

where

A is the percentage set out in paragraph 123(1)(a), and

B is

(i) in the case of a corporation, the percentage that is the corporation's general rate reduction percentage (as defined by section 123.4) for the taxation year, and

(ii) in the case of a partnership, the percentage that would be determined under subparagraph (i) in respect of the partnership if the partnership were a corporation whose taxation year is the partnership's fiscal period; and

(b) in any other case, 2.2;

Application: The October 30, 2003 Notice of Ways and Means Motion (NRTs and FIEs), subsec. 17(5), will amend the definition "relevant tax factor" in subsec. 95(1) to read as above, applicable to 2002 et seq.

Technical Notes: The definition "relevant tax factor" in subsection 95(1) is used in determining the Canadian tax relief provided in respect of foreign taxes imposed on the earnings of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer or a foreign investment entity in which the taxpayer has a "participating interest" (as defined in subsection 94.1(1)). The existing definition provides that the relevant tax factor for a corporation (or a partnership all the resident members of which are corporations) is the reciprocal of the basic corporate tax rate (i.e., 1/.38, or 2.63). The factor for individuals and other partnerships is 2.

As part of a series of amendments reflecting recent and planned reductions in income tax rates, the definition "relevant tax factor" is amended. The relevant tax factor for a corporation (or a partnership all the resident members of which are corporations) will take account of the "general rate reduction percentage" provided in section 123.4. For example, if a corporation's taxation year is the calendar year, its relevant tax factor for 2003 will be 1/(.38 - .05), or 3.03.

Similarly, to take account of decreasing personal income tax rates, the relevant tax factor for individuals and other partnerships is increased to 2.2.

"surplus entitlement percentage", at any time, of a taxpayer in respect of a foreign affiliate has the meaning assigned by regulation; and Regulations: 5905(13).

Proposed Addition — 95(1)"taxable Canadian business"

"taxable Canadian business", at any time of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada or of a partnership of which a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada is a member (which foreign affiliate or partnership is referred to in this definition as the "operator"), means a business the income from which would, if there were income from the business for the operator's taxation year or fiscal period that includes that time, be income

(a) that is included in computing the foreign affiliate's taxable income earned in Canada under subparagraph 115(1)(a)(ii), and

(b) that is not, because of a tax treaty with a country, exempt from tax under Part I;

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 133(7), will add the definition "taxable Canadian business" to subsec. 95(1), applicable to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after December 20, 2002.

If a taxpayer so elects in writing and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day on which the amending legislation is assented to, the definition applies to taxation years, of all foreign affiliates of the taxpayer, that begin after 1994, except that in applying para. (b) of the definition for the 1997 and preceding taxation years of all foreign affiliates of the taxpayer, the para. is to be read in respect of those affiliates as follows:

(b) that is not, because of a comprehensive agreement or convention for the elimination of double taxation on income, between the Government of Canada and the government of another country, which has the force of law in Canada at that time, exempt from tax under Part I;

If a taxpayer has made what would, but for this paragraph, be a valid election as described above, and the taxpayer has, on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day that is the third anniversary of the day on which the amending Act receives Royal Assent, filed with the Minister of National Revenue a notice in writing to revoke the election, the election is deemed, otherwise than for the purpose of this paragraph, never to have been made.

Notwithstanding subsecs. 152(4) to (5) of the Act, any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year shall be made that is necessary to take an election or revocation referred to above into account.

Technical Notes: Subsection 95(1) is amended to add the new definition "taxable Canadian business". This expression is used in new paragraphs 95(2)(j.1), (k), (k.2) and (k.4). For more detail, see the commentaries to those paragraphs.

A "taxable Canadian business", at any time of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada or of a partnership of which a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada is a member (which foreign affiliate or partnership is referred to in that definition as the "operator"), is a business the income from which, for the operator's taxation year or fiscal period that includes that time, is income

- that is included in computing the foreign affiliate's taxable income earned in Canada under subparagraph 115(1)(a)(ii), and
- that is not, because of a tax treaty with a country, exempt from tax under Part I of the Act.

In connection with the application of the definition "taxable Canadian business", note the rules in proposed new paragraph 95(2)(k.7). For more detail, see the commentary to that paragraph.

The amendment to add the new definition "taxable Canadian business" applies to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after December 20, 2002. This amendment is included in the Fresh Start Section 95 Election package described [below — ed.]

Also note that the definition "tax treaty" in subsection 248(1) is applicable to the 1998 and subsequent taxation years. Accordingly, these amendments ensure, in effect, that, in applying the definition "taxable Canadian business" for the 1997 and prior taxation years of all foreign affiliates of the taxpayer in the case where a taxpayer has made a Fresh Start Section 95 Election, the reference in paragraph (b) of the definition "taxable Canadian business" to the expression "tax treaty" is to be read as a reference to a "comprehensive agreement or convention for the elimination of double taxation on income, between the Government of Canada and the government of another country, which has the force of law in Canada at that time".

Fresh Start Section 95 Election

This set of proposals contains a number of amendments to section 95 of the Act, and to section 5907 of the Regulations, that apply to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after December 20, 2002. However, where a taxpayer so elects in writing and files the election (referred to in this commentary as the "Fresh Start Section 95 Election") with the Minister of National Revenue before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day on which these amendments are assented to, all of those amendments apply to taxation years of all foreign affiliates, of the taxpayer, that begin after 1994. This set of proposals provides that, notwithstanding subsections 152(4) to (5), the Minister of National Revenue can make any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year that is necessary to take the election into account.

Note that the Global Section 95 Election [see under 95(2)(a) — ed.] and the Fresh Start Section 95 Election are separate elections.

The following amendments to the Act and to the Regulations are covered by the Fresh Start Section 95 Election package:

- the definition "taxable Canadian business" in subsection 95(1),
- paragraphs 95(2)(j.1) and (j.2) and 95(2)(k), (k.1) and (k.4) to (k.7), and
- subsections 5907(2.9) and (2.91) of the Regulations.

See the commentary to paragraph 95(2)(k) for additional information with respect to transitional provisions.

Note that this set of proposals provides for the possibility of a total revocation of the Fresh Start Section 95 Election. If a taxpayer has made what would otherwise be a valid Fresh Start Section 95 Election, and the taxpayer has, on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day that is the third anniversary of the day on which the amending legislation enacting this set of proposals is assented to, filed with the Minister of National Revenue a notice in writing to revoke the election, the election is deemed never to have been made. This set of proposals provides that, notwithstanding subsections 152(4) to (5), the Minister of National Revenue can make any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year that is necessary to take the revocation into account.

History: The definition "trust company" added to subsec. 95(1) by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 122(4), applicable to taxation years of foreign affiliates of taxpayers that begin after 1994 except that, where there was a change in the taxation year of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer in 1994 and after February 22, 1994, the amendment applies to taxation years of the foreign affiliate that end after 1994 unless

(a) the foreign affiliate had requested the change in writing before February 22, 1994 from the income taxation authority of the country in which the foreign affiliate was resident and subject to income taxation; or

(b) the foreign affiliate's first taxation year that began after 1994 began at a time in 1995 that is earlier than the time when that taxation year would have begun if the change had not occurred.

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 133(8), will amend para. 95(2)(a) to read as above, applicable to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after December 20, 2002; and subcls. (ii)(A)(II) and (B)(II) and cl. (ii)(C) of the para. are applicable to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that end after 1999. However, if a taxpayer so elects in writing and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day on which the amending legislation is assented to, subcls. 95(2)(a)(ii)(D)(III) to (V), as amended, apply to taxation years, of all foreign affiliates of the taxpayer, that begin after 1994.

If a taxpayer referred to above so elects in writing and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day on which the amending legislation is assented to, the provisions listed below are applicable to taxation years, of all foreign affiliates of the taxpayer, that begin after 1994 and, notwithstanding subsecs. 152(4) to (5), any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year shall be made that is necessary to take the election into account.

Provisions:

- 95(1)"excluded property"(a), (c), (c.1)
- 95(1)"investment business"(b)
- 95(2)(a)(i)(A)(II), (B)(II), 95(2)(a)(ii)(A)(II), (B)(II), 95(2)(a)(ii)(C), 95(2)(a)(ii)(E), 95(2)(a)(v), (vi)
- 95(2)(f) between (ii) and (iii)
- 95(2)(f.1), (f.2)
- 95(2)(g) to (g.02)
- 95(2)(i)
- 95(2)(o)–(t)
- 95(2.1)(c)
- 95(2.2) opening words
- 95(2.41)
- 95(3)(d)

If a taxpayer has made what would, but for this paragraph, be a valid election as described above, and the taxpayer has, on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day that is the third anniversary of the day on which the amending Act receives Royal Assent, filed with the Minister of National Revenue a notice in writing to revoke the election, the election is deemed, otherwise than for the purpose of this paragraph, never to have been made.

Notwithstanding subsecs. 152(4) to (5) of the Act, any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year shall be made that is necessary to take an election or revocation referred to above into account.

Technical Notes: Subsection 95(2) provides rules for determining the income, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada, from a particular source. A foreign affiliate is considered to have three sources of income — income from property, income from a business other than an active business and income from an active business. This sourcing is important since the affiliate's income from property and the affiliate's income from a business other than an active business are included in the foreign accrual property income (FAPI) of the affiliate. Where the affiliate is a controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, the taxpayer's share of the affiliate's FAPI must be included, under section 91, in the taxpayer's income for Canadian tax purposes whether or not the income is distributed. The income of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer from an active business is included, under section 90, in the taxpayer's income for Canadian tax purposes only when paid to the shareholder as a dividend.

Paragraph 95(2)(a) characterizes, in certain circumstances, amounts that would otherwise be income from property as income from an active business. More particularly, subparagraphs 95(2)(a)(i) to (iv) provide that particular income of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, in respect of which the taxpayer has a qualifying interest throughout a taxation year of the affiliate, from sources in a country (other than Canada) that would otherwise be income from property of the affiliate for the year, will be included in computing the income from an active business of the affiliate for the year.

However, paragraph 95(2)(a) does not - require amounts that would otherwise be "losses" from property of the affiliate to be included in computing the income from an active business of the affiliate, or

- require amounts that would otherwise be income or losses from property of the affiliate to be included in computing the "loss" from an active business of the affiliate.

Paragraph 95(2)(a) is amended so that throughout that paragraph, except clauses 95(2)(a)(ii)(D) and (E), the word "income" is replaced with the words "income or loss".

In general, these amendments to paragraph 95(2)(a) ensure that, provided that the conditions specified in that paragraph are satisfied,

- amounts that would otherwise be "losses" from property of the affiliate can be included in computing the income from an active business of the affiliate, and
- amounts that would otherwise be income or losses from property of the affiliate can be included in computing the "loss" from an active business of the affiliate.

The "preamble" of paragraph 95(2)(a) is also amended to broaden the scope of the paragraph to include those foreign affiliates in which the taxpayer does not have a qualifying interest but to which the taxpayer is related throughout the year. Those foreign affiliates would be controlled foreign affiliates of the taxpayer. (Refer to the commentary on new amended subclause 95(2)(a)(ii)(D)(III) for information regarding a similar change.)

These amendments to paragraph 95(2)(a) apply to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after December 20, 2002.

In general terms, subparagraph 95(2)(a)(i) permits a particular foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, in respect of which the taxpayer has a qualifying interest, to include, in its active business income, its property income that

- is derived by it from activities that can reasonably be considered to be directly related to active business activities carried on in a country (other than Canada) by a person that is
  - — any other non-resident corporation to which the particular affiliate and the taxpayer are related throughout the year (for convenience referred to as Case 1), or
  - — the taxpayer, where the taxpayer is a life insurance corporation resident in Canada throughout the year (for convenience referred to as Case 2), and
- would, if that person were a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer and the income were earned by it, be included in computing the active business income of that person.

Case 2 deals with the situation where a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer in respect of which the taxpayer has a qualifying interest performs the treasury activities for the foreign branch of a Canadian multinational life insurer. The income of the treasury activities could be included in the active business income of the affiliate if the income would be active business income of the foreign branch if it were a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer and it earned the income.

However, Case 2 would not apply where, for example, a particular wholly-owned Canadian subsidiary of the taxpayer is a life insurance corporation resident in Canada that has a foreign branch and a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer in respect of which the taxpayer has a qualifying interest performs the treasury activities for the foreign branch. This is the case because the wholly-owned Canadian subsidiary of the taxpayer does not have a qualifying interest in the foreign affiliate of the taxpayer.

In order to address that concern, subclauses 95(2)(a)(i)(A)(II) and (B)(II) are amended to extend Case 2 to situations where the foreign branch is a foreign branch of a life insurance corporation resident in Canada that is the taxpayer, a person that controls the taxpayer or a person that is controlled by the taxpayer.

The amendments to subclauses 95(2)(a)(i)(A)(II) and (B)(II) apply to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after December 20, 2002. These amendments are included in the Global Section 95 Election package described [below, still under 95(2)(a) — ed.]

As noted in the opening commentary to paragraph 95(2)(a), amendments made to that paragraph ensure that, throughout subparagraph 95(2)(a)(i), the word "income" is replaced with the words "income or loss". For further detail on those amendments and on their coming-into-force provisions, refer to that commentary.

Subparagraph 95(2)(a)(ii) provides that income that would otherwise be income from property for a taxation year of a particular foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, in respect of which the taxpayer has a qualifying interest, will be included in the particular affiliate's income from an active business for the year to the extent that the income is derived from amounts paid or payable, directly or indirectly, to the particular affiliate or a partnership of which it is a member

- by a non-resident corporation to which the particular affiliate and the taxpayer are related throughout the year or by a partnership of which the non-resident corporation is a member (other than where it is a specified member, as defined in subsection 248(1), of the partnership at any time in a fiscal period of the partnership that ends in the year) to the extent that those amounts paid or payable are for expenditures (either an expenditure of a current nature or an expenditure in respect of which an allowance is claimed) that would, if the non-resident corporation or the partnership were a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, be deductible in the year or a subsequent taxation year by it in computing the amounts prescribed to be its earnings or loss from an active business, other than an active business carried on in Canada (clause 95(2)(a)(ii)(A));
- by another foreign affiliate of the taxpayer in respect of which the taxpayer has a qualifying interest throughout the year or by a partnership of which the other foreign affiliate of the taxpayer is a member (other than where the other affiliate is a specified member of the partnership at any time in a fiscal period of the partnership that ends in the year) to the extent that those amounts paid or payable are for expenditures (either an expenditure of a current nature or an expenditure in respect of which an allowance is claimed) that are or would, if the partnership were a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, be deductible in the year or a subsequent taxation year by the other affiliate or the partnership in computing the amounts prescribed to be its earnings or loss from an active business, other than an active business carried on in Canada (clause 95(2)(a)(ii)(B));
- by a partnership where the particular affiliate is a member of the partnership (other than where it is a "specified member" of the partnership at any time in a fiscal period of the partnership that ends in the year) to the extent that those amounts paid or payable are for expenditures (either an expenditure of a current nature or an expenditure in respect of which an allowance is claimed) that would, if the partnership were a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, be deductible in the year or a subsequent taxation year in computing the amounts prescribed to be its earnings or loss from an active business carried on by it outside Canada (clause 95(2)(a)(ii)(C));

- by another foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that is related to the particular affiliate and the taxpayer throughout the year (the "second affiliate") pursuant to a legal obligation to pay interest on borrowed money used to acquire, or on an amount payable for the acquisition of, property where
  - — the property is excluded property of the second affiliate that is shares of another foreign affiliate of the taxpayer in respect of which the taxpayer has a qualifying interest throughout the year (the "third affiliate"),
  - — the second affiliate and the third affiliate are resident in, and subject to income taxation in, the same country, and
  - — the amounts paid or payable are relevant in computing the liability for taxes of the members of a corporate group composed of the second affiliate and one or more other foreign affiliates of the taxpayer which are resident in, and not exempt from income taxation in, the same country as the second affiliate and in respect of which the taxpayer has a qualifying interest throughout the year (clause 95(2)(a)(ii)(D)); or
- by the taxpayer, where the taxpayer is a life insurance corporation resident in Canada, to the extent that those amounts paid or payable are for expenditures that are deductible in the year or a subsequent taxation year by the life insurance corporation resident in Canada in computing its income or loss from carrying on its insurance business outside Canada and not in Canada (clause 95(2)(a)(ii)(E)).

A foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, in respect of which the taxpayer has a qualifying interest, will be precluded from using clauses 95(2)(a)(ii)(A), (B) and (C) if the relevant member of the partnership referred to in those clauses is a specified member of the partnership.

Generally, a "specified member" of a partnership in a fiscal period of the partnership is defined in subsection 248(1) as being

- a member who was a limited partner (within the meaning assigned by subsection 96(2.4)) of the partnership at any time in the fiscal period, or
- a member who, throughout that part of the fiscal period that a business of the partnership is ordinarily carried on and during which the member was a member of the partnership, was neither
  - — actively engaged in the business of the partnership (otherwise than in the financing of the business), nor
  - — carrying on, otherwise than as a member of a partnership, a similar business as that carried on by the partnership (otherwise than in the financing of the business).

Subparagraph 95(2)(a)(ii) is amended in the following ways.

First, clauses 95(2)(a)(ii)(A) to (C) are amended so that the condition requiring the relevant member of the partnership to be a member of the partnership (otherwise than as a specified member of the partnership) is replaced by the condition requiring the relevant member to be a "qualifying member" of the partnership throughout each period, in the fiscal period of the partnership that ends in the year, in which the relevant member was a member of the partnership. The expression "qualifying member" is a new term. It is defined in new paragraph 95(2)(o) for the purposes of subdivision i of Division B of Part I of the Act, and, defined in subsection 248(1) for the purposes of the Act generally, as being a person that would at the relevant time be determined under paragraph 95(2)(o) to be a qualifying member of the partnership. For more detail on the definition "qualifying member", see the commentary to paragraph 95(2)(o) and subsection 248(1).

The amendments to clauses 95(2)(a)(ii)(A) to (C), in conjunction with the new definition "qualifying member", ensure that, in applying those clauses, limited partners of limited partnerships that are qualifying members are treated in the same manner as general partners of general partnerships. Those provisions also ensure that, even if the activities of the relevant person do not meet the business activity requirements in new subparagraph 95(2)(o)(i), a partnership may still qualify under clause 95(2)(a)(ii)(A), (B) or (C) if the relevant person has an equity interest in the partnership that meets the criteria set out in new subparagraph 95(2)(o)(ii). For more detail, see the commentary to new paragraph 95(2)(o).

Second, clause 95(2)(a)(ii)(D) is amended to

- introduce the concept of a particular period in the "preamble" to clause 95(2)(a)(ii)(D) and in subclause 95(2)(a)(ii)(D)(III),
- provide in subclause 95(2)(a)(ii)(D)(III) that a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer to which the taxpayer is related can be a "third affiliate" defined in that subclause,
- replace current subclause 95(2)(a)(ii)(D)(IV) with new subclauses 95(2)(a)(ii)(D)(IV) and (V), and
- remove the requirement that existed in current subclause 95(2)(a)(ii)(D)(V).

The "preamble" to clause (D) is amended to describe amounts paid or payable by the "second affiliate" as being in respect of a particular period which period is then the time frame during which the shares of the "third affiliate" must be excluded property.

Under existing subclause 95(2)(a)(ii)(D)(III), a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer cannot be a "third affiliate" defined in that subclause unless the foreign affiliate is a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer in respect of which the taxpayer has a qualifying interest. The amendment permits a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that is related to the taxpayer to be a "third affiliate" defined in that subclause. Related foreign affiliates would be controlled foreign affiliates of the taxpayer.

Under existing subclause 95(2)(a)(ii)(D)(IV), the "second affiliate" and the "third affiliate" must be resident in and subject to income taxation in the same country. Thus, each of those affiliates must itself be subject to income taxation in that country and cannot be a flow-through entity under the income tax laws of that country. Amended subclauses 95(2)(a)(ii)(D)(IV) and (V) are intended to accommodate the case where the second affiliate, the third affiliate, or both, are such a flow-through entity.

New subclause 95(2)(a)(ii)(D)(IV) requires that the second affiliate and the third affiliate be resident in the same country for each of their taxation years (each of which taxation years is referred to as a "relevant taxation year" of the second affiliate or of the third affiliate, as the case may be) that end in the year.

New subclause 95(2)(a)(ii)(D)(V) requires that, in respect of each of the second affiliate and the third affiliate for each relevant taxation year of that affiliate, either

- that affiliate be subject to income taxation in that country in that relevant taxation year (sub-subclause 95(2)(a)(ii)(D)(V)1.), or
- the members or shareholders of that affiliate (which, for the purpose of sub-subclause 95(2)(a)(ii)(D)(V)2.), includes a person that has, directly or indirectly, an interest in a share of, or in an equity interest in, the affiliate) at the end of that relevant taxation year be subject to income taxation in that country on, in aggregate, all or substantially all of the income of that affiliate for that relevant taxation year in their taxation years in which that relevant taxation year ends or would be so subject to income taxation in that country if that affiliate had income for that relevant taxation year and the income of those members or shareholders for their taxation years in which that relevant taxation year ends consisted only of their share of income of that affiliate for that relevant taxation year (sub-subclause 95(2)(a)(ii)(D)(V)2.).

Current subclause 95(2)(a)(ii)(D)(V) contains the requirement that the amounts paid or payable by the second affiliate to the particular affiliate must be relevant in computing the liability for income taxes in that country of a corporate group composed of the second affiliate and one or more other foreign affiliates of the taxpayer (the shares of which are excluded property) that are resident in, and subject to income taxation in, that country and in respect of which the taxpayer has a qualifying interest throughout the year. Clause 95(2)(a)(ii)(D) is amended to remove the requirement contained in current subclause 95(2)(a)(ii)(D)(V).

Third, as noted above, current clause 95(2)(a)(ii)(E) provides for the recharacterization of certain amounts paid or payable to the particular affiliate, where the payer is the taxpayer and the taxpayer is a life insurance corporation resident in Canada, to the extent that those amounts are for expenditures that are deductible in the year or a subsequent taxation year by the taxpayer in computing its income or loss from carrying on its insurance business outside Canada and not in Canada.

Clause 95(2)(a)(ii)(E) is amended to provide for the recharacterization of certain amounts paid or payable to the particular affiliate, where the payer is a life insurance corporation that is resident in Canada and is the taxpayer, a person who controls the taxpayer or a person controlled by the taxpayer, to the extent that those amounts were for expenditures that are deductible in the year or in a subsequent taxation year by the life insurance corporation in computing its income or loss from carrying on its life insurance business outside Canada and are not deductible in the year or a subsequent taxation year in computing its income or loss from carrying on its life insurance business in Canada.

For additional detail, see the commentary to subclauses 95(2)(a)(i)(A)(II) and (B)(II).

Fourth, as noted in the opening commentary to paragraph 95(2)(a), the amendments to that paragraph ensure that, throughout subparagraph 95(2)(a)(ii), except clauses (D) and (E), the word "income" is replaced with the words "income or loss". For further detail on those amendments and on their coming-into-force provisions, see that commentary.

New subclauses 95(2)(a)(ii)(A)(II) and (B)(II) and new clause 95(2)(a)(ii)(C) apply to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that end after 1999. These amendments are included in the Global Section 95 Election package described [below, still under 95(2)(a) — ed.]

New clause 95(2)(a)(ii)(D) applies to taxation years of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after December 20, 2002. However, where the taxpayer elects in writing and files that election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day on which these amendments are assented to, subclauses 95(2)(a)(ii)(D)(III) to (V) apply in respect of all foreign affiliates of the taxpayer for taxations years that end after 1994. This set of proposals provides that, notwithstanding subsections 152(4) to (5), the Minister of National Revenue can make any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year that is necessary to take such an election into account.

New clause 95(2)(a)(ii)(E) applies to taxation years of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after December 20, 2002. This amendment is included in the Global Section 95 Election package described [below, still under 95(2)(a) — ed.]

New subparagraph 95(2)(a)(v) ensures that, in computing the active business income or loss of a particular foreign affiliate, there is to be included the income or loss from property derived by the particular foreign affiliate from the disposition of excluded property that is not capital property of the particular foreign affiliate.

The amendment is consequential to the amendments made to the definition "excluded property" in subsection 95(1).

New subparagraph 95(2)(a)(vi) ensures an income or a loss is treated as active business income or loss (and not as foreign accrual property income or loss) where that income or loss is derived under or as a result of certain agreements which provide for the purchase, sale or exchange of currency and relate to currency exchange risks with respect to amounts included in active business income or loss under paragraph 95(2)(a).

New subparagraphs 95(2)(a)(v) and (vi) apply to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after December 20, 2002. These subparagraphs are included in the Global Section 95 Election package described [immediately below — ed.]

Global Section 95 Election

In this set of proposals, there are a number of amendments to section 95, and to section 5907 of the Regulations, that apply to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin or end after various specified dates. However, where a taxpayer so elects in writing and files the election (referred to in this commentary as the "Global Section 95 Election") with the Minister of National Revenue before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day on which these amendments are assented to, all of those measures apply to taxation years of all foreign affiliates, of the taxpayer, that begin after 1994. This set of proposals provides that, notwithstanding subsections 152(4) to (5), the Minister of National Revenue can make any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year that is necessary to take the election into account.

Note that the Fresh Start Section 95 Election (described [under 95(1)"taxable Canadian business"]) and the Global Section 95 Election are separate elections. As well, it should be noted that various important amendments to section 95 have separate elections that can be made by taxpayers.

The following amendments to the Act and to the Regulations are covered by the Global Section 95 Election package:

(A) Amendments to the Act:

- paragraphs (a), (c) and (c.1) of the definition "excluded property" in subsection 95(1),
- paragraph (b) of the definition "investment business" in subsection 95(1),
- subclauses 95(2)(a)(i)(A)(II) and (B)(II) and 95(2)(a)(ii)(A)(II) and (B)(II), clause 95(2)(a)(ii)(C), clause 95(2)(a)(ii)(E) and subparagraphs 95(2)(a)(v) and (vi),
- the portion of paragraph 95(2)(f) that is after subparagraph 95(2)(f)(ii) and before subparagraph 95(2)(f)(iii),
- paragraphs 95(2)(f.1), (f.2) and (g) to (g.02),
- paragraph 95(2)(i),
- paragraphs 95(2)(o) to (t),
- paragraph 95(2.1)(c),
- preamble of subsection 95(2.2),
- subsection 95(2.41), and
- paragraph 95(3)(d).

(B) Amendments to the Regulations:

- paragraph (b) of the definition "earnings" in Regulation 5907(1),
- paragraph (b) of the definition "exempt deficit" in Regulation 5907(1),
- paragraph (a.1) of the definition "exempt earnings" in Regulation 5907(1),
- subparagraph (d)(ii) of the definition "exempt earnings" in Regulation 5907(1),
- the preamble, paragraph (c), and the "postamble", of the definition "exempt loss" in Regulation 5907(1),
- the definition "loss" in Regulation 5907(1),

- subparagraph (d)(i) of the definition "net earnings" in Regulation 5907(1),
- subparagraph (d)(i) of the definition "net loss" in Regulation 5907(1),
- paragraph (b) of the definition "taxable deficit" in Regulation 5907(1),
- subparagraphs (b)(i.1), (iv) and (v) of the definition "taxable loss" in Regulation 5907(1), and
- paragraphs 5907(2.7)(a) and (b) of the Regulations.

If a Global Section 95 Election is made by a taxpayer, the amendments to the definitions "exempt earnings" and "exempt loss" in Regulation 5907(1) that implement the new concept of "qualifying member" will apply only for foreign affiliate taxation years that end after 1999. For more detail, see the commentary to the definitions "exempt earnings" and "exempt loss" in Regulation 5907(1).

Note that this set of proposals provides for the possibility of a total revocation of the Global Section 95 Election. If a taxpayer has made what would otherwise be a valid Global Section 95 Election, and the taxpayer has, on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day that is the third anniversary of the day on which the amending legislation enacting this set of proposals is assented to, filed with the Minister of National Revenue a notice in writing to revoke the election, the election is deemed never to have been made. This set of proposals provides that, notwithstanding subsections 152(4) to (5), the Minister of National Revenue can make any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year that is necessary to take the revocation into account.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, December 20, 2001:

Dear [xxx]:

I am writing in reply to your letter dated December 17, 2001, in which you requested amendments in connection with subclause 95(2)(a)(ii)(D)(V) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act").

Clause 95(2)(a)(ii)(D) of the Act generally provides that income derived by a foreign affiliate (the "first affiliate") of a taxpayer from amounts paid or payable by another foreign affiliate (the "second affiliate") of the taxpayer under a legal obligation to pay interest on monies borrowed by the second affiliate to acquire shares in the capital of another foreign affiliate (the "third affiliate") of the taxpayer will be considered active business income (instead of property income) provided that certain conditions enumerated in that clause, and in other provisions in the Act, are satisfied.

You have expressed a concern about the parenthetical phrase "... (the shares of which are excluded property) ..." in existing subclause 95(2)(a)(ii)(D)(V). You argue that the impact of this parenthetical phrase is that, if the second affiliate is a member of a group of corporations that files a consolidated federal income tax return in the United States (or in another jurisdiction having a similar tax system), the share of each member of the consolidated group must qualify as "excluded property". The expression "excluded property" is defined in subsection 95(1) of the Act.

You submit that, for non-income tax reasons, many large corporate groups have, as members of a tax consolidation group, corporations that are largely inactive or that do not carry on an active business. Shares of such corporations would not qualify as excluded property. You argue that this parenthetical phrase would then deny the benefits provided for under clause 95(2)(a)(ii)(D) to the first affiliate even where all or substantially all of the total income of members of that tax consolidation group is active business income.

We agree that the tax results produced under clause 95(2)(a)(ii)(D), as illustrated by your example, are not appropriate based on the existing tax policy. We are therefore prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that clause 95(2)(a)(ii)(D) of the Act be amended to address this issue. We will recommend that the requirements in existing subclause 95(2)(a)(ii)(D)(V) be amended to provide that amounts paid or payable by the second affiliate to the first affiliate in a particular taxation year of the first affiliate will satisfy the requirements of that subclause if those amounts paid or payable are relevant in computing the income or loss for income tax purposes in the foreign country

- of the members of a group of corporations, if the group is composed of the second affiliate and one or more other foreign affiliates of the taxpayer that are resident in, and subject to income taxation in, that country and in respect of which the taxpayer has a qualifying interest throughout the particular year and it is reasonable to conclude that all or substantially all of the total of the incomes and losses of those members for their taxation years that end in the particular year is attributable to incomes and losses from an active business, or
- of the second affiliate, if all or substantially all of the income earned by the third affiliate in the taxation years of the third affiliate that end in the particular year is included in computing the income of the members or shareholders of the third affiliate at the end of those years and is subject to income taxation in that country, the taxpayer has a qualifying interest in the third affiliate throughout the particular year and it is reasonable to conclude that all or substantially all of the total of the incomes and losses of the third affiliate for those years is attributable to incomes and losses from an active business.

If these recommendations are acted upon, I would anticipate that they would be included in the next technical bill.

We will recommend that the amendments apply to taxation years of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer that begin after the date of the release of the draft of the technical bill. However, where the taxpayer so elects in respect of all the foreign affiliates of the taxpayer, the amendments will apply to taxation years of those affiliates of the taxpayer that begin after 1994 and, notwithstanding subsections 152(4) and (5) of the Act, any assessment of a taxpayer's tax payable under the Act for any of those taxation years shall be made that is necessary to take into account the application of the amendments. The ability to elect to have the amendments apply to these earlier taxation years will be contingent on the taxpayer electing to have other amendments to the foreign affiliate rules to be included in the technical bill apply to the taxpayer's foreign affiliates for these earlier taxation years. We cannot provide any more details regarding the election provisions until the release of the draft of the technical bill.

Thank you for writing.

Yours sincerely,

Len Farber
General Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Letter from Dept. of Finance, October 5, 2001:

Dear [xxx]:

I am writing in reply to your letter dated August 15, 2001 (and your follow-up letter dated August 16, 2001) to Mr. Wally Conway in which you requested an amendment to clause 95(2)(a)(ii)(D) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act").

Our understanding of the facts stated in your correspondence is the following:

- US Holdco (a corporation resident in the United States) is a controlled foreign affiliate of Canco (a corporation resident in Canada).
- Finco is also a controlled foreign affiliate of Canco.
- Canco has a qualifying interest (within the meaning of paragraph 95(2)(m) of the Act) in respect of US Holdco and in respect of Finco.

- Canco funds Finco with equity. Finco in turn loans the money to US Holdco, which uses the money to purchase shares of a United States limited liability corporation ("US LLC"). US Holdco becomes the sole shareholder/member of US LLC.
- US LLC carries on an active business for the purposes of the foreign affiliate rules.

In your correspondence, you also note that the facts are such that, if US LLC were "subject to income taxation" in the United States, all relevant requirements of subclause 95(2)(a)(ii)(D) would have been met and the interest income received by Finco from US Holdco would be included in computing the income from an active business of Finco. However, because US LLC is treated for US tax purposes as a flow-through entity and it is thus not directly "subject to income taxation" in the United States, the requirements of subclause 95(2)(a)(ii)(D) are not met and the interest income is not included in the active business income of Finco. You noted that, since US Holdco is the sole shareholder/member of US LLC, US LLC's income is included in computing US Holdco's income in the United States and is subject to income taxation in the United States. You argue that from a Canadian tax policy viewpoint, the scope of subclause 95(2)(a)(ii)(D) should be extended to cover situations where all of the income of the third affiliate (i.e., in your case, US LLC) referred to in that subclause is fully taxable in the country of residence (i.e., the United States) of the third affiliate (i.e., US LLC) and its foreign parent (US Holdco).

We are of the view that a United States limited liability corporation (LLC) that is a flow-through entity for US tax purposes merits treatment similar to that of a corporation that is "subject to income taxation" in the United States only if all or substantially all of the income earned by the LLC is included in computing the income of the members or shareholders of the LLC and is subject to income taxation in the United States under the laws of the United States.

We are therefore prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that subclause 95(2)(a)(ii)(D)(IV) of the Act be amended. The recommended amendment to that sub-subclause would accommodate a "third affiliate" where the affiliate is not subject to income taxation in its country of residence but all or substantially all of the income earned by the affiliate in all the taxation years of the affiliate that end in the taxpayer's taxation year is included in computing the income of the members or shareholders of the affiliate at the end of those years and is subject to income taxation in that country under the laws of that country.

If this recommendation is acted upon, I would anticipate that the amendment would be included in the next technical bill.

We will recommend that the amendment apply to taxation years of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer that begin after the date of the release of the draft of the technical bill. However, where the taxpayer so elects in respect of all the foreign affiliates of the taxpayer that begin after 1994, the amendment will apply to taxation years of those affiliates of the taxpayer that begin after 1994 and notwithstanding subsections 152(4) and (5) of the Act any assessment of a taxpayer's tax payable under the Act for any of those taxation years shall be made that is necessary to take into account the application of the amendment. The ability to elect to have the amendment apply to those earlier taxation years will be contingent on the taxpayer electing to have other amendments to the foreign affiliate rules to be included in the technical bill apply to the taxpayer's foreign affiliates for those earlier taxation years. We cannot provide any more details regarding the election provisions until the release of the draft of the technical bill.

Thank you for writing.

Yours sincerely,

Letter from Dept. of Finance, September 17, 2001: See under Reg. 5907(1)"exempt earnings" (d)(ii).

Letter from Dept. of Finance, February 12, 2001:

Dear [xxx]

We are writing in response to your letter of December 15, 2000.

In your letter you requested that we confirm our willingness to recommend to the Minister of Finance that the Income Tax Act and the related Regulations thereto be amended to ensure that foreign accrual property income or losses (FAPI or FAPL) of a foreign affiliate will not arise on a disposition of excluded property by the affiliate. Currently, gains or losses from the disposition of excluded property that is eligible capital property enter into the calculation of FAPI or FAPL of a foreign affiliate because such gains and losses are not capital gains and losses. You have also requested that we confirm our willingness to recommend that the amendments apply, if so elected by taxpayers in respect of a foreign affiliate, to taxation years of the affiliate beginning in the same year that the definition of "investment business" applies.

After reviewing your submission, we have concluded that amendments to the FAPI and FAPL rules are warranted.

Some amendments are needed to clarify when eligible capital property is to be considered to be excluded property. Eligible capital property that is used or held by a foreign affiliate principally for the purpose of earning income from an active business carried on by it should be considered to be excluded property. Eligible capital property that is not used or held principally for the purpose of earning income from an active business carried on by it should be considered to be excluded property if all the income derived from the property is deemed to be active business income under paragraph 95(2)(a). In any other case, it is not clear to us that it would be appropriate to treat eligible capital property as excluded property.

Other amendments are needed to remove from FAPI or FAPL of a foreign affiliate any income, gains or losses arising from the disposition of excluded property that is not capital property. Consequential amendments to the surplus calculation provisions of the Income Tax Regulations will also be required. Any income, gain or loss arising on the disposition of excluded property that is eligible capital property that is included or deducted in computing the active business income or loss of the foreign affiliate should be included in the exempt earnings or exempt loss of the affiliate and in the exempt surplus or exempt deficit of the affiliate. Adjustments to the exempt earnings and loss definitions will also be required for the non-taxable portion of the gains or losses arising on the disposition of eligible capital property. This occurs because the proceeds of disposition of eligible capital property exceed the resultant eligible capital amount and the cost of eligible property exceeds the resultant eligible capital expenditure.

Income tax amendments are normally made prospectively, and as a consequence, the amendments such as those described above would normally be made effective for taxation years commencing after the announcement date. However, there is some justification for a retroactive application date that would be the same as the effective date for the FAPI and FAPL rules modified in 1994. Taxpayers wishing for the retroactive application date will be expected to perform an election in writing within one year of the announcement date and the election will have to be in respect of all the taxpayer's affiliates.

As requested, we are willing to confirm that we are prepared to recommend to the Minister that amendments be made to the Act and Regulations such as those described above. We are also prepared to recommend an application date as described above.

Thank you for bringing this matter to our attention.

Yours sincerely,
Len Farber

(a.1) [income from sale of property] — in computing the income from a business other than an active business for a taxation year of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer there shall be included the income of the affiliate for the year from the sale of property (which, for the purposes of this paragraph, includes the income of the affiliate for the year from the performance of services as an agent in relation to a purchase or sale of property) where

(i) it is reasonable to conclude that the cost to any person of the property (other than property that was manufactured, produced, grown, extracted or processed in Canada by the taxpayer or a person with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length in the course of carrying on a business in Canada and that was sold to non-resident persons other than the affiliate or sold to the affiliate for sale to non-resident persons) is relevant in computing the income from a business carried on by the taxpayer or a person resident in Canada with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length or is relevant in computing the income from a business carried on in Canada by a non-resident person with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length, and

Proposed Amendment — 95(2)(a.1)(i)

(i) it is reasonable to conclude that the cost to any person of the property (other than property that is designated property and that was sold to non-resident persons other than the affiliate or sold to the affiliate for sale to non-resident persons) is relevant in computing the income from a business carried on by the taxpayer or by a person resident in Canada with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length or is relevant in computing the income from a business carried on in Canada by a non-resident person with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length, and

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 133(9), will amend subpara. 95(2)(a.1)(i) to read as above, applicable to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after December 20, 2002. However, if a taxpayer so elects in writing and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day on which this Act is assented to, the amendment applies to taxation years, of all foreign affiliates of the taxpayer, that begin after 1994.

Technical Notes: Paragraph 95(2)(a.1) includes in the income from a business other than an active business (and thus the foreign accrual property income (FAPI) of a foreign affiliate) of a taxpayer resident in Canada, the income of the affiliate from the sale of property (including the income derived from services as agent provided in relation to a purchase or sale of property) if

- it is reasonable to conclude that the cost to any person of the property (other than property that was manufactured, produced, grown, extracted or processed in Canada by the taxpayer or a person with which the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length in the course of carrying on a business in Canada and that was subsequently sold to non-resident persons other than the affiliate or to the affiliate for sale to non-resident persons) is relevant in computing the income from a business carried on by the taxpayer or a person resident in Canada that does not deal at arm's length with the taxpayer or is relevant in computing the income from a business carried on in Canada by a non-resident person with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length (subparagraph 95(2)(a.1)(i)), and
- the property was not manufactured, produced, grown, extracted or processed in the country under whose laws the affiliate was formed (or continued) and exists and is governed, and the affiliate's business was principally carried on in that country (subparagraph 95(2)(a.1)(ii)).

The rule does not apply where more than 90% of the gross income of the affiliate from the sale of property is derived from sales of property (other than property that falls within the exclusions described above) to persons that deal at arm's length with the affiliate, which, for this purpose, includes a sale of property to a related non-resident corporation for sale by it to arm's length persons. Where the rule applies to the foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, the selling of the property is deemed to be a separate business other than an active business of the affiliate. Any income that pertains to or is incident to that business is also deemed to be income of the affiliate from a business other than an active business of the affiliate.

Subparagraph 95(2)(a.1)(i) is amended to replace the description of the property that is excluded from the application of that subparagraph with a new description for that property. Under the new description, property will qualify for the exclusion if it is "designated property" and was subsequently sold to non-resident persons other than the affiliate or to the affiliate for sale to non-resident persons.

The definition "designated property" is provided in new subsection 95(3.1). Property is designated property if it is property that is described in the "preamble" of paragraph 95(2)(a.1) and that meets one of the three tests set out in paragraphs (a), (b) and (c), respectively, of that definition.

Under the first test (paragraph (a) of the definition), property is designated property if it is

- property that was — in the course of carrying on a business in Canada — manufactured, produced, grown, extracted or processed in Canada by the taxpayer, or by a person with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length, or
- property that was — in the course of a business carried on by a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer outside Canada — manufactured or processed from tangible property that, at the time of the manufacturing or processing, was owned by the taxpayer or by a person related to the taxpayer and used or held by the owner in the course of carrying on a business in Canada, if the manufacturing or processing was in accordance with the specifications of the owner of the tangible property and under a contract between that owner and the foreign affiliate.

Under the second test (paragraph (b) of the definition), property is designated property if it was acquired, in the course of carrying on a business in Canada, by a purchaser from a vendor if

- the purchaser is the taxpayer or is a person resident in Canada with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length, and
- the vendor is a person
  - with whom the taxpayer deals at arm's length,
  - who is not a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, and
  - who is not a foreign affiliate of a person resident in Canada with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length.

Under the third test (paragraph (c) of the definition), property is designated property if it was acquired by a purchaser from a vendor if

- the purchaser is the taxpayer or is a person resident in Canada with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length,
- the vendor is a foreign affiliate of
  - — the taxpayer, or
  - — a person resident in Canada with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length, and
- the property was manufactured, produced, grown, extracted or processed in the country under whose laws the vendor is governed and any of exists, was (unless the vendor was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or was last continued, and in which the vendor's business is principally carried on.

The amendment to subparagraph 95(2)(a.1)(i) applies to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after December 20, 2002. Where the taxpayer elects in writing and files that election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year in which these amendments are assented to, new subparagraph 95(2)(a.1)(i) and the new definition "designated property" in new subsection 95(3.1) apply in respect of all foreign affiliates of the taxpayer for taxations years that end after 1994.

Example 1

Facts:

1. Canco is a corporation resident in Canada.

2. Forco is a controlled foreign affiliate of Canco.

3. XYZ is a corporation resident in Canada with whom Canco deals at arm's length.

4. Forco sells property to arm's length purchasers situated outside Canada. All the gross revenue and income of Forco is derived from the sale of property acquired from Canco. That property was acquired by Canco from XYZ and was manufactured in Canada by XYZ.

Application of paragraph 95(2)(a.1)

Forco's income from the sale of the property that Forco had acquired from Canco would, because of existing paragraph 95(2)(a.1), be included in Forco's income from a business other than an active business and thus the FAPI of Forco. This is because existing subparagraph 95(2)(a.1)(i) exempts property manufactured in Canada only if it was manufactured by Canco or by a person with whom the Canco does not deal at arm's length. In this case, the manufacturer is XYZ, an arm's length corporation.

However, because of amended subparagraph 95(2)(a.1)(i) and paragraph (b) of the definition "designated property" in new subsection 95(3.1), Forco's income from the sale of the property acquired by Forco from Canco will not be recharacterized by paragraph 95(2)(a.1) as income from a business other than an active business.

Example 2

Facts:

1. Canco is a corporation resident in Canada.

2. FA1 is a controlled foreign affiliate of Canco that was formed, exists and is governed under the laws of foreign Country A. FA1's manufacturing business is principally carried on in that country. The gross revenue and income of FA1 is derived from the sale, to Canco, of the property that FA1 manufactures.

3. FA2 is a controlled foreign affiliate of Canco. FA2 was formed, exists and is governed under the laws of foreign Country B. FA2's business is principally carried on in that country. FA2 purchases, from Canco, property that was manufactured in Country A by FA1. FA2 sells the property to purchasers outside of Canada.

Application of paragraph 95(2)(a.1)

The income from the sale of the property acquired by FA2 from Canco would, because of existing paragraph 95(2)(a.1), be included in FA2's income from a business other than an active business and thus the FAPI of FA2. This is because existing subparagraph 95(2)(a.1)(i) exempts property manufactured, produced, grown, extracted or processed in Canada only where the property was manufactured, produced, grown, extracted or processed in Canada by Canco, or by a person with whom Canco does not deal at arm's length. In this case, the property was manufactured outside of Canada by FA1.

However, because of amended subparagraph 95(2)(a.1)(i) and paragraph (c) of the definition of "designated property" in new subsection 95(3.1), FA2's income from the sale of the property acquired by FA2 from Canco will not be recharacterized by paragraph 95(2)(a.1) as income from a business other than an active business.

(ii) the property was not manufactured, produced, grown, extracted or processed in the country under whose laws the affiliate was formed or continued and exists and is governed and in which the affiliate's business is principally carried on,

unless more than 90% of the gross revenue of the affiliate for the year from the sale of property is derived from the sale of such property (other than a property described in subparagraph (ii) the cost of which to any person is a cost referred to in subparagraph (i)) to persons with whom the affiliate deals at arm's length (which, for this purpose, includes a sale of property to a non-resident corporation with which the affiliate does not deal at arm's length for sale to persons with whom the affiliate deals at arm's length) and, where this paragraph applies to include income of the affiliate from the sale of property in the income of the affiliate from a business other than an active business,

(iii) the sale of such property shall be deemed to be a separate business, other than an active business, carried on by the affiliate, and

(iv) any income of the affiliate that pertains to or is incident to that business shall be deemed to be income from a business other than an active business;

(a.2) [income from insurance] — in computing the income from a business other than an active business for a taxation year of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer there shall be included the income of the affiliate for the year from the insurance of a risk (which, for the purposes of this paragraph, includes income of the affiliate for the year from the reinsurance of a risk) where the risk was in respect of

(i) a person resident in Canada,

(ii) a property situated in Canada, or

(iii) a business carried on in Canada

unless more than 90% of the gross premium revenue of the affiliate for the year from the insurance of risks (net of reinsurance ceded) was in respect of the insurance of risks (other than risks in respect of a person, a property or a business described in subparagraphs (i) to (iii)) of persons with whom the affiliate deals at arm's length and, where this paragraph applies to include income of the affiliate from the insurance of risks in the income of the affiliate from a business other than an active business,

(iv) the insurance of those risks shall be deemed to be a separate business, other than an active business, carried on by the affiliate, and

(v) any income of the affiliate that pertains to or is incident to that business shall be deemed to be income from a business other than an active business;

Related Provisions: 95(2)(k.7) — Tiers of partnerships; 95(2)(n) — Deemed FA and deemed qualifying interest; 253 — Whether business carried on in Canada.

(a.3) [income from Canadian debt and lease obligations] — in computing the income from a business other than an active business for a taxation year of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer there shall be included the income of the affiliate for the year derived directly or indirectly from indebtedness and lease obligations (which, for the purposes of this paragraph, includes the income of the affiliate for the year from the purchase and sale of indebtedness and lease obligations on its own account, but does not include excluded income)

(i) of persons resident in Canada, or

(ii) in respect of businesses carried on in Canada

unless more than 90% of the gross revenue of the affiliate derived directly or indirectly from indebtedness and lease obligations (other than excluded revenue) was derived directly or indirectly from indebtedness and lease obligations of non-resident persons with whom the affiliate deals at arm's length and, where this paragraph applies to include income of the affiliate for the year in the income of the affiliate from a business other than an active business,

(iii) those activities carried out to earn such income shall be deemed to be a separate business, other than an active business, carried on by the affiliate, and

(iv) any income of the affiliate that pertains to or is incident to that business shall be deemed to be income from a business other than an active business;

Related Provisions: 95(2)(k.7) — Tiers of partnerships; 95(2)(n) — Deemed FA and deemed qualifying interest; 95(2.4), (2.41) — Application of 95(2)(a.3); 95(2.5) — Definitions for 95(2)(a.3).

Regulations: 7900(1), (2) (prescribed financial institutions); 8201 (meaning of "permanent establishment").

(a.4) [income from partnership debt and lease obligations] — in computing the income from a business other than an active business for a taxation year of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer there shall be included (to the extent not included under paragraph (a.3) in such income of the affiliate for the year) that proportion of the income of the affiliate for the year derived directly or indirectly from indebtedness and lease obligations (which, for the purposes of this paragraph, includes the income of the affiliate for the year from the purchase and sale of indebtedness and lease obligations on its own account) in respect of a business carried on outside Canada by a partnership (any portion of the income or loss of which for fiscal periods of the partnership that end in the year is included or would, if the partnership had an income or loss for such fiscal periods, be included directly or indirectly in computing the income or loss of the taxpayer or a person resident in Canada with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length) that

(i) the total of all amounts each of which is the income or loss of the partnership for fiscal periods of the partnership that end in the year that are included directly or indirectly in computing the income or loss of the taxpayer or a person resident in Canada with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length

(ii) the total of all amounts each of which is the income or loss of the partnership for fiscal periods of the partnership that end in the year

unless more than 90% of the gross revenue of the affiliate derived directly or indirectly from indebtedness and lease obligations was derived directly or indirectly from indebtedness and lease obligations of non-resident persons with whom the affiliate deals at arm's length (other than indebtedness and lease obligations of a partnership described in this paragraph) and where this paragraph applies to include a proportion of the income of the affiliate for the year in the income of the affiliate from a business other than an active business

(iii) those activities carried out to earn such income of the affiliate for the year shall be deemed to be a separate business, other than an active business, carried on by the affiliate, and

(iv) any income of the affiliate that pertains to or is incident to that business shall be deemed to be income from a business other than an active business and for the purpose of this paragraph, where the income or loss of a partnership for a fiscal period that ends in the year is nil, the proportion of the income of the affiliate that is to be included in the income of the affiliate for the year from a business other than an active business shall be determined as if the partnership had income of $1,000,000 for that fiscal period;

Related Provisions: 95(2)(k.7) — Tiers of partnerships; 95(2)(n) — Deemed FA and deemed qualifying interest; 253 — Whether business carried on in Canada.

(b) [services deemed not active business] — where a controlled foreign affiliate of a taxpayer provides services or an undertaking to provide services and

(i) the amount paid or payable in consideration therefor

(A) is deductible in computing the income from a business carried on in Canada by any person in relation to whom the affiliate is a controlled foreign affiliate or by a person related to that person, or

(B) was paid or payable by a person other than the taxpayer and can reasonably be considered to relate to an amount that was deductible by the taxpayer or a person related to the taxpayer in computing the income of that taxpayer or person from a business carried on in Canada, or

(ii) the services are performed or are to be performed by any person referred to in subparagraph (i) who is an individual resident in Canada, the provision of those services or the undertaking to provide those services shall be deemed to be a separate business, other than an active business, carried on by the affiliate, and any income from that business or that pertains to or is incident to that business shall be deemed to be income from a business other than an active business;

Proposed Amendment — 95(2)(b)

(b) [services deemed not active business] — the provision, by a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, of services or of an undertaking to provide services is deemed to be a separate business, other than an active business, carried on by the affiliate, and any income from that business or that pertains to or is incident to that business is deemed to be income from a business other than an active business, if

(i) the amount paid or payable in consideration for those services or for the undertaking to provide those services

(A) is deductible, or can reasonably be considered to relate to an amount that is deductible, in computing the income from a business carried on in Canada, by

(I) any taxpayer of whom the affiliate is a foreign affiliate, or

(II) another taxpayer who does not deal at arm's length with any taxpayer of whom the affiliate is a foreign affiliate, or

(B) is deductible, or can reasonably be considered to relate to an amount that is deductible, in computing the foreign accrual property income of a foreign affiliate of

(I) any taxpayer of whom the affiliate is a foreign affiliate, or

(II) another taxpayer who does not deal at arm's length with any taxpayer of whom the affiliate is a foreign affiliate, or

(ii) the services are, or are to be, performed by

(A) the taxpayer,

(B) a person resident in Canada with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length,

(C) a partnership any member of which is a person described in clause (A) or (B), or

(D) a partnership in which any person or partnership described in any of clauses (A) to (C) has, directly or indirectly, a partnership interest;

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 133(10), will amend para. 95(2)(b) to read as above, applicable to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after December 20, 2002, except that, in applying para. 95(2)(b) to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, that begin after December 20, 2002 and before February 28, 2004, para. 95(2)(b) is to be read as follows:

(b) the provision, by a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, of services or of an undertaking to provide services is deemed to be a separate business, other than an active business, carried on by the affiliate, and any income from that business or that pertains to or is incident to that business is deemed to be income from a business other than an active business, if

(i) the amount paid or payable in consideration for those services or for the undertaking to provide those services

(A) is deductible, or can reasonably be considered to relate to an amount that is deductible, in computing the income from a business carried on in Canada, by

(I) any taxpayer of whom the affiliate is a controlled foreign affiliate, or

(II) another person who is related to any taxpayer of whom the affiliate is a controlled foreign affiliate, or

(B) is deductible, or can reasonably be considered to relate to an amount that is deductible, in computing the foreign accrual property income of a controlled foreign affiliate of

(I) any taxpayer of whom the affiliate is a controlled foreign affiliate, or

(II) another person who is related to any taxpayer of whom the affiliate is a controlled foreign affiliate, or

(ii) the services are, or are to be, performed by

(A) any taxpayer of whom the affiliate is a controlled foreign affiliate and who is an individual resident in Canada, or

(B) another person who is related to any taxpayer of whom the affiliate is a controlled foreign affiliate and who is an individual resident in Canada;

Technical Notes: Paragraph 95(2)(b) provides that if, in any of the specified circumstances referred to in that paragraph, a particular controlled foreign affiliate of a taxpayer provides services (or an undertaking to provide services), the provision of those services (or the undertaking) is deemed to be a separate business, other than an active business, carried on by the particular affiliate and any income from that business or that pertains to or is incident to that business is deemed to be income from a business other than an active business. Such income is therefore included in computing the particular affiliate's foreign accrual property income (FAPI).

The "preamble" of paragraph 95(2)(b) is amended to provide that if, in any of the circumstances referred to in that paragraph, any particular foreign affiliate of a taxpayer (whether or not that affiliate is a controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer) provides services (or an undertaking to provide services), the provision of those services (or the undertaking) is deemed to be a separate business, other than an active business, carried on by the particular affiliate and any income from that business or that pertains to or is incident to that business is deemed to be income from a business other than an active business.

Paragraph 95(2)(b) is amended in three ways.

First, clauses (A) and (B) of subparagraph 95(2)(b)(i) are replaced by new clause (A). That new clause ensures that income will be considered to be income from an business other than an active business of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, if the amount paid or payable in consideration for those services (or the undertaking to provide those services) is deductible, or can reasonably be considered to relate to an amount that is deductible, in computing the income from a business carried on in Canada, by

- any taxpayer of whom the affiliate is a foreign affiliate, or
- another taxpayer who does not deal at arm's length with any taxpayer of whom the affiliate is a foreign affiliate.

Second, a new clause (B) is added to subparagraph 95(2)(b)(i). That new clause ensures that, if a particular foreign affiliate of a taxpayer provides services (or an undertaking to provide services) and the amount paid or payable in consideration for those services (or the undertaking) is deductible, or can reasonably be considered to relate to an amount that is deductible, in computing the FAPI of a foreign affiliate of any taxpayer of whom the particular affiliate is a foreign affiliate or in computing the FAPI of a foreign affiliate of another taxpayer who does not deal at arm's length with any taxpayer of whom the affiliate is a foreign affiliate,

- the provision of those services (or the undertaking) is deemed to be a separate business, other than an active business, carried on by the particular affiliate, and
- any income from that business or that pertains to or is incident to that business is included in computing the particular affiliate's FAPI.

For example, new clause 95(2)(b)(i)(B) provides that, within a corporate group, income that would otherwise be income from an investment business (and therefore included in computing FAPI) of one foreign corporation in the group cannot be converted to active business income by the payment of fees to another foreign corporation in the group for services rendered to that investment business.

Third, subparagraph 95(2)(b)(ii) is amended to ensure that, if a particular foreign affiliate of a taxpayer provides services (or an undertaking to provide services) and those services are, or are to be, performed by a described party,

- the provision of those services (or the undertaking) is deemed to be a separate business, other than an active business, carried on by the particular affiliate, and
- any income from that business or that pertains to or is incident to that business is included in computing the particular affiliate's FAPI.

A described party is

These amendments to paragraph 95(2)(b) apply to taxation years of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer that begin after December 20, 2002 except that, in applying paragraph 95(2)(b) to a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer for taxation years of the foreign affiliate that begin after December 20, 2002 and on or before February 27, 2004, that paragraph is to be read as follows:

(b) the provision, by a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, of services or of an undertaking to provide services is deemed to be a separate business, other than an active business, carried on by the affiliate, and any income from that business or that pertains to or is incident to that business is deemed to be income from a business other than an active business, if

(i) the amount paid or payable in consideration for those services or for the undertaking to provide those services

(A) is deductible, or can reasonably be considered to relate to an amount that is deductible, in computing the income from a business carried on in Canada, by

(I) any taxpayer of whom the affiliate is a controlled foreign affiliate, or

(II) another person who is related to any taxpayer of whom the affiliate is a controlled foreign affiliate, or

(B) is deductible, or can reasonably be considered to relate to an amount that is deductible, in computing the foreign accrual property income of a controlled foreign affiliate of

(ii) the services are, or are to be, performed by

(i) the cost to the disposing affiliate of any property (other than shares of the capital stock of the acquiring affiliate) receivable by the disposing affiliate as consideration for the disposition shall be deemed to be the fair market value of the property at the time of the disposition,

(ii) the cost to the disposing affiliate of any shares of any class of the capital stock of the acquiring affiliate receivable by the disposing affiliate as consideration for the disposition shall be deemed to be that proportion of the amount, if any, by which the total of the relevant cost bases to it, immediately before the disposition, of the shares disposed of exceeds the fair market value at that time of the consideration receivable for the disposition (other than shares of the capital stock of the acquiring affiliate) that

(A) the fair market value, immediately after the disposition, of those shares of the acquiring affiliate of that class

Proposed Addition — 95(2)(c.1)–(c.6)

Technical Notes: New paragraphs 95(2)(c.1) to (c.6) put into place a regime that, in general terms, is intended to suspend the recognition of the capital gain that would have arisen upon an internal disposition by a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada (or a partnership of which the foreign affiliate is a member) of a share of another foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada that is excluded property to the vendor (or would be excluded property to the vendor if the vendor were a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer) if such a disposition would otherwise result in a gain. Generally, this "suspended gain" is recognized when there is an external disposition of the share. See the definitions "specified vendor" and "specified purchaser" in proposed new subsection 95(3.2) to determine when a disposition of a share of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada is an internal disposition. These provisions replace proposed subsections 93(1.4) to (1.6) that were found in the December 20, 2002 proposals.

New paragraphs 95(2)(c.1) to (c.6) will apply to dispositions that occur after December 20, 2002. However, those paragraphs will not apply to a disposition of a share of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada by a vendor

- if the disposition of the share is required to be made under an agreement in writing made by the vendor on or before December 20, 2002, or
- if the disposition of the share occurs on or before February 27, 2004 and a valid election in respect of the vendor is made under subsection 133(40) of the enacting legislation.

Where such an election is made, the special rules set out under subsection 133(40) of the enacting legislation will apply. Generally, a modified version of the proposed subsections 93(1.4) to (1.6) that were part of the December 20, 2002 proposals will apply. For details about the election and about those special rules, see the draft enacting legislation that this commentary accompanies. Note also that this current set of proposals provides that, notwithstanding subsections 152(4) to (5), the Minister of National Revenue can make any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year that is necessary to take such an election into account.

(c.1) [application of para. (c.2)] — paragraph (c.2) applies to a specified vendor, in respect of a particular corporation resident in Canada referred to in the definition "specified vendor" in subsection (3.2), (which specified vendor is referred to in this paragraph and paragraph (c.2) as the "vendor") if

(i) the vendor disposes at any time of a share of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate, of the particular corporation, (which share is referred to in this paragraph, paragraphs (c.2) to (c.4) and subsection (3.3) as the "specified share", which time is referred to in this paragraph and paragraphs (c.2) to (c.4) as the "original disposition time" of the specified share and which foreign affiliate is referred to in paragraphs (c.4) and (c.6) and in subsection (3.3) as the "disposed foreign affiliate") to a person or partnership (referred to in this paragraph as the "purchaser") that is, immediately after that time, a specified purchaser in respect of the particular corporation,

(ii) immediately before the original disposition time, the specified share is excluded property of the vendor (or would be excluded property of the vendor if the vendor were, immediately before the original disposition time, a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation),

(iii) the vendor would, were this Act read without reference to paragraph (c.2), have a taxable capital gain from the disposition of the specified share, and

(iv) none of paragraphs (2)(c), (d) to (e.1) and (e.3) to (e.5) and 88(3)(a) applies to the vendor in respect of the disposition of the share;

Technical Notes: New paragraph 95(2)(c.1) sets out the circumstances under which new paragraph 95(2)(c.2) will apply. Generally, new paragraph 95(2)(c.2) applies to a specified vendor (defined in new subsection 95(3.2)), in respect of a corporation resident in Canada, if:

- the specified vendor disposes of, at any time, a share of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, (referred to here as the "specified share", and which time is referred to here as the "original disposition time" of the specified share and which foreign affiliate is referred to here as the "disposed foreign affiliate") to a person or partnership that is, immediately after that time, a specified purchaser (defined in new subsection 95(3.2)) in respect of the corporation resident in Canada);
- immediately before the original disposition time, the specified share is excluded property of the specified vendor (or would be excluded property of the specified vendor if the specified vendor were, immediately before the original disposition time, a foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada);
- if the Act were read without reference to paragraph 95(2)(c.2), the specified vendor would have a taxable capital gain from the disposition of the specified share; and
- none of paragraphs 88(3)(a) and 95(2)(c), (d) to (e.1) and (e.3) to (e.5) applies to the specified vendor in respect of the disposition of the share.

Related Provisions: 92(1.4) — Determining ACB of share of foreign affiliate; 95(2)(e.1)(ii) — Windup — continuation of affiliate; 95(2)(n) — Deemed FA and deemed qualifying interest; 95(3.2), (3.3) — Definitions; 95(3.6) — Partnerships and trusts.

(c.2) [suspended gain on internal disposition of FA] — if this paragraph applies to a vendor, the following rules apply:

(i) where the vendor is not a partnership, the vendor's proceeds of disposition (determined without reference to subsection 93(1)) from the disposition of the specified share are deemed to be an amount that is equal to

(A) if clause (B) does not apply to the vendor in respect of the disposition, the total of the vendor's adjusted cost base of the specified share and the amount, if any, that would be designated under subsection 93(1) because of subsection 93(1.1) in respect of the specified share if the specified share was disposed of for consideration equal to its fair market value at the original disposition time of the specified share, or

(B) if the vendor is a controlled foreign affiliate of the particular corporation resident in Canada at the end of the vendor's taxation year that includes the original disposition time of the specified share and the particular corporation so elects in respect of the disposition in prescribed manner and within the prescribed time, the greater of

(I) the amount determined by clause (A) in respect of the specified share, and

(II) the amount that is the lesser of the fair market value of the consideration received by the vendor in respect of the disposition and the amount that the particular corporation designates in the election,

(ii) where the vendor is a partnership of which a particular foreign affiliate of the particular corporation referred to in the definition "specified vendor" in subsection (3.2) is a member, for the purpose of computing the particular foreign affiliate's taxable capital gain from the disposition by the partnership of the specified share, the vendor's proceeds of disposition from the disposition of the specified share are deemed to be an amount that is equal to

(A) if clause (B) does not apply to the vendor in respect of the disposition, the total of the vendor's adjusted cost base of the specified share and the amount of a dividend, if any, that would be deemed by subsection 93(1.2) to have been received immediately before the original disposition time because of subsection 93(1.3) in respect of the specified share in respect of the particular foreign affiliate on the assumptions that

(I) the specified share is a share referred to in subsection 93(1.3) in respect of the particular foreign affiliate,

(II) no other share of the disposed foreign affiliate was disposed of at the original disposition time of the specified share,

(III) the particular foreign affiliate was the only member of the partnership, and

(IV) the specified share was disposed of for consideration equal to its fair market value at the original disposition time of the specified share, or

(B) if the particular foreign affiliate is a controlled foreign affiliate of the particular corporation resident in Canada at the end of particular foreign affiliate's taxation year that includes the original disposition time of the specified share and the particular corporation so elects in respect of the disposition in prescribed manner and within the prescribed time, the greater of

(I) the amount determined by clause (A) in respect of the specified share, and

(II) the amount that is the lesser of the fair market value of the consideration received by the vendor in respect of the disposition and the amount that the particular corporation designates in the election,

(iii) the purchaser's cost of the specified share is deemed to be an amount that is equal to the fair market value, at the original disposition time, of the specified share,

(iv) the vendor's cost of a property that was received as consideration for the disposition of the specified share is deemed to be an amount that is equal to the fair market value of the property at the original disposition time of the specified share, and

(v) the vendor that is a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation resident in Canada or a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation resident in Canada that is a member of a partnership that is the vendor (which vendor or foreign affiliate is referred to in this subparagraph and paragraph (c.3) as the "relevant foreign affiliate") is deemed to have an unadjusted suspended gain in respect of a specified share disposed of, at the original disposition time, by the vendor that is equal to twice the amount, if any, by which

(A) the amount that would, but for the application of this paragraph, have been the relevant foreign affiliate's taxable capital gain in respect of that disposition, if the vendor's proceeds of disposition in respect of that disposition were equal to the fair market value of the consideration received by the vendor in respect of that disposition,

exceeds

(B) the amount of the relevant foreign affiliate's taxable capital gain in respect of that disposition;

Technical Notes: New paragraph 95(2)(c.2) sets out various rules that will apply to the specified vendor and the specified purchaser in respect of the corporation resident in Canada. The rules can be summarized as follows:

- Where the specified vendor is not a partnership, the proceeds of disposition (determined without reference to subsection 93(1)) from the disposition of the specified share (referred to in new subsection 95(2)(c.1)) are deemed to be an amount equal to one of the following two amounts:

  — the total of the specified vendor's adjusted cost base of the specified share and the amount, if any, that would be designated under subsection 93(1) because of subsection 93(1.1) in respect of the specified share if the specified share was disposed of for consideration equal to its fair market value at the original disposition time (referred to in new subsection 95(2)(c.1)) of the specified share (such aggregate referred to here as the "specified amount"), or — if the specified vendor is a controlled foreign affiliate of the particular corporation resident in Canada at the end of the specified vendor's taxation year that includes the original disposition time of the specified share and the particular corporation elects in prescribed manner and within the prescribed time (see proposed new section 5915 of the Regulations), the greater of the specified amount and the amount that is the lesser of the fair market value of the consideration received by the specified vendor in respect of the disposition and the amount that the particular corporation designates in the election.

- Where the specified vendor is a partnership of which a particular foreign affiliate of the particular corporation referred to in the definition "specified vendor" in new subsection 95(3.2) is a member, in computing the particular foreign affiliate's taxable capital gain from the disposition by the partnership of the specified share, the specified vendor's proceeds of disposition from the disposition of the specified share are deemed to be an amount that is equal to one of the following amounts:

  — the total of the specified vendor's adjusted cost base of the specified share and the amount of a dividend, if any, that would be deemed by subsection 93(1.2) to have been received immediately before the original disposition time because of subsection 93(1.3) in respect of the specified share in respect of the particular foreign affiliate on the assumptions that the specified share is a share referred to in subsection 93(1.3) in respect of the particular foreign affiliate, no other share of the disposed foreign affiliate was disposed of at the original disposition time of the specified share, the particular foreign affiliate was the only member of the partnership, and the specified share was disposed of for consideration equal to its fair market value at the original disposition time of the specified share (referred to here as the "clause (A) amount"), or — if the particular foreign affiliate is a controlled foreign affiliate of the particular corporation resident in Canada at the end of the particular foreign affiliate's taxation year that includes the original disposition time of the specified share and the particular corporation elects in prescribed manner and within the prescribed time (see proposed section 5915 of the Regulations), the greater of the Clause (A) amount and the amount that is the lesser of the fair market value of the consideration received by the vendor in respect of the disposition and the amount that the particular corporation designates in the election.

- The specified purchaser's cost of the specified share is deemed to be the fair market value at the original disposition time of the specified share.

- The specified vendor's cost of property received as consideration for the disposition of the specified share is deemed to be the fair market value of the property at the original disposition time of the specified share.

- The specified vendor that is a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation resident in Canada or a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation resident in Canada that is a member of a partnership that is the specified vendor (here and in the commentary to paragraph 95(2)(c.3) referred to as the "relevant foreign affiliate") is deemed to have an unadjusted suspended gain in respect of a specified share disposed of, at the original disposition time, by the specified vendor that is equal to twice the amount, if any, by which — the amount of the taxable capital gain that, but for the application of this paragraph, would have been realized by the relevant foreign affiliate in respect of that disposition, if the specified vendor's proceeds of disposition in respect of that disposition were equal to the fair market value of the consideration received by the specified vendor in respect of the disposition,

  exceeds

  — the amount of the taxable capital gain that was realized by the relevant foreign affiliate in respect of that disposition.

(i) the first time, after the original disposition time, that a specified purchaser in respect of the particular corporation that holds, immediately before that first time, the specified share makes a triggering disposition of the specified share, and

(ii) the first time, after the original disposition time, that a specified purchaser in respect of the particular corporation (which specified purchaser is referred to in this subparagraph as the "current holder") that holds, immediately before that first time, the specified share ceases to be a specified purchaser in respect of the particular corporation otherwise than because of a specified discontinuance of the current holder;

Technical Notes: New subsection 95(2)(c.3) deems the specified vendor referred to in paragraph 95(2)(c.1) to have a capital gain from the disposition of the specified share (defined in new paragraph 95(2)(c.1)) equal to the amount of the adjusted suspended gain (see new section 5912 of the Regulations) in respect of the specified share and to have paid to the government of a country an amount equal to the adjusted allocable tax (see new section 5912 of the Regulations) in respect of the adjusted suspended gain at the earlier of

- the first time, after the original disposition time (defined in new paragraph 95(2)(c.1)), that a specified purchaser (defined in new subsection 95(3.2)) in respect of the particular corporation that holds, immediately before that first time, the specified share makes a triggering disposition (defined in new subsection 95(3.3)) of the specified share; and

- the first time, after the original disposition time, that a specified purchaser (the "current holder") in respect of the particular corporation that holds, immediately before that first time, the specified share ceases to be a specified purchaser in respect of the particular corporation otherwise than because of a specified discontinuance (defined in new subsection 95(3.2)) of the current holder.

Technical Notes: New paragraph 95(2)(c.4) provides, for the purpose of paragraph 95(2)(c.3), that — if a specified purchaser (defined in new subsection 95(3.2) and referred to here as a "current holder") in respect of a corporation resident in Canada holds the specified share (defined in paragraph 95(2)(c.1)) and that share is redeemed, acquired or cancelled (otherwise than on a "dividend-like redemption" of that share defined in new subsection 95(3.2)) by the disposed foreign affiliate (defined in new paragraph 95(2)(c.1)) — the specified share is deemed to continue to exist, and the current holder is deemed to continue to hold the share, until the time that the current holder ceases to be a specified purchaser in respect of the corporation resident in Canada otherwise than because of a specified discontinuance (defined in new subsection 95(3.3)) of the current holder.

(c.6) [where specified share exchanged] — for the purpose of paragraph (c.3), where a specified share in respect of a particular corporation resident in Canada is exchanged for another share of the disposed foreign affiliate, the other share is deemed to be the specified share in respect of the corporation resident in Canada;

Technical Notes: New paragraph 95(2)(c.6) provides, for the purpose of paragraph 95(2)(c.3), that if a specified share (described in new paragraph 95(2)(c.1)) in respect of a corporation resident in Canada is exchanged for another share of the disposed foreign affiliate (described in new paragraph 95(2)(c.1)) the other share is deemed to be the specified share in respect of the corporation resident in Canada.

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 133(11), will add paras. 95(2)(c.1) to (c.6), applicable to dispositions that occur after December 20, 2002 (other than dispositions required to be made under an agreement in writing made by a vendor before December 21, 2002), except that if, in respect of all of the foreign affiliates of a taxpayer, the taxpayer so elects in writing and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day on which this Act [the February 27, 2004 draft legislation] is assented to

(a) paras. (c.1) to (c.6) do not apply, in respect of the taxpayer, to dispositions that occur after December 20, 2002 and before February 28, 2004; and

(b) with respect to the dispositions referred to in para. (a), the Act shall, in respect of the taxpayer, be read as though it contained subsecs. 93(1.4) to (1.6) that read as follows:

(1.4) Disposition of foreign affiliate shares — If a specified vendor, in respect of a particular corporation resident in Canada, disposes of a share of the capital stock of a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation to a specified purchaser that would otherwise result in a capital gain to the specified vendor,

(a) the share is deemed not to be excluded property of the vendor unless any of subsection 88(3) or paragraphs 95(2)(c), (d) and (e) applied to the disposition of the share; and

(b) the cost amount of the share to the purchaser is deemed to be equal to the proceeds of disposition of the share to the vendor.

(1.5) Specified vendors — foreign affiliates — A specified vendor referred to in subsection (1.4) is

(a) a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation; or

(b) a partnership of which a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation is a member.

(ii) "predecessor corporation" were read as "predecessor foreign corporation",

(iii) "new corporation" were read as "new foreign corporation or the foreign parent corporation", and

(iv) "adjusted cost base" were read as "relevant cost base";

Proposed Amendment — 95(2)(d)

(d) [foreign merger] — if there has been a foreign merger (within the meaning of subsection 87(8.1)) of two or more predecessor foreign corporations (other than a foreign merger to which paragraph (d.1) applies) to form a new foreign corporation that was, immediately after the foreign merger, a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada, and a particular foreign predecessor corporation to the foreign merger was, immediately before the foreign merger, a foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada, the following rules apply:

(i) each property of the new foreign corporation that was a property of the particular foreign predecessor corporation immediately before the foreign merger is deemed to have been disposed by the particular foreign predecessor corporation to the new foreign corporation for proceeds of disposition equal to

(A) where the property was excluded property of the particular foreign predecessor corporation immediately before the foreign merger, an amount that is equal to the relevant cost base, immediately before the foreign merger, of the property to the particular foreign predecessor corporation, or

(B) in any other case, an amount equal to the fair market value, immediately before the foreign merger, of the property,

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 133(11), will amend para. 95(2)(d) to read as above, applicable to foreign mergers that occur after February 27, 2004.

- the cost of the property to the new foreign corporation, immediately after the foreign merger, is deemed to be equal to the amount so determined to be the particular foreign predecessor corporation's proceeds of disposition of the property,

- each shareholder of the particular foreign predecessor corporation that was, immediately before the foreign merger, a specified vendor in respect of the corporation resident in Canada — is deemed to have disposed, on the foreign merger, of each share of the particular foreign predecessor corporation that, immediately before the foreign merger, was held by the shareholder and was excluded property of the shareholder, for proceeds of disposition that are equal to such amount as the corporation resident in Canada elects, in prescribed manner and within the prescribed time (see proposed section 5916 of the Regulations), in respect of the share, that is not less than the adjusted cost base, immediately before the foreign merger, of the share, to the shareholder and is not more than the fair market value, immediately before the foreign merger, of the share,

— is deemed to have acquired each particular share of the new foreign corporation received on the foreign merger by the shareholder in exchange for a share described in clause (A) for a cost equal to the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the total of all amounts each of which is the proceeds of disposition of a share of the predecessor determined above,

B is the fair market value, immediately after the foreign merger, of the particular share of the new foreign corporation, and

C is the fair market value, immediately after the foreign merger, of all shares of the new foreign corporation received on the foreign merger by the shareholder,

- the new foreign corporation is deemed to be the same person as, and a continuation of, the particular foreign predecessor corporation — for the purposes of paragraphs 95(2)(h) to (h.5), in respect of the disposition of a specified property received on the foreign merger by the new foreign corporation and disposed of, on the foreign merger, to the new foreign corporation by the particular foreign predecessor corporation,

- the taxation year of the particular predecessor foreign corporation that would otherwise include the time of the foreign merger is deemed to have ended immediately before that time, and

- where the fair market value of the share of the predecessor corporation exchanged by the shareholder on the foreign merger exceeds the fair market value of the share of the new foreign corporation received on the foreign merger for the exchanged share and it is reasonable to consider all or any portion of the excess as a benefit that the shareholder desired to have conferred on another shareholder of the new foreign corporation, the amount of the benefit — is deemed to be income from property that is the shares of the new foreign corporation of the other shareholder, and — is to be added to the adjusted cost base of the shares of the new foreign corporation of the other shareholder if they are excluded property.

(A) this subsection and the definition "foreign accrual property income" in subsection (1), with respect to any disposition by the new foreign corporation of property owned by the predecessor corporation immediately before the merger, and

(B) paragraphs (c.1) to (c.6), (f.1) to (f.93) and (h) to (h.5),

(iii) for greater certainty, nothing in this paragraph affects the determination of whether any property of a predecessor foreign corporation is disposed of on a foreign merger other than a foreign merger to which this paragraph applies, and

(iv) subsection 87(4) applies to each foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that, immediately before the merger, owned shares of the capital stock of a predecessor foreign corporation as if the reference in that subsection to

One of these conditions (referred to as the "non-recognition condition") is that no gain or loss was recognized, under the income tax law of the country in which the predecessor foreign corporations were resident, in respect of any capital property of a predecessor foreign corporation that became capital property of the new foreign corporation in the course of the foreign merger.

Paragraph 95(2)(d.1) is amended in a number of ways.

First, paragraph 95(2)(d.1) is amended to provide for the rollover of property (including, but not restricted to capital property) on a foreign merger where certain conditions have been met. In addition, the non-recognition condition is amended to require that no income, gain or loss was recognized, under the income tax law of the country in which the predecessor foreign corporations were resident, in respect of any property of a predecessor foreign corporation that became property of the new foreign corporation in the course of the foreign merger.

Second, the amendments to subparagraph 95(2)(d.1)(ii) treat (for the purposes of paragraphs 95(2)(c.1) to (c.6), (f.1) to (f.93) and (h) to (h.5)) the new foreign corporation as the same corporation as and as a continuation of the predecessor foreign corporation.

Technical Notes: Paragraph 95(2)(e.1) provides for the rollover of capital property on a liquidation and a dissolution of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer where certain conditions have been met. One of these conditions (referred to as the "non-recognition condition") is that no gain or loss was recognized, under the income tax law of the country in which the disposing affiliate was resident, by the disposing affiliate in respect of any property of the disposing affiliate that was distributed by the disposing affiliate in the course of the liquidation to another foreign affiliate, of the taxpayer, resident in that country.

Paragraph 95(2)(e.1) is amended in the following ways.

First, paragraph 95(2)(e.1) is amended to provide for the rollover of property (including, but not restricted to, capital property) on a liquidation and a dissolution of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer where certain conditions have been met.

Second, the non-recognition condition in paragraph 95(2)(e.1) is amended to require that no income, gain or loss was recognized, under the income tax law of the country in which the disposing affiliate was resident, by the disposing affiliate in respect of any property of the disposing affiliate that was distributed by the disposing affiliate in the course of the liquidation and dissolution to another foreign affiliate of the taxpayer. Third, the amendments to subparagraph 95(2)(e.1)(ii) treat (for the purposes of paragraphs 95(2)(c.1) to (c.6), (f.1) to (f.93) and (h) to (h.5)) the shareholder of the disposing affiliate as the same corporation as the disposing affiliate.

Related Provisions: 92(1.4) — Determining ACB of share of foreign affiliate; 93(1.4) — No election allowed on disposing of share of foreign affiliate; 95(1)"foreign accrual property income"B(b) — Inclusion in FAPI; 95(2)(e.2) — Where redemption, acquisition or cancellation deemed to be liquidation and dissolution; 95(2)(f.6)(i) — No rollover where 95(2)(e.1) applies; 95(2)(n) — Deemed FA and deemed qualifying interest.

Proposed Addition — 95(2)(e.2)–(e.6)

(e.2) [application of para. (e.1)] — for the purpose of paragraph (e.1), a redemption, an acquisition or a cancellation of shares of a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada is deemed to be a liquidation and a dissolution of the foreign affiliate, if

(i) the surplus entitlement percentage of the corporation resident in Canada, in respect of the foreign affiliate, immediately before the redemption, acquisition or cancellation, is more than 90%, the surplus entitlement percentage of the corporation resident in Canada, in respect of the foreign affiliate is, immediately after the redemption, acquisition or cancellation, nil, and the foreign affiliate has no issued and outstanding shares immediately after the redemption, acquisition or cancellation, or

(ii) in the course of the redemption, acquisition or cancellation, property that has a fair market value equal to or greater than 90% of the fair market value, immediately before the redemption, acquisition or cancellation, of the property owned by the foreign affiliate is, because of the redemption, acquisition or cancellation, distributed to the shareholders of the foreign affiliate;

Technical Notes: New paragraph 95(2)(e.2) provides that, for the purpose of new paragraph 95(2)(e.1), a redemption, acquisition or cancellation of the shares of a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada will be treated as a liquidation and a dissolution of the foreign affiliate if:

- the surplus entitlement percentage of the corporation resident in Canada, in respect of the foreign affiliate, immediately before the redemption, acquisition or cancellation is more than 90%, and the surplus entitlement percentage of the corporation resident in Canada, in respect of the foreign affiliate is, immediately after the redemption, acquisition or cancellation, nil, and the foreign affiliate has no issued and outstanding shares immediately after the redemption, acquisition or cancellation; or

- in the course of the redemption, acquisition or cancellation, property having a fair market value equal to or greater than 90% of the fair market value, immediately before the redemption, acquisition or cancellation, of the property owned by the foreign affiliate is, because of the redemption, acquisition or cancellation, distributed to the shareholders of the foreign affiliate.

New paragraph 95(2)(e.2) applies to redemptions, acquisitions or cancellations that occur after February 27, 2004 other than a redemption, an acquisition or a cancellation of shares of a holder of shares that are required to be made under an agreement in writing made by the holder on or before February 27, 2004.

(e.3) [rollover to specified purchaser] — if, at a particular time, a shareholder (other than a person resident in Canada), of a foreign affiliate of a particular corporation resident in Canada, that is a specified purchaser in respect of the particular corporation receives (otherwise than in the course of a liquidation and a dissolution of the foreign affiliate or a merger or combination of corporations involving the foreign affiliate) a property from the foreign affiliate as a dividend or distribution on a share of the foreign affiliate, notwithstanding subsection 52(2), the following rules apply:

(i) the foreign affiliate's proceeds of disposition of the property are deemed to be

(A) if the property is excluded property of the foreign affiliate at the particular time, an amount that is equal to the relevant cost base of the property to the foreign affiliate immediately before the particular time, or

(B) in any other case, an amount equal to the fair market value, immediately before the particular time, of the property,

(ii) the cost of the property to the shareholder immediately after the particular time is deemed to be an amount equal to the foreign affiliate's proceeds of disposition of the property determined by subparagraph (i),

(iii) the amount of that dividend or distribution, in respect of the property, is deemed to be equal to the amount of the foreign affiliate's proceeds of disposition of the property determined by subparagraph (i), and

(iv) where, but for this subparagraph, the shareholder would, because of subsection 40(3), have a gain in respect of the share because of the dividend or distribution and the share is excluded property of the shareholder (or would be excluded property of the shareholder if the shareholder were a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation), for the purpose of applying subsection 40(3), the amount prescribed by paragraph 5900(1)(c) of the Regulations to have been paid out of the pre-acquisition surplus of the particular corporation's foreign affiliate from which the property was received, otherwise determined, in respect of the dividend or distribution in respect of the share is deemed to be the lesser of

(A) the amount that, but for this subparagraph, would be so prescribed, and

(B) the amount, not exceeding the amount referred to in clause (A), that the particular corporation elects in prescribed manner and within the prescribed time;

Technical Notes: New paragraphs 95(2)(e.3) to (e.6) put into place a regime that, in general terms, is intended to provide to a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada the possibility of rollover treatment (and avoidance of gains that will be included in foreign accrual property income) for dispositions of excluded property of the foreign affiliate to a specified purchaser in respect of the corporation resident in Canada. A "specified purchaser" in respect of a corporation resident in Canada is defined in proposed new subsection 95(3.2).

Paragraphs 95(2)(e.3) to (e.6) apply to a receipt, after February 27, 2004, by a specified purchaser in respect of the corporation resident in Canada from a foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada of property as a dividend or distribution in respect of a share of the foreign affiliate, or as consideration in respect of a redemption, purchase or acquisition of a share of the foreign affiliate. The paragraphs do not apply where the property was received because of a legal obligation of the foreign affiliate that arose on or before February 27, 2004 to pay the dividend or make the distribution, redemption, purchase or acquisition.

New paragraph 95(2)(e.3) provides for the following rules (notwithstanding subsection 52(2)), if, at a particular time, a shareholder (other than a person resident in Canada), of a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada, that is a specified purchaser (defined in new subsection 95(3.2)) in respect of the corporation resident in Canada receives (otherwise than in the course of a liquidation and dissolution of the foreign affiliate or a merger or combination of corporations involving the foreign affiliate) a property from the foreign affiliate as a dividend or distribution on a share of the foreign affiliate.

- The foreign affiliate's proceeds of disposition of the property are deemed to be:
  - — if the property is excluded property of the foreign affiliate at the particular time, an amount that is equal to the relevant cost base (defined in subsection 95(4)) of the property to the foreign affiliate immediately before the particular time; or
  - — in any other case, an amount that is equal to the fair market value, immediately before the particular time, of the property.
- The cost of the property to the shareholder, immediately after the particular time, is deemed to be an amount equal to the foreign affiliate's proceeds of disposition of the property determined above.
- The amount of that dividend or distribution, in respect of the property, is deemed to be equal to the foreign affiliate's proceeds of disposition of the property determined above.
- Where, but for subparagraph 95(2)(e.3)(iv) (the provision described by this paragraph), the shareholder would, because of subsection 40(3), have a gain in respect of the share of the foreign affiliate on or in respect of which the dividend or distribution was received and the share of the foreign affiliate is excluded property of the shareholder (or would be excluded property of the shareholder if the shareholder were a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation), for the purposes of applying subsection 40(3), the amount prescribed by paragraph 5900(1)(c) of the Regulations to have been paid out of the pre-acquisition surplus of the particular foreign corporation's foreign affiliate from which the property was received, otherwise determined, in respect of the dividend or distribution in respect of the share shall be deemed to be the lesser of:
  - — the amount that, if subparagraph 95(2)(e.3)(iv) did not exist, would be so prescribed; and
  - — the amount — not exceeding the amount that would, if subparagraph 95(2)(e.3)(iv) did not exist, be so prescribed — that the particular corporation elects in prescribed manner and within the prescribed time (see proposed new section 5916 of the Regulations).

(e.4) [rollover to specified purchaser] — if, at a particular time, a shareholder (other than a person resident in Canada), of a foreign affiliate of a particular corporation resident in Canada, that is a specified purchaser in respect of the particular corporation receives (otherwise than in the course of the liquidation and dissolution of the foreign affiliate or a merger or combination of corporations that includes the foreign affiliate) a property from the foreign affiliate as consideration in respect of a dividend-like redemption of a share of the foreign affiliate by the foreign affiliate, the following rules apply:

(i) the foreign affiliate's proceeds of disposition of the property are deemed to be

(A) where the property is excluded property of the foreign affiliate at the particular time, an amount that is equal to the relevant cost base of the property to the foreign affiliate immediately before the particular time, or

(B) in any other case, an amount equal to the fair market value, immediately before the particular time, of the property,

(ii) the cost immediately after the particular time of the property to the shareholder is deemed to be an amount equal to the amount of the foreign affiliate's proceeds of disposition of the property determined by subparagraph (i),

(iii) the property is deemed to have been received by the shareholder as a dividend on the share and the amount of that dividend, in respect of the property, is deemed to be equal to the amount of the proceeds of disposition of the property determined by subparagraph (i),

(iv) if the share is excluded property of the shareholder (or would be excluded property of the shareholder if the shareholder were a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation), the shareholder is deemed to have disposed of the share for proceeds of disposition of an amount equal to the cost amount of the share to the shareholder immediately before the disposition, and

(v) where, but for this subparagraph, the shareholder would, because of subsection 40(3), have a gain in respect of the share referred to in subparagraph (iv) because of the dividend referred to in subparagraph (iii) received by the shareholder in respect of the redemption of the share, for the purposes of applying subsection 40(3), the amount prescribed by paragraph 5900(1)(c) of the Regulations to have been paid out of the pre-acquisition surplus of the foreign affiliate — of the corporation resident in Canada — from which the property was received, otherwise determined, in respect of the dividend referred to in subparagraph (iii) in respect of the share is deemed to be the lesser of

(A) the amount that, but for this subparagraph, would be so prescribed, and

(B) the amount, not exceeding the amount referred to in clause (A), that the corporation resident in Canada elects in prescribed manner and within the prescribed time;

Technical Notes: New subparagraph 95(2)(e.4) provides for the following rules if, at a particular time, a shareholder (other than a person resident in Canada), of a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada, that is a specified purchaser in respect of the corporation resident in Canada, receives (otherwise than in the course of the liquidation and dissolution of the foreign affiliate or a merger or combination of corporations that includes the foreign affiliate) a property from the foreign affiliate as consideration in respect of a dividend-like redemption (defined in subsection 95(3.2)) of a share of the foreign affiliate by the foreign affiliate.

- The foreign affiliate's proceeds of disposition of the property are deemed to be
  - — where the property is excluded property of the foreign affiliate at the particular time, an amount that is equal to the relevant cost base (defined in subsection 95(4)) of the property to the foreign affiliate immediately before the particular time, or
  - — in any other case, an amount equal to the fair market value, immediately before the particular time, of the property.
- The cost of the property immediately after the particular time to the shareholder is deemed to be an amount equal to the amount of the foreign affiliate's proceeds of disposition of the property determined above.
- The property is deemed to have been received by the shareholder as a dividend on the share and the amount of that dividend, in respect of the property, is deemed to be equal to the amount of the foreign affiliate's proceeds of disposition of the property determined above.
- Where the share of the foreign affiliate redeemed is excluded property of the shareholder (or would be excluded property of the shareholder if the shareholder were a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation), the shareholder is deemed to have disposed of the share for proceeds of disposition equal to the cost amount of the share to the shareholder immediately before the disposition.
- Where, but for subparagraph 95(2)(e.4)(v) (the provision described by this paragraph), the shareholder would, because of subsection 40(3), have a gain in respect of the share of the foreign affiliate because of the dividend received by the shareholder in respect of the redemption of the share, for the purposes of applying subsection 40(3), the amount prescribed by paragraph 5900(1)(c) of the Regulations to have been paid out of the pre-acquisition surplus of the foreign affiliate — of the corporation resident in Canada — from which the property was received, otherwise determined, in respect of the deemed dividend described above in respect of the share is deemed to be the lesser of
  - — the amount that, but for subparagraph 95(2)(e.4)(v), would be so prescribed, and
  - — the amount — not exceeding the amount that, but for subparagraph 95(2)(e.4)(v), would be so prescribed — that the corporation resident in Canada elects in prescribed manner and within the prescribed time (see proposed new subsection 5916 of the Regulations).

(e.5) [rollover to specified purchaser] — if, at a particular time, a shareholder (other than a person resident in Canada), of a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada, that is a specified purchaser in respect of the corporation resident in Canada receives (otherwise than in the course of a dividend-like redemption, a liquidation and dissolution of the foreign affiliate or a merger or combination of corporations that includes the foreign affiliate) a property from the foreign affiliate as consideration in respect of a redemption, acquisition or cancellation (in this paragraph referred to as the "particular redemption") of a particular share of the foreign affiliate by the foreign affiliate as part of a redemption, acquisition or cancellation (in this paragraph referred to as the "total redemption") of one or more shares (including the particular share) of the foreign affiliate held by the shareholder, the following rules apply:

(i) the foreign affiliate's proceeds of disposition of the property are deemed to be

(A) where the property is excluded property of the foreign affiliate at the particular time, an amount that is equal to the relevant cost base, immediately before the particular time, of the property to the foreign affiliate, or

(B) in any other case, an amount equal to the fair market value, immediately before the particular time, of the property,

(ii) the cost of the property to the shareholder immediately after the particular time is deemed to be an amount equal to the foreign affiliate's proceeds of disposition of the property determined by subparagraph (i),

(iii) the property is deemed to have been received by the shareholder as proceeds of disposition of shares of the foreign affiliate disposed of by the shareholder in the course of the particular redemption,

(iv) the particular share disposed of to the foreign affiliate because of the particular redemption is deemed to have been disposed of for proceeds that are equal to the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the total of all amounts each of which is the cost, determined in subparagraph (ii), to the shareholder, of a property received by the shareholder as consideration for the disposition by the shareholder of a share or shares of the foreign affiliate redeemed in the course of the total redemption,

B is the total of all amounts each of which the amount of a debt that was owing by the foreign affiliate, or any other obligation of the foreign affiliate to pay an amount that was outstanding, immediately before it was assumed or cancelled, as the case may be, by the shareholder in respect of the total redemption,

(A) where the particular share was held by the shareholder at the time immediately before the commencement of the total redemption, the fair market value, at that time, of the particular share, and

(B) where the particular share was acquired by the shareholder after the commencement of the total redemption, the fair market value, at the time of its acquisition, of the particular share, and

D is the total of

(A) the fair market value, immediately before the commencement of the total redemption, of all shares of the foreign affiliate held by the shareholder before the commencement of the total redemption and redeemed as part of the total redemption while held by the shareholder, and

(B) the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value at the time of acquisition of a share of the foreign affiliate acquired after the commencement of the total redemption by the shareholder and redeemed as part of the total redemption while held by the shareholder, and

(v) any gain from the disposition of a particular share of the foreign affiliate disposed of by the shareholder in the course of the total redemption that, but for this subparagraph, would be a gain from the disposition of excluded property of the shareholder, is deemed to be the lesser of

(A) the amount of the gain as otherwise determined, and

(B) the amount, not exceeding the amount referred to in clause (A), that the corporation resident in Canada elects in prescribed manner and within the prescribed time;

Technical Notes: New paragraph 95(2)(e.5) provides the following rules if, at a particular time, a shareholder (other than a person resident in Canada), of a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada, that is a specified purchaser (defined in new paragraph 95(3.2)) in respect of the corporation resident in Canada receives (otherwise than in the course of a dividend-like redemption (defined in subsection 95(3.2)), a liquidation and dissolution of the foreign affiliate, or a merger or combination of corporations that includes the foreign affiliate) a property from the foreign affiliate as consideration in respect of a redemption, acquisition or cancellation (the "particular redemption") of a particular share of the foreign affiliate by the foreign affiliate as part of a redemption, acquisition or cancellation (the "total redemption") of one or more shares (including the particular share) of the foreign affiliate held by the shareholder.

- The foreign affiliate's proceeds of disposition of the property are deemed to be:
  - if the property is excluded property of the foreign affiliate at the particular time, an amount that is equal to the relevant cost base (defined in subsection 95(4)), immediately before the particular time, of the property to the foreign affiliate; or
  - in any other case, an amount that is equal to the fair market value, immediately before the particular time, of the property.
- The cost of the property to the shareholder immediately after the particular time is deemed to be the foreign affiliate's proceeds of disposition of the property. (Subparagraph 95(2)(e.5)(ii))
- The property is deemed to have been received by the shareholder as proceeds of disposition of shares of the foreign affiliate disposed of by the shareholder in the course of the particular redemption.
- The particular share disposed of to the foreign affiliate because of the particular redemption is deemed to have been disposed of for proceeds that are equal to the amount determined by the formula

where

A is the total of all amounts each of which is the cost, determined in subparagraph 95(2)(e.5)(ii), to the shareholder, of a property received by the shareholder as consideration for the disposition by the shareholder of a share or shares of the foreign affiliate redeemed in the course of the total redemption;

B is the total of all amounts each of which the amount of a debt that was owing by the foreign affiliate, or any other obligation of the foreign affiliate to pay an amount that was outstanding, immediately before it was assumed or cancelled by the shareholder in respect of the total redemption;

C is

- if the particular share was held by the shareholder at the time immediately before the commencement of the total redemption, the fair market value, at that time, of the particular share; and
- if the particular share was acquired by the shareholder after the commencement of the total redemption, the fair market value, at the time of its acquisition, of the particular share.

D is the total of

- the fair market value, immediately before the commencement of the total redemption, of all shares of the foreign affiliate held by the shareholder before the commencement of the total redemption and redeemed as part of the total redemption while held by the shareholder; and
- the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value at the time of acquisition of a share of the foreign affiliate acquired after the commencement of the total redemption by the shareholder and redeemed as part of the total redemption while held by the shareholder.

- Any gain from the disposition of a particular share of the foreign affiliate disposed of by the shareholder in the course of the total redemption that, but for subparagraph 95(2)(e.5)(v) (the provision described by this bullet), would be a gain from the disposition of excluded property of the shareholder, is deemed to be the lesser of:

— the amount of the gain as otherwise determined; and — such amount, not exceeding the amount of the gain as otherwise determined, as the corporation resident in Canada elects in prescribed manner and within the prescribed time (see proposed section 5916 of the Regulations).

(e.6) [application rule for paras. (e), (e.3)–(e.5)] — for the purposes of paragraphs (e) and (e.3) to (e.5), if the shareholder is a partnership, and a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada is, at any time, a member of the partnership, for the purposes of determining the foreign affiliate's income from the partnership

(i) shares of a foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada that are property of the partnership, or are deemed under this paragraph to be property of the partnership, are deemed to be owned at that time by each member of the partnership in a proportion equal to the proportion of the shares that

(A) the fair market value, at that time, of the member's partnership interest in the partnership

is of

(B) the fair market value, at that time, of all partnership interests in the partnership,

(ii) each amount determined under any of paragraphs (e) and (e.3) to (e.5) in respect of the partnership in respect of the shares of the foreign affiliate described in subparagraph (i) is deemed to be the amount determined under that paragraph in respect of the foreign affiliate in respect of those shares, and

(iii) the income, gain or loss derived by the partnership, while the foreign affiliate is a member of the partnership, in respect of the shares deemed by subparagraph (i) to be owned by the foreign affiliate

(A) is to be determined as if the partnership were the foreign affiliate, and

(B) is deemed to be an income or a loss or a taxable capital gain or an allowable capital loss, as the case may be, of the foreign affiliate from the partnership and not to be an income or a loss or a taxable capital gain or an allowable capital loss of any other member of the partnership;

Technical Notes: New paragraph 95(2)(e.6) provides the following rules, for the purposes of applying paragraphs 95(2)(e) and (e.3) to (e.5) for the purposes of determining a foreign affiliate's income from the partnership, if the shareholder of the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada referred to in those paragraphs is the partnership and the foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada is a member of the partnership.

- Shares of a foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada referred to in those paragraphs that are property of the partnership, or are deemed under paragraph 95(2)(e.6) to be property of the partnership, are deemed to be owned at that time by each member of the partnership in a proportion equal to the proportion of the shares that:

— the fair market value at that time of the member's partnership interest in the partnership

is of

— the fair market value at that time of all member's partnership interests in the partnership.

- Each amount determined under any of paragraphs 95(2)(e) and (e.3) to (e.5) in respect of the partnership in respect of the shares of the foreign affiliate deemed above to be owned by a member of the partnership that is a foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada is deemed to be the amount determined under that paragraph in respect of the member in respect of those shares.

- The income, gain or loss derived by the partnership, while a foreign affiliate of the corporation resident in Canada is a member of the partnership, in respect of the shares deemed above to be owned by the foreign affiliate — is to be determined as if the partnership were the foreign affiliate, and — is deemed to be an income or a loss or a taxable capital gain or an allowable capital loss, as the case may be, of the foreign affiliate from the partnership and not to be an income or a loss or a taxable capital gain or an allowable capital loss of any other member of the partnership.

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 133(11), will add paras. 95(2)(e.2) to (e.6), para. (e.2) applicable to redemptions, acquisitions and cancellations that occur after February 27, 2004 other than redemptions, acquisitions or cancellations of shares of a holder of shares that are required to be made under an agreement in writing made by the holder before February 28, 2004; and paras. (e.3) to (e.6) applicable to a receipt, after February 27, 2004, from the foreign affiliate of property as a dividend or distribution on a share of the foreign affiliate, or as consideration in respect of a redemption, purchase or acquisition of a share of the foreign affiliate, other than property received because of a legal obligation, of the foreign affiliate, that arose before February 28, 2004 to pay the dividend or make the distribution, redemption, purchase or acquisition.

(f) [capital gains and losses of foreign affiliate] — except as otherwise provided in this subsection, each taxable capital gain and each allowable capital loss of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer from the disposition of property shall be computed in accordance with Part I, read without reference to section 26 of the Income Tax Application Rules, as though the affiliate were resident in Canada

(i) where that gain or loss is the gain or loss of a controlled foreign affiliate from the disposition of property to which paragraph (c), (d) or (e) or 88(3)(a) applies or from any other disposition of property (other than excluded property), in Canadian currency, and

Proposed Amendment — 95(2)(f) before (ii)

(f) except as otherwise provided in this subsection, each capital gain, capital loss, taxable capital gain and allowable capital loss of a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer from the disposition of property by a person or partnership is to be computed in respect of the taxpayer in accordance with this Part, read without reference to section 26 of the Income Tax Application Rules, as though the affiliate were resident in Canada,

(i) if that gain or loss is the gain or loss of a foreign affiliate from the disposition of property to which any of paragraphs (c), (c.2), (d) to (e), (e.3) to (e.5), (f.4) and 88(3)(a) applies or from any other disposition of property (other than excluded property), in Canadian currency, and

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 133(12), will amend the portion of para. 95(2)(f) before subpara. (ii) to read as above, the opening words applicable to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that end after 1999; and subpara. (i) applicable to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that end after December 19, 2002.

Technical Notes: Paragraph 95(2)(f) sets out rules for computing a taxable capital gain and an allowable capital loss of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada from a disposition of a property. The rules in paragraph 95(2)(f) address the computation of a gain or loss from a disposition of property whether the disposition is made by the foreign affiliate itself or by a partnership of which the foreign affiliate is a member.

That paragraph also provides a relieving provision (contained in that portion of that paragraph that is between subparagraphs (ii) and (iii)) that provides that, in computing any such gain or loss from the disposition of property that was owned by the foreign affiliate at the last time that the foreign affiliate became a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer resident in Canada, there is not to be included such portion of the gain or loss, as the case may be, as can reasonably be considered to have accrued during the period that the foreign affiliate was not a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer resident in Canada or of a person specified in any of subparagraphs 95(2)(f)(iv) to (vii).

Paragraph 95(2)(f) is amended in the following ways:

- The "preamble" of paragraph 95(2)(f) is amended to clarify that the rules in that paragraph apply in respect of the taxpayer in computing the foreign affiliate's capital gains and capital losses from a disposition of property by the affiliate or a partnership. This amendment to paragraph 95(2)(f) will, for example, preclude the recognition of capital gains or capital losses from the disposition of property by a foreign affiliate or a partnership to the extent that the gain or loss can reasonably be considered to have accrued during the period that the affiliate was not a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer or a person or partnership specified in paragraph 95(2)(f). This is relevant for the purpose of computing the tax surpluses and deficits of the affiliate in respect of the taxpayer and computing the affiliate's foreign accrual property income or loss of the affiliate in respect of the taxpayer.

- Subparagraph 95(2)(f)(i) is amended to add references to new paragraphs 95(2)(c.2), (d.1), (e.3) to (e.5) and (f.4). For information about those paragraphs, see the commentaries for those paragraphs.

- The "mid-amble" of paragraph 95(2)(f) is amended to replace the words "owned by the affiliate" with the words "owned by the person or partnership". This amendment addresses situations where the property disposed of was owned by a partnership of which the foreign affiliate of the taxpayer is a member. This amendment also ensures that, in computing a gain or loss from the disposition of property, no portion of the gain or loss, as the case may be, that can reasonably be considered to have accrued during the period that the affiliate was not a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer or of a person specified in subparagraphs 95(2)(f)(iv) to (viii) is included.

- The "mid-amble" of paragraph 95(2)(f) is further amended to delete the words "at the time it last became a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer". This requirement was unnecessary for the operation of paragraph 95(2)(f).

- New subparagraph 95(2)(f)(viii) is added to include, in the listed parties, a partnership, where the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a partnership interest in the partnership owned by a person described in any of subparagraphs 95(2)(f)(iii) to (vii) is greater than or equal to 90% of the fair market value of all partnership interests in the partnership.

The amendments to the "preamble" of paragraph 95(2)(f) apply to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that end after 1999. The amendment to subparagraph 95(2)(f)(i) applies to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that end after December 20, 2002. The amendment to the "mid-amble" of paragraph 95(2)(f) applies to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after December 20, 2002. However, see the commentary to new subsection 95(2.2) for details of an election to apply the amendments to the "mid-amble" of paragraph 95(2)(f) to taxation years, of all foreign affiliates of the taxpayer, that begin after 1994. Note also that the amendments to the "mid-amble" of the paragraph 95(2)(f) are part of the Global Section 95 Election package described [under 95(2)(a) — ed.]

The enactment of new subparagraph 95(2)(f)(viii) applies to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after February 27, 2004.

(ii) in any other case, on the assumption that the currency of the country in which the affiliate is resident or such other currency as is reasonable in the circumstances (in this subparagraph referred to as the "calculating currency") were the currency of

Canada and, where subsection 39(2) is applicable, on the further assumptions that

(A) the reference in that subsection to "the currency or currencies of one or more countries other than Canada relative to Canadian currency" were read as a reference to "one or more currencies other than the calculating currency relative to the calculating currency", and

(B) the references therein to "of a country other than Canada" were read as references to "of a country other than the country of the calculating currency", except that in computing any such gain or loss from the disposition of property owned by the affiliate at the time it last became a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer there shall not be included such portion of the gain or loss, as the case may be, as may reasonably be considered to have accrued during the period that the affiliate was not a foreign affiliate of Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 133(13), will amend the portion of para. 95(2)(f) between subparas. (ii) and (iii) to read as above, applicable to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that end after December 19, 2002. The portion may also, by election, be applicable to taxation years that begin after 1994: see Application note to 95(2)(a) proposed amendments.

If a taxpayer has made what would, but for this paragraph, be a valid election as described above, and the taxpayer has, on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day that is the third anniversary of the day on which the amending Act receives Royal Assent, filed with the Minister of National Revenue a notice in writing to revoke the election, the election is deemed, otherwise than for the purpose of this paragraph, never to have been made.

Notwithstanding subsecs. 152(4) to (5) of the Act, any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year shall be made that is necessary to take an election or revocation referred to above into account.

Technical Notes: See under 95(2)(f) before (ii) above.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, December 18, 2000:

Angelo Nikolakakis, Stikeman Elliott, Toronto

Dear Mr. Nikolakakis:

We are responding to your letters of July 19, July 26 and November 20, 2000 concerning paragraph (b) of the definition "investment business" in subsection 95(1), the interaction of subsection 95(2.2) and paragraph 95(2)(f), and the scope of paragraph 95(2)(a.3) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act").

In your letter of July 26, 2000, you informed us that, in administering subsection 95(2)(f) of the Act, the Canada Customs and Revenue Agency was not applying subsection 95(2.2) of the Act. While the scope of subsection 95(2.2) of the Act appears to encompass paragraph 95(2)(f), the provision is not completely suitable for that paragraph. Consequently, you have requested that we recommend an amendment to the Act that would introduce a new subsection similar to subsection 95(2.2) that would be more suitable for paragraph 95(2)(f) of the Act. You have also requested that we confirm our willingness to recommend such an amendment to the Minister of Finance.

For the reasons cited in your letter, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that the Act be amended to introduce a new subsection which will specifically address the situation outlined in your letter. The effect of this provision would be to treat a non-resident corporation as becoming a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer at the beginning of the non-resident corporation's taxation year in which it last became a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer. This provision would apply where it became a foreign affiliate as a result of an acquisition of shares and it remained a foreign affiliate at the end of the year. It will not apply for the purpose of determining if any taxable capital gain or allowable capital loss realized by the non-resident corporation in that year or a subsequent year may reasonably be considered to have accrued during the period that the non-resident corporation was not a foreign affiliate of the persons described in subparagraphs 95(2)(f)(iii) to (vii) of the Act. It will be recommended that this new provision have application to taxation years of foreign affiliates ending after 1999. . . .

Thank you for bringing these matters to our attention.

Yours sincerely,
Brian Ernewein
Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(iii) the taxpayer,

(iv) any person with whom the taxpayer was not dealing at arm's length,

(v) any person with whom the taxpayer would not have been dealing at arm's length if the person had been in existence after the taxpayer came into existence,

(vi) any predecessor corporation (within the meaning assigned by subsection 87(1)) of the taxpayer or of a person described in subparagraph (iv) or (v), or

(vii) any predecessor corporation (within the meaning assigned by paragraph 87(2)(l.2)) of the taxpayer or of a person described in subparagraph (iv) or (v);

Proposed Addition — 95(2)(f)(viii)

(viii) a partnership if the total of all amounts each of which is the fair market value of a partnership interest in the partnership owned by a person described in any of subparagraphs (iii) to (vii) is greater than or equal to 90% of the fair market value of all partnership interests in the partnership;

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 133(14), will add subpara. 95(2)(f)(viii), applicable to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after February 27, 2004.

Technical Notes: See under 95(2)(f) before (ii) above.

Related Provisions: 92(1.4) — Determining ACB of share of foreign affiliate; 95(2)(n) — Deemed FA and deemed qualifying interest.

Regulations: 5903(1), (3) (deductible loss); 5907(5) (capital gain rules to be used).

Proposed Addition — 95(2)(f.1)–(f.94)

(f.1) [income to be computed in Canadian currency] — the income or loss of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer from property, or the income or loss of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer from a business other than an active business, is to be computed in respect of the taxpayer as if

(i) the foreign affiliate were resident in Canada,

(ii) the Act were read without reference to subsections 14(1.01) to (1.03), 17(1) and 18(4) and section 91,

(iii) the income or loss were computed in Canadian currency, and

(iv) there were not included in computing the income or loss the portion of the income or loss that can reasonably be considered to have been realized or to have accrued during any period throughout which the affiliate was not a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, of a person described in any of subparagraphs (f)(iii) to (vii) or of a partnership described in subparagraph (f)(viii);

Technical Notes: New paragraph 95(2)(f.1) provides rules that apply in computing the income or loss of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer from property, or the income or loss from a business other than an active business of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada, in respect of the taxpayer. The rules can be summarized as follows:

- the income or loss is computed in respect of the taxpayer in Canadian currency, as though the foreign affiliate were resident in Canada and as though the Act were read without reference to subsections 14(1.01) to (1.03), 17(1) and 18(4) and section 91, and
- the income or loss is to be computed as if it does not include any income or loss that can reasonably be considered to have been realized or to have accrued during any period throughout which the affiliate was not a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer or of another person or partnership described in any of subparagraphs 95(2)(f)(iii) to (viii).

Related rules can be found in proposed new paragraphs 95(2)(f.91) to (f.93).

For details about new amended subsection 14(1.01) and new subsections 14(1.02) and (1.03), see the commentary to those subsections.

New paragraph 95(2)(f.1) applies to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after December 20, 2002, except that for those taxation years that begin on or before February 27, 2004, subparagraph 95(2)(f.1)(iv) is to be read as follows:

(iv) there were not included in computing the income or loss the portion of the income or loss that can reasonably be considered to have been realized or to have accrued during any period throughout which the affiliate was not a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer or of a person described in any of subparagraphs (f)(iii) to (vii);

Note that new paragraph 95(2)(f.1) is part of the Global Section 95 Election package described [under 95(2)(a) — ed.]

Related Provisions: 95(2)(e.1)(ii) — Windup — continuation of affiliate; 95(2)(f.2) — Certain income to be computed in foreign currency; 95(2)(n) — Deemed FA and deemed qualifying interest.

(f.2) [certain income to be computed in foreign currency] — the income or loss of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer arising from the disposition of excluded property that is not a capital property (other than a disposition of property to which any of paragraphs (d) to (e.1), (e.3) to (e.5) and (f.4) and 88(3)(a) applies) is to be computed in respect of the taxpayer in the currency of the country in which the affiliate is resident or in another currency that is reasonable in the circumstances;

Technical Notes: New paragraph 95(2)(f.2) provides that the income or loss of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer arising from the disposition of excluded property which is not capital property (other than a disposition of property to which any of paragraphs 95(2)(d) to (e.1), (e.3) to (e.5) and (f.4) and 88(3)(a) of the Act applies) is to be computed in respect of the taxpayer in the currency of the country in which the foreign affiliate is resident or in another currency that is reasonable in the circumstances. (The expression "excluded property" is defined in subsection 95(1).) The calculations provided for in new paragraph 95(2)(f.2) are comparable to those provided for in the rule in subsection 5907(6) of the Regulations.

New subparagraph 95(2)(f.2) applies to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after December 20, 2002.

Note that new paragraph 95(2)(f.2) is part of the Global Section 95 Election package described [under 95(2)(a) — ed.]

Related Provisions: 95(2)(e.1)(ii) — Windup — continuation of affiliate; 95(2)(n) — Deemed FA and deemed qualifying interest.

(f.3) [application of para. (f.4)] — paragraph (f.4) applies to a specified vendor, in respect of a particular corporation resident in Canada referred to in the definition "specified vendor" in subsection (3.2), (which specified vendor is referred to in this paragraph and paragraphs (f.4), (f.8) and (f.9) as the "vendor") if

(i) the vendor disposes at any time of a property (which property is referred to in this paragraph and paragraphs (f.4) and (f.5) and (f.7) to (f.9) as the "specified property" and which time is referred to in this paragraph and paragraphs (f.4), (f.5), (f.8) and (f.9) as the "original disposition time" of the specified property) to a person or partnership (in this paragraph referred to as the "purchaser") that is, immediately after that time, a specified purchaser in respect of the particular corporation,

(ii) immediately before the original disposition time, the specified property is excluded property of the vendor (or would be excluded property of the vendor if the vendor were, immediately before the original disposition time, a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation), and

(iii) the vendor would, were this Act read without reference to paragraph (f.4), have income or a taxable capital gain from the disposition of the specified property;

Technical Notes: New paragraphs 95(2)(f.3) to (f.9) put into place a regime that, in general terms, is designed to suspend the recognition of the income or capital gain that would otherwise arisen upon an internal disposition of an excluded property. Generally, this "suspended gain" is recognized at the time the property is disposed of in an external disposition. This regime replaces the rules found in existing subsection 5907(5.1) of the Regulations and the rules found in proposed subsections 5907(5.1) to (5.3) of the Regulations that were part of the December 20, 2002 proposals.

New paragraphs 95(2)(f.3) to (f.9) will apply to dispositions of property that occur after February 27, 2004. However, those paragraphs will not apply to a disposition by a vendor that is required to be made under an agreement in writing made by the vendor on or before February 27, 2004.

New paragraph 95(2)(f.3) provides the circumstances under which new paragraph 95(2)(f.4) applies to a specified vendor (defined in new subsection 95(3.2)) in respect of a particular corporation resident in Canada if the following conditions are met:

- the specified vendor disposes at any time of a property that, at that time, is excluded property of the vendor (or would be excluded property of the vendor if the vendor were, at that time, a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation) to a person or partnership that is, immediately after that time, a specified purchaser (defined in new subsection 95(3.2)) in respect of the particular corporation, and
- if this Act were read without reference to paragraph 95(2)(f.4), the specified vendor would have income or a taxable capital gain from the disposition of the property.

In new paragraphs 95(2)(f.4) and (f.5) and (f.7) to (f.9), the specified vendor is referred to as the "vendor", the time of the disposition of the excluded property is referred to as the "original disposition time" and the property is referred to as the "specified property".

Related Provisions: 95(2)(e.1)(ii) — Windup — continuation of affiliate; 95(2)(f.6)(i) — Exclusion of para. (f.3); 95(2)(f.7) — Designated replacement property deemed continuation of specified property; 95(2)(f.8) — Where part of specified property disposed of; 95(2)(f.9) — Designated replacement property acquired by specified purchaser; 95(2)(n) — Deemed FA and deemed qualifying interest; 95(3.2), (3.4) — Definitions; 95(3.6) — Partnerships and trusts.

(f.4) [suspended gain on internal disposition of excluded property] — if this paragraph applies to a vendor in respect of a particular disposition of specified property referred to in paragraph (f.3), the following rules apply:

(i) the vendor's proceeds from the disposition of the specified property are deemed to be

(A) if clause (B) does not apply to the vendor in respect of the disposition, an amount equal to the vendor's adjusted cost base of the specified property at the original disposition time, or

(B) if the vendor that is a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation resident in Canada is a controlled foreign affiliate of the particular corporation resident in Canada at the end of that vendor's taxation year that includes the original disposition time of the specified property and the particular corporation so elects in respect of the disposition in prescribed manner and within the prescribed time, the greater of

(I) the amount determined by clause (A) in respect of the specified property, and

(II) the amount that is the lesser of the fair market value of the consideration received by that vendor in respect of the disposition and the amount that the particular corporation designates in the election,

(ii) the purchaser's cost of the specified property is deemed to be an amount that is equal to the fair market value of the specified property at the original disposition time,

(iii) the vendor's cost of a particular property that was received as consideration for the disposition of the specified property is deemed to be the fair market value of the particular property at the original disposition time, and

(iv) the vendor that is a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation resident in Canada or a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation resident in Canada that is a member of a partnership that is the vendor (which vendor or foreign affiliate is referred to in this subparagraph and subparagraph (f.5) as the "relevant foreign affiliate") is deemed to have an unadjusted suspended income or gain in respect of a specified property disposed of, at the original disposition time, by the specified vendor that is equal to the amount, if any, by which

(A) the amount that is the income or twice the amount of the taxable capital gain, as the case may be, that, but for the application of this paragraph, would have been realized by the relevant foreign affiliate in respect of that disposition,

(B) the amount that is the income or twice the amount of the taxable capital gain, as the case may be, that was realized by the relevant foreign affiliate in respect of that disposition;

Technical Notes: New paragraph 95(2)(f.4) sets out rules that apply to a vendor and a purchaser in respect of a particular disposition of specified property referred to in new paragraph 95(2)(f.3). In new paragraph 95(2)(f.4), the specified vendor is referred to as the "vendor", the time of the disposition of the excluded property is referred to as the "original disposition time" and the property is referred to as the "specified property". The rules can be summarized as follows:

- The vendor's proceeds from the disposition of the specified property are deemed to be equal to the vendor's adjusted cost base of the specified property at the original disposition time (referred to in here in this commentary as the "relevant ACB amount") or, if the vendor that is a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation resident in Canada is a controlled foreign affiliate of the particular corporation resident in Canada at the end of that vendor's taxation year that includes the original disposition time of the specified property and the particular corporation resident in Canada so elects in prescribed manner and within the prescribed time (see proposed new section 5916 of the Regulations), the proceeds from the disposition of the property can be equal to an amount greater than the relevant ACB amount, but cannot exceed the fair market value of the specified property at the original disposition time.
- The cost to the purchaser of the specified property is deemed to be equal to the fair market value of the specified property at the original disposition time.
- The cost to the vendor of a particular property that was received as consideration for the disposition of the specified property is deemed to be the fair market value of the particular property at the original disposition time.
- The foreign affiliate of the particular corporation resident in Canada that is the vendor or that is a member of a partnership that is the vendor (which foreign affiliate is referred to in subparagraph 95(2)(f.4)(iv) and in paragraph 95(2)(f.5) as the "relevant foreign affiliate") is deemed to have an unadjusted suspended income or gain in respect of a specified property disposed of, at the original disposition time, equal to the amount, if any, by which
  - the amount that is the income or twice the amount of the taxable capital gain, as the case may be, that, but for the application of this paragraph, would have been realized by the relevant foreign affiliate in respect of that disposition,

  exceeds

  - the amount that is the income or twice the amount of the taxable capital gain, as the case may be, that was realized by the relevant foreign affiliate in respect of that disposition.

(f.4) to apply; 95(2)(f.5) — Deemed gain later; 95(2)(f.7) — Designated replacement property deemed continuation of specified property; 95(2)(f.8) — Where part of specified property disposed of; 95(2)(f.9) — Designated replacement property acquired by specified purchaser; 95(2)(n) — Deemed FA and deemed qualifying interest; 95(3.2), (3.4) — Definitions; 95(3.6) — Partnerships and trusts.

Regulations: 5907(2.01) (determining earnings derived from disposition); 5917 (prescribed manner of making election under 95(2)(f.4)).

(f.5) [deemed gain later] — the relevant foreign affiliate referred to in subparagraph (f.4)(iv) is deemed to have income or a capital gain from the disposition of the specified property equal to the amount prescribed to be the adjusted suspended income or gain in respect of the specified property and to have paid to the government of a country an amount equal to the amount prescribed to be the adjusted allocable tax in respect of the adjusted suspended income or gain in respect of the specified property at the earlier of

(i) the first time, after the original disposition time, that a specified purchaser in respect of the particular corporation that holds, immediately before that first time, the specified property makes a triggering disposition of the specified property, and

(ii) the first time, after the original disposition time, that a specified purchaser in respect of the particular corporation (which specified purchaser is referred to in this paragraph and paragraphs (f.8) and (f.9) as the "current holder") that holds, immediately before that first time, the specified property ceases to be a specified purchaser in respect of the particular corporation otherwise than because of a specified discontinuance of the current holder;

Technical Notes: New paragraph 95(2)(f.5) deems the relevant foreign affiliate referred to in subparagraph 95(2)(f.4)(iv) to have income or a taxable capital gain from the disposition of the specified property equal to the amount prescribed to be the adjusted suspended income or gain (see proposed new subsection 5913(1) of the Regulations) in respect of the specified property and to have paid to the government of a country an amount equal to the amount prescribed by regulation to be the adjusted allocable tax (see proposed new subsection 5913(2) of the Regulations) in respect of the adjusted suspended income or gain in respect of the specified property at the earlier of

- the first time, after the original disposition time, that a specified purchaser in respect of the particular corporation that holds, immediately before that first time, the specified property and makes a triggering disposition (see definition in subsection 95(3.4)) of the specified property, or
- the first time, after the original disposition time, that a specified purchaser in respect of the particular corporation (which specified purchaser is referred to here and in paragraphs 95(2)(f.8) and (f.9) as the "current holder") that holds, immediately before that first time, the specified property, and ceases, at that first time, to be a specified purchaser in respect of the particular corporation otherwise than because of a specified discontinuance of the current holder.

Regulations: 5913(1) (amount prescribed to be adjusted suspended income or gain); 5913(2) (amount prescribed to be adjusted allocable tax).

(f.6) [exclusion of para. (f.3)] — paragraph (f.3) does not apply to a disposition of a property by a person or partnership if

(i) any of paragraphs (2)(c), (c.2), (d), (d.1) (e), (e.1), and (e.3) to (e.5) and subsections 85.1(5) and 88(3) applies to the person or partnership in respect of the disposition of the property, or

(ii) the property was disposed of

(A) in the ordinary course of an active business of the person or partnership, or

(B) as an adventure or concern in the nature of trade;

Technical Notes: New paragraph 95(2)(f.6) ensures that paragraph 95(2)(f.3) will not apply to a disposition of a property by a person or partnership if

- any of subsections 85.1(5) and 88(3) and paragraphs 95(2)(c), (c.2), (d), (d.1), (e), (e.1), (e.3), (e.4) and (e.5) applies to the person or partnership in respect of the disposition of the property, or
- the property was disposed of in the ordinary course of an active business of the person or partnership or was disposed of as an adventure or concern in the nature of trade.

Related Provisions: 95(2)(e.1)(ii) — Windup — continuation of affiliate; 95(2)(f.7) — Designated replacement property deemed continuation of specified property; 95(2)(f.8) — Where part of specified property disposed of; 95(2)(f.9) — Designated replacement property acquired by specified purchaser; 95(2)(n) — Deemed FA and deemed qualifying interest; 95(3.2), (3.4) — Definitions; 95(3.6) — Partnerships and trusts.

(f.7) [designated replacement property deemed continuation of specified property] — for the purposes of paragraphs (f.3) to (f.6) and (f.8) and (f.9) and subsection (3.4), a designated replacement property referred to in clause (b)(ii)(A), (B) or (C) of the definition "triggering disposition" in subsection (3.4) is deemed to be the same property as and a continuation of the specified property referred to in that clause;

Technical Notes: New paragraph 95(2)(f.7) provides that for the purposes of paragraphs 95(2)(f.3) to (f.6) and (f.8) and (f.9) and subsection 95(3.4), a designated replacement property referred to in clause (b)(ii)(A), (B) or (C) of the definition "triggering disposition" in new subsection 95(3.4) is deemed to be the same property as the specified property referred to in that clause.

Related Provisions: 95(2)(e.1)(ii) — Windup — continuation of affiliate; 95(2)(f.8) — Where part of specified property disposed of; 95(2)(f.9) — Designated replacement property acquired by specified purchaser; 95(2)(n) — Deemed FA and deemed qualifying interest; 95(3.2), (3.4) — Definitions; 95(3.6) — Partnerships and trusts.

(f.8) [where part of specified property disposed of] — for the purposes of paragraphs (f.3) to (f.7) and (f.9) and subsection (3.4), if, at any time, part of a specified property (which specified property is referred to in this paragraph as the "initial specified property") is disposed of by a current holder and the remaining part of the specified property is retained by the current holder,

(i) the part (referred to in this paragraph as the "part interest") of the initial specified property disposed of, at that time, is deemed to be a specified property of the current holder,

(ii) the portion of the unadjusted suspended income or gain attributable to the part interest is deemed to be that proportion of the adjusted suspended income or gain in respect of the whole of the initial specified property that the fair market value at that time of the part interest is of the fair market value at that time of the initial specified property,

(iii) the part (referred to in this paragraph as the "remaining interest") of the initial specified property not disposed of at that time is deemed to be a specified property of the current holder that was disposed of at the original disposition time, and

(iv) the amount of income or gain that would have been realized on the disposition of the remaining interest at the original disposition time is deemed to be the amount, if any, by which the unadjusted suspended income or gain in respect of the initial specified property exceeds the amount determined by subparagraph (ii) to be the unadjusted suspended income or gain in respect of the part interest;

Technical Notes: New paragraph 95(2)(f.8) provides that for the purposes of paragraph 95(2)(f.3) to (f.7) and (f.9) and subsection 95(3.4), where, at any time, part of a specified property (referred to here as the "initial specified property") is disposed of by a current holder (defined in new paragraph 95(2)(f.5)) and the remaining part of the specified property is retained by the current holder, the following rules apply:

- The part (referred to here as the "part interest") of the initial specified property disposed of, at that time, is deemed to be a specified property of the current holder.
- The portion of the unadjusted suspended income or gain attributable to the part interest is deemed to be that proportion of the adjusted suspended income or gain in respect of the whole of the initial specified property that the fair market value at that time of the part interest is of the fair market value at that time of the initial specified property.
- The part (referred to here as the "remaining interest") of the initial specified property not disposed of at that time is deemed to be a specified property of the current holder that was disposed of at the original disposition time.
- The amount of income or gain that would have been realized on the disposition of the remaining interest at the original disposition time is deemed to be the amount, if any, by which the unadjusted suspended income or gain in respect of the initial specified property exceeds the amount determined to be the unadjusted suspended income or gain in respect of the part interest.

Related Provisions: 95(2)(e.1)(ii) — Windup — continuation of affiliate; 95(2)(f.7) — Designated replacement property deemed continuation of specified property; 95(2)(f.9) — Designated replacement property acquired by specified purchaser; 95(2)(n) — Deemed FA and deemed qualifying interest; 95(3.4) — Definitions; 95(3.6) — Partnerships and trusts.

(f.9) [replacement of specified property] — for the purposes of paragraphs (f.3) to (f.8), if a current holder disposes, at a particular time, of the whole of a specified property (referred to in this paragraph as the "initial specified property") and as part of a transaction, or series of transactions or events, that includes the disposition of the initial specified property, a specified purchaser in respect of the particular corporation acquires a designated replacement property in respect of the initial specified property,

(i) the designated replacement property (referred to in this paragraph as the "remaining interest") is deemed to be a specified property of the current holder that was disposed of at the original disposition time,

(ii) the unadjusted suspended income or gain in respect of the remaining interest is deemed to be that proportion of the unadjusted suspended income or gain in respect of the whole of the initial specified property (determined without reference to subparagraph (iii)) that the fair market value of the remaining interest, at the time it was acquired, is of the fair market value, at the particular time, of the initial specified property, and

(iii) the unadjusted suspended income or gain in respect of the initial specified property is deemed to be the amount, if any, by which the unadjusted suspended income or gain in respect of the initial specified property (determined without reference to this subparagraph) exceeds the amount determined by subparagraph (ii) to be the unadjusted suspended income or gain in respect of the remaining interest;

Technical Notes: New paragraph 95(2)(f.9) provides that for the purposes of paragraphs 95(2)(f.3) to (f.8), if a current holder (defined in new paragraph 95(2)(f.5)) disposes, at any particular time, of the whole of a specified property (referred to here as the "initial specified property") and as part of a transaction, or series of transactions or events, that includes the disposition of the initial specified property, a specified purchaser (defined in new subsection 95(3.2)) in respect of the particular corporation acquires a designated replacement property (referred to here as the "remaining interest") in respect of the initial specified property, the following rules apply:

- The remaining interest is deemed to be a specified property of the current holder that was disposed of at the original disposition time. (Subparagraph 95(2)(f.9)(i))
- The unadjusted suspended income or gain in respect of the remaining interest is deemed to be that portion of the unadjusted suspended income or gain in respect of the whole of the initial specified property (determined without reference to subparagraph 95(2)(f.9)(iii)) that the fair market value of the remaining interest, at the time it was acquired, is of the fair market value, at the particular time, of the initial specified property. (Subparagraph 95(2)(f.9)(ii))
- The unadjusted suspended income or gain in respect of the initial specified property is deemed to be the amount, if any, by which the unadjusted suspended income or gain in respect of the initial specified property (determined without reference to subparagraph 95(2)(f.9)(iii)) exceeds the amount determined by subparagraph 95(2)(f.9)(ii) to be the unadjusted suspended income or gain in respect of the remaining interest. (Subparagraph 95(2)(f.9)(iii))

(f.91) [eligible capital property and depreciable property] — if, at a particular time, a non-resident corporation that, immediately before the particular time, was not a foreign affiliate of a particular taxpayer resident in Canada, or of a person or partnership that would — if the particular taxpayer were a taxpayer referred to in paragraphs (2)(f)(iii) to (viii) — be described by any of those subparagraphs (the particular taxpayer or each of those persons or partnerships being referred to in this paragraph and paragraphs (f.92), (f.93) and (f.94) as a "particular Canadian shareholder", the non-resident corporation being referred to in this paragraph and paragraph (f.92) as a "particular foreign affiliate" in respect of the particular Canadian shareholder and the particular time being referred to in this paragraph and paragraph (f.92) as the "status change time" in respect of the particular foreign affiliate of the particular Canadian shareholder) becomes a foreign affiliate of the particular Canadian shareholder, the following rules apply in computing the particular foreign affiliate's foreign accrual property income in respect of the particular Canadian shareholder or a person or partnership that would — if the person or partnership were a taxpayer referred to in subparagraphs (2)(f)(iii) to (viii) — be described by any of those subparagraphs (the particular Canadian shareholder or each of those persons or partnerships is referred to in paragraph (f.92) as a "relevant shareholder") for any taxation year of the particular foreign affiliate that ends after the status change time:

(i) for the purpose of determining the cumulative eligible capital of the particular foreign affiliate, at the beginning of its taxation year that includes the status change time in respect of the particular foreign affiliate in respect of the particular Canadian shareholder, in respect of each business other than an active business carried on by the particular foreign affiliate in that taxation year, the particular foreign affiliate is deemed to have disposed, immediately before the beginning of that taxation year, of each eligible property at that time of the particular foreign affiliate in respect of each business carried on by the particular foreign affiliate that is, at that time, a business other than an active business, for proceeds equal to the cost to the particular foreign affiliate of the eligible property at the time of that disposition,

(ii) for the purpose of determining the cost of eligible property to the particular foreign affiliate, and the cumulative eligible capital of the particular foreign affiliate, for its taxation year that includes the status change time in respect of the particular foreign affiliate in respect of the particular Canadian shareholder and for each subsequent taxation year, in respect of each business other than an active business carried on by the particular foreign affiliate in that taxation year or subsequent taxation year, the particular foreign affiliate is deemed to have acquired, immediately after the beginning of its particular taxation year that includes the status change time in respect of the particular foreign affiliate in respect of the particular Canadian shareholder, each eligible property of the particular foreign affiliate, immediately before the beginning of the particular year, in respect of each business carried on by the particular foreign affiliate that is immediately before the beginning of the particular year a business, other than an active business, at a cost equal to the lesser of

(A) the fair market value of the eligible property at the status change time, and

(B) the cost to the particular foreign affiliate of the eligible property immediately before the beginning of the particular year,

(iii) eligible property, in respect of a business carried on by the particular foreign affiliate, means a property, right or thing in respect of which the particular foreign affiliate has, after 1971 and before the status change time, made an eligible capital expenditure in respect of the business,

(iv) for the purpose of determining the undepreciated capital cost to the particular foreign affiliate, at the beginning of its taxation year that includes the status change time in respect of the particular foreign affiliate in respect of the particular Canadian shareholder, of its depreciable capital property used or held in the course of carrying on a business, other than an active business, of the particular foreign affiliate in that taxation year,

(A) the particular foreign affiliate is deemed to have disposed, immediately before the beginning of that taxation year, of each depreciable capital property of the particular foreign affiliate, held by the particular foreign affiliate and used or held in the course of carrying on a business of the particular foreign affiliate that is a business other than an active business immediately before the beginning of that year, for proceeds equal to the capital cost to the particular foreign affiliate of the depreciable property at the beginning of that year, and

(B) at the time that is immediately after the time of that disposition, the particular foreign affiliate's undepreciated capital cost of its depreciable capital property, in respect of each such business that is a business other than an active business, is deemed to be nil, and

(v) for the purpose of determining the capital cost and undepreciated capital cost to the particular foreign affiliate of its depreciable capital property used or held in the course of carrying on each business other than an active business carried on by the particular foreign affiliate, for its taxation year that includes the status change time in respect of the particular foreign affiliate in respect of the particular Canadian shareholder and for subsequent taxation years, the particular foreign affiliate is deemed to have acquired, at the time that is immediately after the beginning of its particular taxation year that includes the status change time in respect of the particular foreign affiliate in respect of the particular Canadian shareholder, each depreciable capital property (each such depreciable capital property referred to in this subparagraph and paragraph (f.93) as a "specified depreciable property") that was owned by the particular foreign affiliate and used or held by the particular foreign affiliate, at the time that is immediately before the beginning of the particular taxation year, in the course of the carrying on of a business, other than an active business, of the particular foreign affiliate, at that time, at a capital cost equal to the lesser of

(A) the fair market value of the specified depreciable property at the status change time, and

(B) the capital cost to the particular foreign affiliate of the specified depreciable property at the time immediately before the beginning of the particular taxation year;

Technical Notes: In general terms, new paragraphs 95(2)(f.91) to (f.93) introduce rules relating to the determination of the cost of eligible capital property, and the capital cost and the undepreciated capital cost of depreciable capital property, of a non-resident corporation that becomes a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada for the purposes of computing the foreign affiliate's foreign accrual property income in respect of the taxpayer resident in Canada or in respect of a specified party in respect of the taxpayer resident in Canada. These rules complement the rules in new paragraph 95(2)(f.2) and are comparable to but not the same as the rules, in existing subsections 111(5.1) and (5.2), that apply when control of a corporation has been acquired.

New paragraph 95(2)(f.91) provides certain additional rules for computing the foreign accrual property income of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer in respect of the taxpayer.

New paragraph 95(2)(f.91) applies if, at a particular time, a non-resident corporation that, immediately before the particular time, was not a foreign affiliate of a particular taxpayer resident in Canada, or of a person or partnership that would — if the particular taxpayer were a taxpayer referred to in paragraphs 95(2)(f)(iii) to (viii) — be described by any of those subparagraphs (the particular taxpayer or each of those persons or partnerships being referred to in this paragraph and new paragraphs 95(2)(f.92), (f.93) and (f.94) as a "particular Canadian shareholder") becomes a foreign affiliate of the particular Canadian shareholder.

The non-resident corporation is referred to in this paragraph and paragraph 95(2)(f.92) as a "particular foreign affiliate" in respect of the particular Canadian shareholder. The particular time is referred to in this paragraph and in paragraph 95(2)(f.92) as the "status change time" in respect of the particular foreign affiliate of the particular Canadian shareholder.

New paragraph 95(2)(f.91) provides rules that apply in computing the particular foreign affiliate's foreign accrual property income in respect of the particular Canadian shareholder or a person or partnership that would — if the person or partnership were a taxpayer referred to in subparagraphs 95(2)(f)(iii) to (viii) — be described by any of those subparagraphs (the particular Canadian shareholder or each of those persons or partnerships being referred to in paragraph 95(2)(f.92) as a "relevant shareholder") for any taxation year of the particular foreign affiliate that ends after the status change time.

Those rules can be summarized as follows:

- For the purpose of determining the cumulative eligible capital of the particular foreign affiliate in respect of the particular Canadian shareholder, at the beginning of the particular foreign affiliate's taxation year that includes the status change time, in respect of each business (other than an active business) carried on by the particular foreign affiliate in that taxation year, the particular affiliate is deemed to have disposed, immediately before the beginning of that taxation year, of each "eligible property" (see third paragraph, below) of the particular foreign affiliate, at the time of that disposition, in respect of each business (other than an active business) carried on by the particular foreign affiliate at the time of that disposition, for proceeds equal to the cost to the particular foreign affiliate of the eligible property at the time of that disposition.

- For the purpose of determining the cost of eligible property to the particular foreign affiliate in respect of the particular Canadian shareholder, and the cumulative eligible capital of the particular foreign affiliate in respect of the particular Canadian shareholder, for its taxation year that includes the status change time in respect of the particular foreign affiliate in respect of the particular Canadian shareholder and for each subsequent taxation year, in respect of each business (other than an active business) of the particular foreign affiliate in that taxation year or subsequent taxation year, the particular foreign affiliate is deemed to have acquired, immediately after the beginning of its particular taxation year that includes the status change time in respect of the particular foreign affiliate in respect of the particular Canadian shareholder, each eligible property of the particular foreign affiliate, immediately before the beginning of the particular year, in respect of each business carried on by the particular foreign affiliate that is, immediately before the beginning of the particular year, a business (other than an active business) of the particular foreign affiliate, at a cost equal to the lesser of
  - — the fair market value of the eligible property at the status change time, and
  - — the cost to the particular foreign affiliate of the eligible property immediately before the beginning of the particular year.

- "Eligible property" in respect of a business carried on by the particular foreign affiliate is a property, right or thing in respect of which the particular foreign affiliate has, after 1971 and before the status change time, made an eligible capital expenditure in respect of the business.

- For the purpose of determining, at the beginning of the particular foreign affiliate's taxation year that includes the status change time in respect of the foreign affiliate in respect of the particular Canadian shareholder, the undepreciated capital cost to the particular foreign affiliate of a depreciable capital property used or held by the particular foreign affiliate in the course of carrying on a business other than an active business of the particular foreign affiliate in that taxation year,
  - — the particular foreign affiliate is deemed to have disposed, immediately before the beginning of that taxation year, of each depreciable capital property of the particular foreign affiliate, held by the particular foreign affiliate and used or held in the course of carrying on a business of the particular foreign affiliate that is a business (other than an active business) immediately before the beginning of that taxation year, for proceeds equal to the capital cost to the particular foreign affiliate of the depreciable property at the beginning of that year, and
  - — at the time that is immediately after the time of that disposition, the particular foreign affiliate's undepreciated capital cost of its depreciable capital property, in respect of each such business that is a business other than an active business, is deemed to be nil.

- For the purpose of determining the capital cost and undepreciated capital cost to the particular foreign affiliate in respect of the particular Canadian shareholder of its depreciable capital property used or held in the course of carrying on each business (other than an active business) carried on by the particular foreign affiliate, for the particular foreign affiliate's taxation year that includes the status change time in respect of the particular foreign affiliate in respect of the particular Canadian shareholder and for its subsequent taxation years, the particular foreign affiliate is deemed to have acquired, at the time that is immediately after the beginning of its taxation year that includes the status change time, each depreciable capital property (each such depreciable capital property referred to in this subparagraph and paragraph 95(2)(f.93) as a "specified depreciable property") that was owned by the particular foreign affiliate and used or held by the particular foreign affiliate, immediately before the beginning of the foreign affiliate's taxation year that includes the status change time, in the course of carrying on a business of the particular foreign affiliate other than an active business, at a capital cost equal to the lesser of
  - — the fair market value of the specified depreciable property at the status change time, and
  - — the capital cost to the particular foreign affiliate of the specified depreciable property immediately before the beginning of the foreign affiliate's taxation year that includes the status change time.

New paragraph 95(2)(f.91) applies in respect of non-resident corporations that become foreign affiliates of a particular taxpayer resident in Canada after February 27, 2004.

that was in existence at the time immediately before the status change time) was provided by the particular foreign affiliate, the particular foreign affiliate's proceeds from the particular disposition, are deemed to be the amount, if any, determined by the formula

where

A is the particular foreign affiliate's proceeds from the particular disposition, as otherwise determined,

B is the lesser of

(i) the amount, if any, by which

(A) the fair market value, of the eligible property, immediately before the status change time in respect of the particular Canadian shareholder

exceeds

(B) the particular foreign affiliate's cost, of the eligible property, immediately before the particular disposition, and

(ii) the amount, if any, by which the particular foreign affiliate's proceeds from the particular disposition, as otherwise determined, exceeds the particular foreign affiliate's cost of the eligible property immediately before the particular disposition, and

C is the lesser of

(i) the amount, if any, by which

(A) the particular foreign affiliate's cost, of the eligible property, immediately before the beginning of the taxation year of the particular foreign affiliate that included the status change time in respect of the particular Canadian shareholder

(B) the fair market value of the eligible property immediately before the status change time in respect of the particular Canadian shareholder, and

(ii) the amount, if any, by which the particular foreign affiliate's proceeds from the particular disposition, as otherwise determined, exceeds the particular foreign affiliate's cost of the eligible property immediately before the particular disposition;

Technical Notes: New paragraph 95(2)(f.92) is consequential to new paragraph 95(2)(f.91). It provides that, in applying paragraph (a) of the description of E in the definition "cumulative eligible capital" in subsection 14(5) in respect of a particular disposition that occurs after the beginning of the taxation year of a the particular foreign affiliate that includes the status change time (defined in paragraph 95(2)(f.91)) in respect of the particular foreign affiliate in respect of the particular Canadian shareholder, (defined in paragraph 95(2)(f.91)), by the particular foreign affiliate (defined in paragraph 95(2)(f.91)) of a relevant shareholder (defined in paragraph 95(2)(f.91)), in respect of which a particular consideration (that was eligible property defined in paragraph 95(2)(f.91) that was in existence at the time immediately before the status change time was provided by the particular foreign affiliate, the particular foreign affiliate's proceeds from the particular disposition, are deemed to be the amount, if any, determined by the formula

where

A is the particular foreign affiliate's proceeds from the particular disposition, as otherwise determined,

B is the lesser of

— the amount, if any, by which — the amount, if any, by which the particular foreign affiliate's proceeds from the particular disposition, as otherwise determined, exceeds the particular foreign affiliate's cost of the eligible property, immediately before the disposition.

$$A - (B + C)$$

where

A is the particular foreign affiliate's proceeds of disposition in respect of the disposition of the particular specified depreciable property, as otherwise determined,

B is the lesser of

(B) the fair market value of the particular specified depreciable property at the time immediately before the status change time in respect of the particular Canadian shareholder, and

(ii) the amount, if any, by which the particular foreign affiliate's proceeds from the disposition of the particular specified depreciable property, as otherwise determined, exceed the particular foreign affiliate's capital cost of the particular specified depreciable property, immediately before the disposition;

Technical Notes: New paragraph 95(2)(f.93) is consequential to new paragraph 95(2)(f.91). It provides that if, at any time after the beginning of the taxation year of the particular foreign affiliate (defined in paragraph 95(2)(f.91)) that includes the status change time (defined in paragraph 95(2)(f.91)) in respect of the particular foreign affiliate in respect of the particular Canadian shareholder (defined in paragraph 95(2)(f.91)), the particular foreign affiliate disposes of a particular specified depreciable property (defined in paragraph 95(2)(f.91)), the particular foreign affiliate's proceeds from the disposition of the particular specified depreciable property are deemed to be the amount, if any, determined by the formula

(f.94) [where relevant foreign affiliate wound up or merged] — for the purposes of paragraphs (f.5) and (f.91) to (f.93), if the relevant foreign affiliate referred to in paragraph (f.5) or the particular foreign affiliate referred to in any of paragraphs (f.91) to (f.93) (which relevant foreign affiliate or particular foreign affiliate, as the case may be, is referred to in this paragraph as the "specified foreign affiliate") has been wound up into another non-resident corporation (referred to in this paragraph as the "foreign parent corporation") or merged or combined with one or more other non-resident corporations to form one non-resident corporate entity (referred to in this paragraph as the "new foreign corporation"), the foreign parent corporation or the new foreign corporation, as the case may be, is deemed to be the same corporation as and a continuation of the specified foreign affiliate, if

(i) the surplus entitlement percentage of the particular corporation resident in Canada, immediately before the merger or combination or the winding-up, in respect of the specified foreign affiliate is not less than 90%, and

(ii) the surplus entitlement percentage of the particular corporation resident in Canada, immediately after the merger or combination or the winding-up, in respect of the foreign parent corporation or new foreign corporation, as the case may be, is not less than 90%;

Technical Notes: New paragraph 95(2)(f.94) provides that, for the purposes of paragraphs 95(2)(f.5) and (f.91) to (f.93), if the relevant foreign affiliate referred to in paragraph 95(2)(f.5) or the particular foreign affiliate referred to in any of paragraphs 95(2)(f.91) to (f.93) (in either case, the "specified foreign affiliate") has been wound up into another non-resident corporation (the "foreign parent corporation") or merged or combined with one or more other non-resident corporations to form one non-resident corporate entity (the "new foreign cor-

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 133(15), will add paras. 95(2)(f.1) to (f.94), applicable as follows:

(a) paras. (f.1) and (f.2), to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after December 20, 2002, except that, for those taxation years that begin before February 28, 2004, subpara. (f.1)(iv) is to be read as follows:

(iv) there were not included in computing the income or loss the portion of the income or loss that can reasonably be considered to have been realized or to have accrued during any period throughout which the affiliate was not a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer or of a person described in any of subparagraphs (f)(iii) to (vii);

Paras. (f.1) and (f.2) may also, by election, be applicable to taxation years that begin after 1994: see Application note to 95(2)(a) proposed amendments.

If a taxpayer has made what would, but for this paragraph, be a valid election as described above, and the taxpayer has, on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day that is the third anniversary of the day on which the amending Act receives Royal Assent, filed with the Minister of National Revenue a notice in writing to revoke the election, the election is deemed, otherwise than for the purpose of this paragraph, never to have been made.

Notwithstanding subsecs. 152(4) to (5) of the Act, any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year shall be made that is necessary to take an election or revocation referred to above into account.

(b) paras. (f.3) to (f.9), to dispositions of property that occur after February 27, 2004, except that those paras. do not apply in respect of a disposition of property that is required to be made under an agreement in writing made by the vendor of the property before February 28, 2004;

(c) paras. (f.91) to (f.93), in respect of non-resident corporations that become foreign affiliates after February 27, 2004; and

(d) para. (f.94), after February 27, 2004.

(g) [currency fluctuation] — where, because of a fluctuation in the value of the currency of a country other than Canada relative to the value of Canadian currency, a particular foreign affiliate of a taxpayer in respect of which the taxpayer has a qualifying interest throughout a taxation year of the particular affiliate has earned income or incurred a loss or realized a capital gain or a capital loss in the year, in reference to

(i) a debt obligation that was owing to

(A) another foreign affiliate of the taxpayer in respect of which the taxpayer has a qualifying interest throughout the year or any other non-resident corporation to which the particular affiliate and the taxpayer are related throughout the year (referred to in this paragraph as a "qualified foreign corporation"), or

(B) the particular affiliate by a qualified foreign corporation,

(ii) the redemption, cancellation or acquisition of a share of the capital stock of, or the reduction of the capital of, the particular affiliate or another foreign affiliate of the taxpayer in respect of which the taxpayer has a qualifying interest throughout the year, or

(iii) the disposition to a qualified foreign corporation of a share of the capital stock of another foreign affiliate of the taxpayer in respect of which the taxpayer has a qualifying interest throughout the year, that income, gain or loss, as the case may be, is deemed to be nil;

Proposed Amendment — 95(2)(g)

(g) [currency fluctuation] — income earned, a loss incurred or a capital gain or captial loss realized, as the case may be, in a taxation year by a particular foreign affiliate of a taxpayer in respect of which the taxpayer has a qualifying interest throughout the taxation year or to which the taxpayer is related throughout the taxation year, because of a fluctuation in the value of the currency of a country other than Canada relative to the value of Canadian currency, is deemed to be nil if it is earned, incurred or realized in reference to any of the following sources:

(i) a debt obligation that was owing to

(A) another foreign affiliate of the taxpayer in respect of which the taxpayer has a qualifying interest throughout the year or any other non-resident corporation to which the particular affiliate and the taxpayer are related throughout the year (which other foreign affiliate or other non-resident corporation is referred to in this paragraph as a "qualified foreign corporation"), or

(B) the particular affiliate by a qualified foreign corporation,

(ii) the redemption, cancellation or acquisition of a share of the capital stock of, or the reduction of the capital of, the particular affiliate or a qualified foreign corporation, or

(iii) the disposition to a qualified foreign corporation of a share of the capital stock of another qualified foreign corporation;

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 133(15), will amend para. 95(2)(g) to read as above, applicable to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after December 20, 2002.

If a taxpayer has made what would, but for this paragraph, be a valid election as described above, and the taxpayer has, on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day that is the third anniversary of the day on which the amending Act receives Royal Assent, filed with the Minister of National Revenue a notice in writing to revoke the election, the election is deemed, otherwise than for the purpose of this paragraph, never to have been made.

Notwithstanding subsecs. 152(4) to (5) of the Act, any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year shall be made that is necessary to take an election or revocation referred to above into account.

Technical Notes: Paragraph 95(2)(g) provides that where, because of a fluctuation in the value of the currency of a country other than Canada relative to the value of Canadian currency, a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer in respect of which the taxpayer has a qualifying interest throughout a taxation year of the affiliate has earned income or incurred a loss or realized a capital gain or a capital loss in the year, in reference to certain debt and share transactions of the affiliate, the income, gain or loss, as the case may be, is nil.

Paragraph 95(2)(g) is amended to expand its scope of application to not only foreign affiliates of a taxpayer in respect of which the taxpayer has a qualifying interest throughout the taxation year, but also to foreign affiliates to which the taxpayer is related throughout the taxation year.

The amendment to paragraph 95(2)(g) applies to taxation years of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer that begin after December 20, 2002.

Note that this amendment is part of the Global Section 95 Election package described [under 95(2)(a) — ed.]

I.T. Technical News: No. 15 (tax consequences of the adoption of the "euro" currency).

Proposed Addition — 95(2)(g.01), (g.02)

(g.01) [income from hedging foreign currency] — any income, loss, capital gain or capital loss, derived by a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer under or as a result of an agreement that provides for the purchase, sale or exchange of currency and that can reasonably be considered to have been made by the affiliate to reduce its risk (with respect to any source, any particular income, gain or loss determined in reference to which is deemed by paragraph (g) to be nil) of fluctuations in the value of currency, is, to the extent of the absolute value of the particular income, gain or loss, deemed to be nil;

Technical Notes: New paragraph 95(2)(g.01) deals with foreign currency hedging agreements. In general terms, that paragraph provides that a foreign currency income, gain or loss derived under or as a result of an agreement that provides for the purchase, sale or exchange of currency where the agreement can reasonably be considered to have been made by a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer to reduce the affiliate's risk (with respect to any source, any particular income, gain or loss determined in reference to which is deemed by paragraph 95(2)(g) to be nil) of fluctuations in the value of currency is, to the extent of the absolute value of the particular income, gain or loss, deemed to be nil. This amendment ensures that income, a gain or a loss from a hedge is deemed to be nil if the hedged income, loss or gain is deemed to be nil.

New paragraph 95(2)(g.01) applies to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after December 20, 2002. Note that new paragraph 95(2)(g.01) is part of the Global Section 95 Election package described [under 95(2)(a) — ed.]

Letter from Dept. of Finance, February 12, 2001:

Angelo Nikolakakis, Stikeman Elliott, Toronto

Dear Mr. Nikolakakis:. . .

Scope of 95(2)(g)

Foreign Currency Reporters

You are concerned that paragraph 95(2)(g) might not apply to treat as nil any foreign exchange gain or loss realized by a foreign affiliate where the affiliate's calculating currency and the currency in which the relevant loan or other instrument are both foreign currencies. This would have an impact on the surpluses of a foreign affiliate in respect of a corporation resident in Canada.

You have requested the extension of paragraph 95(2)(g) to cover foreign-to-foreign currency fluctuations. However, it is not clear to us that the rationale for paragraph 95(2)(g), which was intended to provide relief in respect of foreign exchange gains that would otherwise be considered to arise upon the conversion into Canadian currency, extends to cases involving the affiliate's calculating currency.

Hedging Arrangements

You are concerned that although paragraph 95(2)(g) applies to foreign exchange gains and losses arising in respect of the primary transaction, it does not apply in respect of any hedging arrangements intended to neutralize the foreign exchange exposure arising in connection with such transactions. You feel this is inappropriate and to address this concern the scope of paragraph 95(2)(g) ought to be expanded to cover hedging arrangements connected to the primary transaction.

We agree, and are prepared to recommend an amendment to the Act comparable to paragraph 95(2)(g) which would apply to deem foreign currency hedging gains and losses to be nil where they are connected to foreign currency gains and losses deemed to be nil under paragraph 95(2)(g).

Effective Date

It will be recommended that the amendments be made effective for taxation years commencing after announcement date. It will also be recommended that taxpayer be permitted to elect to have the amendments apply to the 1994 and subsequent taxation years of foreign affiliates where the taxpayer so elects in respect of all the taxpayer's foreign affiliates.

Thank you for taking the time to express your concerns and we trust this letter addresses most of them.

Yours sincerely,
Brian Ernewein

(g.02) [foreign exchange gain or loss] — in applying subsection 39(2) for the purpose of this subdivision, the gains and losses of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer in respect of excluded property is to be computed in respect of the taxpayer separately from the gains and losses of the affiliate in respect of property that is not excluded property;

Technical Notes: New paragraph 95(2)(g.02) ensures that foreign exchange gains and losses of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer determined under subsection 39(2) in respect of excluded property (as defined in subsection 95(1)) are computed separately from the affiliate's foreign exchange gains and losses in respect of other property. This amendment facilitates the computation of the foreign accrual property income and the tax surpluses and deficits of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer.

New paragraph 95(2)(g.02) applies to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after December 20, 2002. Note that new paragraph 95(2)(g.02) is part of the Global Section 95 Election package described [under 95(2)(a) — ed.]

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 133(15), will add paras. (g.01) and (g.02), applicable to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after December 20, 2002. Paras. (g.01) and (g.02) may also, by election, be applicable to taxation years that begin after 1994: see Application note to 95(2)(a) proposed amendments.

If a taxpayer has made what would, but for this paragraph, be a valid election as described above, and the taxpayer has, on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day that is the third anniversary of the day on which the amending Act receives Royal Assent, filed with the Minister of National Revenue a notice in writing to revoke the election, the election is deemed, otherwise than for the purpose of this paragraph, never to have been made.

Notwithstanding subsecs. 152(4) to (5) of the Act, any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year shall be made that is necessary to take an election or revocation referred to above into account.

(g.1) [debt forgiveness rules] — in computing the foreign accrual property income of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer the Act shall be read

(i) as if the expression "income, taxable income or taxable income earned in Canada, as the case may be" in the definition "commercial debt obligation" in subsection 80(1) were read as "foreign accrual property income (within the meaning assigned by subsection 95(1))", and

(ii) without reference to subsections 80(3) to (12) and (15) and 80.01(5) to (11) and sections 80.02 to 80.04;

(g.2) [foreign spin-off election] — for the purpose of computing the foreign accrual property income of a foreign affiliate of any taxpayer resident in Canada for a taxation year of the affiliate, an election made pursuant to paragraph 86.1(2)(f) in respect of a distribution received by the affiliate in a particular taxation year of the affiliate is deemed to have been filed under that paragraph by the affiliate if

(i) where there is only one taxpayer resident in Canada in respect of whom the affiliate is a controlled foreign affiliate, the election is filed by the taxpayer with the taxpayer's return of income for the taxpayer's taxation year in which the particular year of the affiliate ends, and

(ii) where there is more than one taxpayer resident in Canada in respect of whom the affiliate is a controlled foreign affiliate, all of those taxpayers jointly elect in writing and each of them files the joint election with the Minister with their return of income for their taxation year in which the particular year of the affiliate ends;

Related Provisions: 96(3) — Election by members of partnership.

(g.3) [application of foreign investment entity rules] — if in a particular taxation year of a particular foreign affiliate of a particular taxpayer, the particular foreign affiliate holds a participating interest, in a particular non-resident entity (in this paragraph as defined by subsection 94.1(1)), sections 94.1 to 94.4 apply to the particular foreign affiliate in respect of the participating interest as if

(i) the particular foreign affiliate were a taxpayer resident in Canada throughout the particular taxation year (other than for the purposes of determining if the particular foreign affiliate is a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, if the particular foreign affiliate is a non-resident entity, or if a participating interest in the particular foreign affiliate is an exempt interest (in this paragraph as defined by subsection 94.1(1), as modified by this paragraph) of a taxpayer in a non-resident entity),

(ii) the expression "controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer" in paragraph (a) of the definition "exempt interest" in subsection 94.1(1) referred to a controlled foreign affiliate of the particular taxpayer and not to a controlled foreign affiliate of the particular foreign affiliate,

(iii) an exempt interest of the particular foreign affiliate in a non-resident entity included a participating interest

(A) that is held, in the particular taxation year, by the particular foreign affiliate, and

(B) that is, throughout the particular taxation year, property used or held by the particular foreign affiliate principally for the purpose of gaining or producing income from a business that is not an investment business,

(iv) in computing the income of the particular non-resident entity from a participating interest in another non-resident entity, the expression "controlled foreign affiliate of the taxpayer" in paragraph (a) of the definition "exempt interest" in subsection 94.1(1) referred to a controlled foreign affiliate of the particular taxpayer and not to a controlled foreign affiliate of the particular non-resident entity,

(v) the definition "fresh-start year" in subsection 94.3(1) did not apply and as if a reference in section 94.3 to a fresh-start year, of the particular non-resident entity in respect of the particular foreign affiliate, were a reference to a taxation year of the particular non-resident entity

(A) that ends in a taxation year of the particular foreign affiliate that begins after 2002,

(B) that begins immediately after a preceding taxation year of the particular non-resident entity at the end of which

(I) the particular non-resident entity was not a foreign investment entity,

(II) the particular foreign affiliate did not hold a participating interest in the particular non-resident entity (other than an exempt interest), or

(III) the particular foreign affiliate was not a controlled foreign affiliate of the particular taxpayer,

(C) at the end of which the particular non-resident entity is a foreign investment entity in which the particular foreign affiliate holds a participating interest that is not an exempt interest, and

(D) at any time in which the particular foreign affiliate is a controlled foreign affiliate of the particular taxpayer,

(vi) an election made under paragraph (a) of the definition "carrying value", or paragraph (a) of the definition "financial statements", in subsection 94.1(1), paragraphs 94.1(2)(e), (h) or (j), subparagraph (a)(iii) of the description of D in the definition "mark-to-market formula" in subsection 94.2(1), subparagraph 94.2(2)(c)(i) or 94.2(3)(b)(iii) or paragraph 94.3(3)(b) for the particular taxation year were required to be filed under those provisions in respect of the particular foreign affiliate, by, and only by, the particular taxpayer, with the Minister on or before the filing-due date of the particular taxpayer for the particular taxpayer's taxation year in which the particular taxation year ends,

(vii) the Minister were required, in sending a written demand under subparagraph 94.1(2)(e)(iii), any of paragraphs 94.1(2)(p) to (r) or 94.2(2)(e), or subparagraph 94.3(2)(b)(iii), to send the demand to the particular taxpayer,

(viii) the amount determined under the definition "deferral amount" in subsection 94.2(1) did not include the portion of that amount that can reasonably be considered to have accrued during the period that the particular foreign affiliate was not a foreign affiliate of any person described in any of subparagraphs (f)(iii) to (vii),

(ix) the reference in subsection 94.2(19) to the expression "in computing the capital dividend account of the corporation" were read in respect of the particular foreign affiliate as a reference to the expression "and the corporation is a foreign affiliate, of a taxpayer, to which paragraph 95(2)(g.3) applies, in computing the amount prescribed to be the foreign affiliate's exempt surplus and taxable surplus in respect of the taxpayer",

(x) any form, information or notification, in respect of a participating interest in a foreign investment entity held in the particular taxation year by the particular foreign affiliate, that is required under any of sections 94.1 to 94.4 to be filed or included with the particular foreign affiliate's return of income for the particular taxation year were required to be filed or included with, and only with, the particular taxpayer's return of income for the particular taxpayer's taxation year in which the particular taxation year ends,

(xi) designations and notifications made, and information provided, by the particular taxpayer in a form referred to in subparagraph (x) were made or provided by the particular foreign affiliate,

(xii) in applying paragraph (g) of the description of A in the definition "income allocation" in subsection 94.3(1)

(A) the expression "the particular taxpayer" referred to the particular taxpayer rather than to the particular foreign affiliate, and

(B) the expression "foreign affiliate" referred to a foreign affiliate of the particular taxpayer and not to a foreign affiliate of the particular foreign affiliate,

(xiii) in applying subparagraph 94.3(2)(b)(ii), the particular foreign affiliate were not a foreign investment entity, and

(xiv) the definition "income allocation" in subsection 94.3(1) were read without reference to paragraph (i) of the description of A in that definition;

Application: The October 30, 2003 Notice of Ways and Means Motion (NRTs and FIEs), subsec. 17(6), will add para. 95(2)(g.3), applicable to taxation years of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer that begin after 2002.

Technical Notes: Subsection 95(2) provides rules for determining the income of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada. These rules apply for the purposes of sections 90 to 95.

New paragraph 95(2)(g.3) applies to a particular foreign affiliate of a particular Canadian taxpayer for a particular taxation year of the particular foreign affiliate, in respect of a property that is a participating interest, in a particular non-resident entity held by the particular foreign affiliate in the particular taxation year. In this case, sections 94.1 to 94.4 apply in respect of the particular participating interest as if

- The particular affiliate were, with some exceptions, a taxpayer resident in Canada throughout the particular year;
- The exemption in paragraph (a) of the definition "exempt interest" for controlled foreign affiliates referred only to controlled foreign affiliates of the Canadian taxpayer;
- An exempt interest of particular affiliate in a non-resident entity included a participating interest held, in the particular taxation year, by the particular foreign affiliate, and used or held by the particular foreign affiliate principally for the purpose of gaining or producing income from an active business;
- A "fresh-start year" (relevant in computing the foreign affiliate's "income allocation" and "loss allocation" under the accrual regime in section 94.3) of the particular non-resident entity in respect of the particular affiliate were its taxation year (at the end of which the particular affiliate holds an interest in it and it is a foreign investment entity and at any time in which the particular affiliate is a CFA of the Canadian taxpayer) that ends in a taxation year of the particular affiliate that begins after 2002 and that immediately follows a taxation year of the particular non-resident entity in respect of which subsection 94.1(3) would not have been applicable to the foreign affiliate.
- The exclusion of dividends under paragraph (g) of the description of A in the definition "income allocation" in subsection 94.3(1) applies only where the Canadian taxpayer is resident in Canada, in connection with dividends received by the particular affiliate from foreign affiliates of the Canadian taxpayer (not of the particular affiliate);
- The Canadian taxpayer (rather than the particular affiliate) were required to make a number of the elections, designations, notifications and provisions of information under sections 94.1 to 94.4 in connection with the particular affiliate's participating interests in foreign investment entities. In addition, the Minister in sending a demand for information to the particular affiliate under subparagraph 94.1(2)(e)(iii) or 94.3(2)(b)(iii), or any of paragraphs 94.1(2)(p) to (r) or 94.2(2)(e), is required to send the demand also to the Canadian taxpayer in connection with the particular affiliate's participating interests in foreign investment entities.
- In applying subparagraph 94.3(2)(b)(ii), the particular foreign affiliate were not a foreign investment entity, so that a controlled foreign affiliate that is a foreign investment entity can use the accrual rules in section 94.3;
- The definition "income allocation" in subsection 94.3(1) were read without reference to paragraph (i) of the description of "A";
- The particular affiliate's "deferral amount" determined under the definition of that expression in subsection 94.2(1) does not include the portion of the amount that can reasonably be considered to have accrued during the period that the particular affiliate was not a foreign affiliate of the Canadian taxpayer and certain other specified persons; and
- The reference in subsection 94.2(19) to the expression "in computing the capital dividend account of the corporation" were read in respect of the affiliate as a reference to the expression "in computing the amount prescribed to be the particular affiliate's exempt surplus and taxable surplus in respect of the taxpayer".

Letter from Dept. of Finance, August 11, 2003:

Dear [xxx]

Thank you for your letter of April 23, 2003, concerning the application, to property held by a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, of the provisions contained in the legislative proposals on foreign investment entities ("FIE proposals") that were tabled as a Notice of Ways and Means Motion on October 11, 2002.

Under the FIE Proposals, a taxpayer would generally be required to include in computing the taxpayer's income for a taxation year certain amounts — determined under proposed section 94.1 or 94.2 of the Income Tax Act — in respect of a participating interest of the taxpayer in a FIE. However, these rules generally would not apply to a participating interest that is an exempt interest, as defined in proposed subsection 94.1(1) of the Act, of the taxpayer in a FIE. You are concerned that proposed paragraph 95(2)(g.3) of the Act — which would determine the manner in which sections 94.1 to 94.3 would apply in computing the foreign accrual property income ("FAPI") of a foreign affiliate, of a taxpayer, that holds a participating interest in a FIE — may apply to include in computing the foreign affiliate's FAPI an amount that would otherwise be treated as "income from an active business" as defined by subsection 95(1) of the Act.

We are prepared to recommend a modification to the provisions contained in the FIE Proposals. Proposed paragraph 95(2)(g.3) would be modified so that, in computing the FAPI of a foreign affiliate, sections 94.1 to 94.3 would apply as if an "exempt interest" of the foreign affiliate in a FIE included a participating interest in the FIE that is, throughout the period that it is held by the foreign affiliate, used or held by the foreign affiliate principally for the purpose of gaining or producing income from a business that is not an investment business, within the meaning of subsection 95(1) of the Act. As a result, proposed subsection 94.1(3) of the Act would not apply in respect of such a participating interest to cause the foreign affiliate to have income under proposed sections 94.1 or 94.2 that would be included in computing the foreign affiliate's FAPI. We will recommend that these modifications be effective for the same period as the FIE proposals generally.

Of course, we cannot offer any assurance that either the Minister of Finance or Parliament will agree with the recommendation that we intend to make in this regard. Nonetheless, we trust that this statement of our position is helpful.

Thank you for writing.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein
Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(h) [Repealed]

Proposed Addition — 95(2)(h)–(h.5)

(h) [application of para. (h.1)] — paragraph (h.1) applies to a specified vendor in respect of a particular taxpayer resident in Canada (which specified vendor is referred to in this paragraph and paragraphs (h.1) and (h.2) as the "vendor") if

(i) the vendor disposes at any time of a property (which property is referred to in this paragraph and paragraphs (h.1) to (h.5) as the "specified property" and which time is referred to in this paragraph and paragraphs (h.1) to (h.5) as the "original disposition time" of the specified property) that, at that time, is not depreciable property, eligible capital property or an excluded property, of the vendor (or would not be excluded property of the vendor if the vendor were, at that time, a foreign affiliate of the particular taxpayer) to a person or partnership (referred to in paragraph (h.1) as the "purchaser") that is, immediately after that time, a specified purchaser in respect of the particular taxpayer, and

(ii) the vendor would, were this Act read without reference to paragraph (h.1), have a loss or allowable capital loss from the disposition of the specified property;

Technical Notes: New paragraphs 95(2)(h) to (h.5) put into place a regime that, in general terms, is designed to suspend the recognition of the loss that would otherwise be incurred upon an internal disposition of a property that is not an excluded property, a depreciable property or an eligible capital property. Generally, this "suspended loss" is recognized at the time the property is disposed of in an external disposition. The rules are comparable to but not the same as the rules found in subsection 40(3.4). See the definitions "specified vendor" and "specified purchaser" in proposed new subsection 95(3.5) to determine when a disposition is an internal disposition.

New paragraphs 95(2)(h) to (h.5) apply to dispositions of property after February 27, 2004 other than where the disposition of property is required to be made under a written agreement made by the vendor of the property on or before February 27, 2004.

New paragraph 95(2)(h) provides that new paragraph 95(2)(h.1) applies to a specified vendor in respect of a particular taxpayer resident in Canada (see definition of "specified vendor" in subsection 95(3.5) and such specified vendor referred in here and paragraph (h.1) as the "vendor") if

- the vendor disposes at any time (referred to here and in paragraphs 95(2)(h.1) to (h.5) as the "original disposition time") of a property (referred to here and in paragraphs 95(2)(h.1) to (h.5) as the "specified property") that, at that time, is not a depreciable property, eligible capital property or an excluded property of the vendor (or would not be excluded property of the vendor if the vendor were, at that time, a foreign affiliate of the particular taxpayer) to a person or partnership (referred to here as the "purchaser") that is, immediately after that time, a specified purchaser in respect of the particular taxpayer, and

- the vendor would have a loss or an allowable capital loss from the disposition of the specified property, if this Act were read without reference to paragraph 95(2)(h.1).

The expressions "original disposition time", "specified property", "vendor" and "purchaser" are described in new paragraph 95(2)(h) and are then referred to throughout new paragraphs 95(2)(h.1) to 95(2)(h.5).

Related Provisions: 95(3.5) — Definitions; 95(3.6) — Partnerships and trusts.

(h.1) [suspended loss on internal disposition of excluded property] — if this paragraph applies to a vendor in respect of a disposition of specified property referred to in paragraph (h), the following rules apply:

(i) the vendor's proceeds from the disposition of the specified property are deemed to be an amount that is equal to the vendor's adjusted cost base of the specified property at the original disposition time,

(ii) the purchaser's cost of the specified property is deemed to be an amount that is equal to the fair market value of the specified property at the original disposition time,

(iii) the vendor's cost of a particular property that was received as consideration for the disposition of the specified property is deemed to be the fair market value of the particular property at the original disposition time,

(iv) the vendor that is a foreign affiliate of the particular taxpayer resident in Canada or a foreign affiliate of the particular taxpayer resident in Canada that is a member of a partnership that is the vendor (which vendor or foreign affiliate is referred to in this subparagraph as the "relevant foreign affiliate") is deemed to have an unadjusted suspended loss or capital loss in respect of the specified property disposed of, at the original disposition time, by the vendor that is equal to the amount, that is the loss or twice the amount of the allowable capital loss, as the case may be, that, but for the application of this paragraph, would have been realized by the relevant foreign affiliate in respect of that disposition, and

(v) notwithstanding subsection 40(3.3), subsection 40(3.4) does not apply to the vendor in respect of the disposition of the specified property;

Technical Notes: New paragraph 95(2)(h.1) provides the following rules for the vendor in respect of the disposition of the specified property.

- The vendor's proceeds from the disposition of the specified property are deemed to be an amount that is equal to the vendor's adjusted cost base of the specified property at the original disposition time (see paragraph 95(2)(h)).

- The purchaser's cost of the specified property is deemed to be an amount that is equal to the fair market value of the specified property at the original disposition time.
- The vendor's cost of a particular property that was received as consideration for the disposition of the specified property is deemed to be the fair market value of the particular property at the original disposition time.
- The vendor that is a foreign affiliate of the particular taxpayer or a foreign affiliate of the particular taxpayer that is a member of a partnership that is the vendor (referred to here as the "relevant foreign affiliate") is deemed to have an unadjusted suspended loss or capital loss in respect of the specified property, at the original disposition time, by the vendor that is equal to the amount, that, but for the application of this paragraph, would have been the relevant foreign affiliate's loss or twice the amount of the allowable capital loss, as the case may be, in respect of that disposition, if the vendor's proceeds of disposition in respect of that disposition were equal to the fair market value of the specified property.
- Notwithstanding subsection 40(3.3), subsection 40(3.4) does not apply to the vendor in respect of the disposition of the specified property.

Related Provisions: 95(2)(h) — Conditions for para. (h.1) to apply; 95(2)(h.2) — Timing of deemed loss for relevant foreign affiliate; 95(2)(h.3) — Designated replacement property deemed to be specified property; 95(2)(h.4) — Where part of specified property disposed of; 95(2)(h.5) — Designated replacement property acquired by specified purchaser; 95(3.5) — Definitions; 95(3.6) — Partnerships and trusts.

(h.2) [timing of deemed loss] — the relevant foreign affiliate referred to in paragraph (h.1) is deemed to have a loss or capital loss from the disposition of the specified property equal to the amount prescribed to be the adjusted suspended loss or capital loss in respect of the specified property and to have received from the government of a country an amount equal to the amount prescribed to be the adjusted allocable tax refund in respect of the adjusted suspended loss or capital loss in respect of the specified property at the earlier of

(i) the first time, after the original disposition time, that a specified purchaser in respect of the particular taxpayer (which specified purchaser is referred to in paragraphs (h.4) and (h.5) as the "current vendor") that holds, immediately before that first time, the specified property makes a triggering disposition of the specified property, and

(ii) the first time, after the original disposition time, that a specified purchaser in respect of the particular taxpayer (which specified purchaser is referred to in this subparagraph as the "current holder") that holds, immediately before that first time, the specified property ceases to be a specified purchaser in respect of the particular taxpayer otherwise than because of a specified discontinuance of the current holder;

Technical Notes: New paragraph 95(2)(h.2) provides that the relevant foreign affiliate referred to in paragraph 95(2)(h.1) is deemed to have a loss or capital loss from the disposition of the specified property equal to the amount prescribed by regulation to be the adjusted suspended loss or capital loss (see proposed new subsection 5914(1) of the Regulations) in respect of the specified property. New paragraph 95(2)(h.2) also provides that the relevant foreign affiliate referred to in paragraph 95(2)(h.1) is deemed to have received from the government of a country an amount equal to the amount prescribed by regulation to be the adjusted allocable tax refund (see proposed new subsection 5914(2) of the Regulations) in respect of the adjusted suspended loss or capital loss in respect of the specified property. The adjusted suspended loss or capital loss and the adjusted allocable tax refund will arise at the earlier of

- the first time, after the original disposition time, that a specified purchaser (see subsection 95(3.5)) in respect of the particular taxpayer (referred to in paragraphs 95(2)(h.4) and (h.5) as the "current vendor") that holds, immediately before that first time, the specified property makes a triggering disposition (see subsection 95(3.5)) of the specified property.

- the first time, after the original disposition time, that a specified purchaser in respect of the particular taxpayer (referred to here as the "current holder") that holds, immediately before that first time, the specified property, ceases at that time to be a specified purchaser in respect of the particular taxpayer otherwise than because of a specified discontinuance (see subsection 95(3.5)) of the current holder.

Related Provisions: 95(2)(h.3) — Designated replacement property deemed to be specified property; 95(2)(h.4) — Where part of specified property disposed of; 95(2)(h.5) — Designated replacement property acquired by specified purchaser; 95(2)(y) — Meaning of "government of a country"; 95(3.5) — Definitions; 95(3.6) — Partnerships and trusts.

Regulations: 5914(1) (amount prescribed to be adjusted suspended loss or capital loss); 5914(2) (amount prescribed to be adjusted allocable tax refund).

(h.3) [designated replacement property deemed to be specified property] — for the purposes of paragraphs (h.1), (h.2), (h.4) and (h.5) and subsection (3.5), a designated replacement property referred to in clause (b)(ii)(A), (B) or (C) of the definition "triggering disposition" in subsection (3.5) is deemed to be the specified property referred to in that clause;

Technical Notes: New paragraph 95(2)(h.3) provides that for the purposes of paragraphs 95(2)(h.1), (h.2), (h.4) and (h.5) and subsection 95(3.5), a designated replacement property referred to in clause (b)(ii)(A), (B) or (C) of the definition "triggering disposition" in subsection 95(3.5) is deemed to be the same property as the specified property referred to in that clause.

Related Provisions: 95(2)(h.4) — Where part of specified property disposed of; 95(2)(h.5) — Designated replacement property acquired by specified purchaser; 95(3.5) — Definitions; 95(3.6) — Partnerships and trusts.

(h.4) [where part of specified property disposed of] — for the purposes of paragraphs (h.1) to (h.3) and (h.5) and subsection (3.5) if, at any time, part of a specified property (which specified property is referred to in this paragraph as the "initial specified property") is disposed of by a current vendor and the remaining part of the specified property is retained by the current vendor,

(i) the part (referred to in this paragraph as the "part interest") of the initial specified property disposed of, at that time, is deemed to be a specified property of the current vendor,

(ii) the portion of the unadjusted suspended loss or capital loss attributable to the part interest is deemed to be that proportion of the adjusted suspended loss or capital loss in respect of the whole of the initial specified property that the fair market value at that time of the part interest is of the fair market value at that time of the initial specified property,

(iii) the part (referred to in this paragraph as the "remaining interest") of the initial specified property not disposed of at that time is deemed to be a specified property of the current vendor that was disposed of at the original disposition time, and

(iv) the amount of loss or capital loss that would have been realized on the disposition of the remaining interest at the original disposition time is deemed to be the amount, if any, by which the unadjusted suspended loss or capital loss in respect of the initial specified property exceeds the amount determined by subparagraph (ii) to be the unadjusted suspended loss or capital loss in respect of the part interest;

Technical Notes: New paragraph 95(2)(h.4) provides that for the purposes of paragraphs 95(2)(h.1) to (h.3) and (h.5) and subsection 95(3.5), where at any time, part of a specified property (referred to here as the "initial specified property") is disposed of by a current vendor and the remaining part of the specified property is retained by the current vendor, the following rules apply:

- The part (referred to here as the "part interest") of the initial specified property disposed of, at that time, shall be deemed to be a specified property of the current vendor.
- The portion of the unadjusted suspended loss or capital loss attributable to the part interest is deemed to be that proportion of the adjusted suspended loss or capital loss in respect of the whole of the initial specified property that the fair market value at that time of the part interest is of the fair market value at that time of the initial specified property. (Subparagraph 95(2)(h.4)(ii))
- The part (referred to here as the "remaining interest") of the initial specified property not disposed of at that time is deemed to be a specified property of the current vendor that was disposed of at the original disposition time.
- The amount of loss or capital loss that would have been realized on the disposition of the remaining interest at the original disposition time is deemed to be the amount, if any, by which the unadjusted suspended loss or capital loss in respect of the initial specified property exceeds the amount determined by subparagraph 95(2)(h.4)(ii) to be the unadjusted suspended loss or capital loss in respect of the part interest.

Related Provisions: 95(2)(h.3) — Designated replacement property deemed to be specified property; 95(2)(h.5) — Designated replacement property acquired by specified purchaser; 95(3.5) — Definitions; 95(3.6) — Partnerships and trusts.

(h.5) [designated replacement property acquired by specified purchaser] — for the purposes of paragraphs (h.1) to (h.4) and subsection (3.5), if a current vendor disposes, at any particular time, of the whole of a specified property (referred to in this paragraph as the "initial specified property") and as part of a transaction, or series of transactions or events, that includes the disposition of the initial specified property, a specified purchaser in respect of the particular taxpayer acquires a designated replacement property in respect of the initial specified property,

(i) the designated replacement property (referred to in this paragraph as the "remaining interest") is deemed to be a specified property of the current vendor that was disposed of at the original disposition time,

(ii) the unadjusted suspended loss or capital loss in respect of the remaining interest is deemed to be that proportion of the unadjusted suspended loss or capital loss in respect of the whole of the initial specified property (determined without reference to subparagraph (iii)) that the fair market value of the remaining interest, at the time it was acquired, is of the fair market value, at the particular time, of the initial specified property, and

(iii) the unadjusted suspended loss or capital loss in respect of the initial specified property is deemed to be the amount, if any, by which the unadjusted suspended loss or capital loss in respect of the initial specified property (determined without reference to this subparagraph) exceeds the amount determined by subparagraph (ii) to be the unadjusted suspended loss or capital loss in respect of the remaining interest;

Technical Notes: New paragraph 95(2)(h.5) provides that for the purposes of paragraphs 95(2)(h.1) to (h.4) and subsection 95(3.5), if a current vendor disposes, at any particular time, of the whole of a specified property (referred to here as the "initial specified property") and as part of a transaction, or series of transactions or events, that includes the disposition of the initial specified property, a specified purchaser in respect of the taxpayer acquires a designated replacement property (see the definition "triggering disposition" in subsection 95(3.5)) in respect of the initial specified property, the following rules apply:

- The designated replacement property (referred to here as "the remaining interest") is deemed to be a specified property of the current vendor that was disposed of at the original disposition time. (Subparagraph 95(2)(h.5)(i))
- The unadjusted suspended loss or capital loss in respect of the remaining interest is deemed to be that portion of the unadjusted suspended loss or capital loss in respect of the whole of the initial specified property (determined without reference to subparagraph 95(2)(h.5)(iii)) that the fair market value of the remaining interest, at the time it was acquired, is of the fair market value, at the particular time, of the initial specified property. (Subparagraph 95(2)(h.5)(ii))
- The unadjusted suspended loss or capital loss in respect of the initial specified property is deemed to be the amount, if any, by which the unadjusted suspended loss or capital loss in respect of the initial specified property (determined without reference to subparagraph 95(2)(h.5)(iii)) minus the amount determined by subparagraph 95(2)(h.5)(ii) to be the unadjusted suspended loss or capital loss in respect of the remaining interest. (Subparagraph 95(2)(h.5)(iii))

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 133(16), will add paras. 95(2)(h) to (h.5), applicable to dispositions of property that occur after February 27, 2004, except that those paragraphs do not apply in respect of a disposition of property that is required to be made under an agreement in writing made by the vendor of the property before February 28, 2004.

(i) [settlement of debt relating to excluded property] — any gain or loss of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer from the settlement or extinguishment of a debt that related at all times to the acquisition of excluded property shall be deemed to be a gain or loss from the disposition of excluded property;

Proposed Amendment — 95(2)(i)

(i) [settlement of debt relating to excluded property] — any gain or loss determined in accordance with subsection 39(2) of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer is deemed to be a gain or loss, as the case may be, from the disposition of an excluded property if the gain or loss is

(i) derived from the settlement or extinguishment of a debt all or substantially all of the proceeds from which were used at all times to acquire excluded property or to earn income from an active business or for a combination of those uses, or

(ii) derived under or as a result of an agreement that provides for the purchase, sale or exchange of currency and that can reasonably be considered to have been made by the affiliate to reduce its risk, with respect to a debt referred to in subparagraph (i), of fluctuations in the value of the currency in which the debt was denominated;

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 133(16), will amend para. 95(2)(i) to read as above, applicable to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after December 20, 2002. The amended para. may also, by election, be applicable to taxation years that begin after 1994: see Application note to 95(2)(a) proposed amendments.

If a taxpayer has made what would, but for this paragraph, be a valid election as described above, and the taxpayer has, on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day that is the third anniversary of the day on which the amending Act receives Royal Assent, filed with the Minister of National Revenue a notice in writing to revoke the election, the election is deemed, otherwise than for the purpose of this paragraph, never to have been made.

Notwithstanding subsecs. 152(4) to (5) of the Act, any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year shall be made that is necessary to take an election or revocation referred to above into account.

Technical Notes: Paragraph 95(2)(i) provides a rule under which certain gains or losses (determined in accordance with subsection 39(2)) of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer are deemed to be a gain or loss, as the case may be, from the disposition of an excluded property (as defined in subsection 95(1)) and are therefore not included in computing the affiliate's foreign accrual property income. Under this paragraph, the gain or loss that is eligible for this treatment is a gain or loss of the affiliate from the settlement or extinguishment of a debt that related at all times to the acquisition of an excluded property. This paragraph is amended in three ways.

First, it is amended so that the gain or loss from the settlement or extinguishment of a debt is eligible for this treatment if all or substantially all of the proceeds from the debt were used at all times to acquire excluded property or to earn income from an active business or a combination of those uses.

Second, it is amended to ensure that a gain or loss of a foreign affiliate is also eligible for this treatment if it is a gain or loss derived under or as a result of an agreement that provides for the purchase, sale or exchange of currency, where the agreement can reasonably be considered to have been made by the affiliate to reduce its risk (with respect to the debt) of fluctuations in the value of the currency in which the debt was denominated.

Third, it is amended so that its "preamble" contains a specific reference to gains and losses, determined in accordance with subsection 39(2), which provides the general rules for the calculation of foreign currency gains and losses.

These amendments to paragraph 95(2)(i) clarify the relationship between paragraph 95(2)(f) and subsection 39(2) and expand the scope of paragraph 95(2)(i) so that it applies more broadly to indebtedness used to fund active business operations. It also applies to certain foreign currency hedging agreements that are related to that indebtedness.

These amendments to paragraph 95(2)(i) apply to taxation years of a foreign affiliate, of a taxpayer, that begin after December 20, 2002. Note that these amendments are part of the Global Section 95 Election package described [under 95(2)(a) — ed.]

Letter from Dept. of Finance, February 12, 2001:

Angelo Nikolakakis, Stikeman Elliott, Toronto

Dear Mr. Nikolakakis:. . .

Relationship between 39(2) and 95(2)(f)

You have requested that the relationship between subsection 39(2) and paragraph 95(2)(f) of the Act be clarified.

Where subsection 39(2) applies, it deems the taxpayer to have a gain or loss from the disposition of "currency". You point out that it is not clear how paragraph 95(2)(f) applies in respect of such a gain, since it is not clear that the "currency" referred to in subsection 39(2) would be regarded as excluded property. Paragraph 95(2)(i) deems any gain or loss of a foreign affiliate from the settlement or extinguishment of a debt that related to the acquisition of excluded property to be a gain or loss from the disposition of excluded property. Subsection 39(2) and paragraph 95(2)(i) could both apply to the same transaction.

You have requested that we amend the Act to require a separate calculation of foreign exchange gains or losses with respect to excluded property.

We are prepared to recommend an amendment to paragraph 95(2)(i) that would deem any gain or loss of a foreign affiliate arising under subsection 39(2) to be a gain or loss from the disposition of excluded property where the gain or loss is from the settlement or extinguishment of a debt related to excluded property or of related hedging agreements. We are also prepared to recommend a new paragraph in subsection 95(2) that would require a separate determination of foreign exchange gains and losses under subsection 39(2) for excluded property and other property.

Scope of 95(2)(i)

You are also concerned that paragraph 95(2)(i) does not apply where loan proceeds were used for legitimate active business purposes other than to acquire excluded property. You are requesting that we amend paragraph 95(2)(i) to include indebtedness that was used "principally for the purpose of producing income from an active business".

We will recommend an amendment to paragraph 95(2)(i) of the Act which will treat debt as excluded property where all or substantially all of the proceeds of the indebtedness was used for earning active business income, acquiring excluded property or a combination thereof.

Effective Date

It will be recommended that the amendments be made effective for taxation years commencing after announcement date. It will also be recommended that taxpayer be permitted to elect to have the amendments apply to the 1994 and subsequent taxation years of foreign affiliates where the taxpayer so elects in respect of all the taxpayer's foreign affiliates [see "Global Section 95 Election" under 95(2)(a) — ed.].

Thank you for taking the time to express your concerns and we trust this letter addresses most of them.

Yours sincerely,
Brian Ernewein

(j) [ACB of partnership interest] — the adjusted cost base to a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer of an interest in a partnership at any time shall be such amount as is prescribed by regulation;

Regulations: 5907(12) (ACB to foreign affiliate of interest in partnership).

Proposed Addition — 95(2)(j.1), (j.2)

(j.1) [conditions for para. (j.2) to apply] — paragraph (j.2) applies in respect of a particular taxation year of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer and in respect of a particular fiscal period of a partnership at the end of which a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer is a member of the partnership (which foreign affiliate or partnership is referred to in this paragraph and paragraph (j.2) as the "operator" and which particular taxation year or particular fiscal period is referred to in this paragraph and paragraph (j.2) as the "specified taxation year") if in the specified taxation year

(i) the operator carries on a business (referred to in this paragraph and paragraph (j.2) as a "foreign business"),

(ii) the foreign business includes the insuring of risks,

(iii) the foreign business is not, at any time, a taxable Canadian business,

(iv) the foreign business is

(A) an investment business, or

(B) a business whose activities include activities deemed by paragraph (a.2) or (b) to be a separate business, other than an active business, carried on by the affiliate, and

(v) in respect of the foreign business, the operator would, were it a corporation carrying on the foreign business in Canada, be required by law to report to, and be subject to the supervision of, a regulatory authority that is the Superintendent of Financial Institutions or a similar authority of a province;

Related Provisions: 95(2)(k.7) — Tiers of partnerships.

(j.2) [policy reserves in respect of insurance business] — if this paragraph applies in respect of a specified taxation year of an operator, in computing the operator's income or loss from the foreign business for the specified taxation year and each subsequent taxation year or fiscal period in which the foreign business is carried on by the operator

(i) the operator is deemed to carry on the foreign business in Canada throughout that part of the specified taxation year, and of each of those subsequent taxation years or fiscal periods, in which the foreign business is carried on by the operator, and

(ii) for the purposes of Part XIV of the Regulations,

(A) the operator is deemed to be required by law to report to, and to have been subject to the supervision of, the regulatory authority referred to in subparagraph (j.1)(v), and

(B) where the operator is a life insurer and the foreign business is a life insurance business, the life insurance policies issued in the conduct of that business are deemed to be life insurance policies in Canada;

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 133(17), will add paras. 95(2)(j.1) and (j.2), applicable to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after December 20, 2002.

If a taxpayer so elects in writing and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day on which the amending legislation is assented to, paras. (j.1) and (j.2) apply to taxation years, of all foreign affiliates of the taxpayer, that begin after 1994.

If a taxpayer has made what would, but for this paragraph, be a valid election as described above, and the taxpayer has, on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day that is the third anniversary of the day on which the amending Act receives Royal Assent, filed with the Minister of National Revenue a notice in writing to revoke the election, the election is deemed, otherwise than for the purpose of this paragraph, never to have been made.

Notwithstanding subsecs. 152(4) to (5) of the Act, any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year shall be made that is necessary to take an election or revocation referred to above into account.

Technical Notes: New paragraphs 95(2)(j.1) and (j.2) ensure that a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada that carries on an insurance business is eligible to claim certain policy reserves in connection with an insurance business in computing its foreign accrual property income.

New paragraph 95(2)(j.1) provides that new paragraph 95(2)(j.2) applies in respect of a particular taxation year of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer and in respect of a particular fiscal period of a partnership at the end of which a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer is a member of the partnership (which foreign affiliate or partnership is referred to as the "operator" and which particular taxation year or particular fiscal period is referred to as the "specified taxation year") if in the specified taxation year

- the operator carries on a business (referred to as a "foreign business"),
- the foreign business includes the insuring of risks,
- the foreign business is not, at any time, a "taxable Canadian business" (as newly defined in subsection 95(1)),
- the foreign business is
  - an investment business, or
  - a business the activities of which include activities deemed by paragraph 95(2)(a.2) or (b) to be a separate business, other than an active business, carried on by the affiliate, and
- in respect of the foreign business, the operator would, if it were a corporation carrying on the foreign business in Canada, be required by law to report to, and be subject to the supervision of, a regulatory authority that is the Superintendent of Financial Institutions or a similar authority of a province.

New paragraph 95(2)(j.2) provides that in computing an operator's income or loss from the foreign business for the specified taxation year and each subsequent taxation year or fiscal period in which the foreign business is carried on by the operator

- the operator is deemed to carry on the foreign business in Canada throughout that part of the specified taxation year, and of each of those subsequent taxation years or fiscal periods, in which the foreign business is carried on by the operator, and
- for the purposes of Part XIV of the Regulations,
  - the operator is deemed to be required by law to report to, and to have been subject to the supervision of, the regulatory authority referred to in subparagraph 95(2)(j.1)(v), and
  - if the operator is a life insurer and the foreign business is a life insurance business, the life insurance policies issued in the conduct of that business are deemed to be life insurance policies in Canada.

For information about the new definition "taxable Canadian business", see the commentary to subsection 95(1).

In connection with the application of these new paragraphs, note the rule in new paragraph 95(2)(k.7). For detail, see the commentary for paragraph 95(2)(k.7).

These new paragraphs apply to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after December 20, 2002. These amendments are included in the Fresh Start Section 95 Election package described [under 95(1)"taxable Canadian business" — ed.]

Absent a Fresh Start Section 95 Election by a taxpayer resident in Canada in respect of the taxpayer's foreign affiliate, subsection 1402(2) of the Regulations (which was repealed by P.C. 1999-1154, SOR/99-269, dated June 23, 1999) ensures, if the foreign affiliate of the taxpayer resident in Canada itself is the operator, that a result similar to the result afforded the foreign affiliate by new paragraphs 95(2)(j.1) and (j.2) is afforded the foreign affiliate for the 1995 and prior taxation years of the foreign affiliate of the taxpayer resident in Canada.

Related Provisions: 95(2)(k.7) — Tiers of partnerships.

(k) [change in business — fresh start rule] — where, in a particular taxation year, a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer

(i) carries on an investment business outside Canada and, in the preceding taxation year, that business was not an investment business of the affiliate (or the definition "investment business" in subsection (1) did not apply in respect of the business in the preceding taxation year), or

(ii) is deemed by paragraph (a.1), (a.2), (a.3) or (a.4) to carry on a separate business, other than an active business, and, in the preceding taxation year, that paragraph did not apply to deem the affiliate to be carrying on that separate business, for the purpose of computing the income of the affiliate from the investment business or the separate business as the case may be (in this subsection referred to as the "foreign business") for the particular year and each subsequent taxation year in which the foreign business is carried on,

(iii) the affiliate shall be deemed

(A) to have begun to carry on the foreign business in Canada at the later of the time the particular year began or the time that it began to carry on the foreign business, and

(B) to have carried on the foreign business in Canada throughout that part of the particular year and each such subsequent taxation year in which the foreign business was carried on by it,

(iv) where the foreign business of the affiliate is a business in respect of which, if the foreign business were carried on in Canada, the affiliate would be required by law to report to a regulating authority in Canada such as the Superintendent of Financial Institutions or a similar authority of a province, the affiliate shall be deemed to have been required by law to report to and to have been subject to the supervision of such regulating authority, and

(v) paragraphs 138(11.91)(c) to (f) apply to the affiliate for the particular year in respect of the foreign business as if

(A) the affiliate were the insurer referred to in subsection 138(11.91),

(B) the particular year of the affiliate were the particular year of the insurer referred to in that subsection, and

(C) the foreign business of the affiliate were the business of the insurer referred to in that subsection;

Proposed Amendment — 95(2)(k)

(k) [conditions for para. (k.1) to apply] — paragraph (k.1) applies in respect of a particular taxation year of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer and in respect of a particular fiscal period of a partnership at the end of which a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer is a member of the partnership (which foreign affiliate or partnership is referred to in this paragraph and paragraph (k.1) as the "operator" and which particular taxation year or particular fiscal period is referred to in this paragraph and paragraph (k.1) as the "specified taxation year") if

(i) in the specified taxation year, the operator carries on a business (referred to in this paragraph and, subject to paragraph (k.6), in paragraph (k.1), as a "foreign business"),

(ii) the foreign business is not, at any time in the specified taxation year, a taxable Canadian business,

(iii) in the specified taxation year, the foreign business is

(A) an investment business,

(B) a business whose activities include activities deemed by any of paragraphs (a.1) to (b) to be a separate business, other than an active business, carried on by the affiliate, or

(C) a business the income from which is included by paragraph (l) in computing the affiliate's income from property for the specified taxation year, and

(iv) in the taxation year of the affiliate or the fiscal period of the partnership that includes the day that is immediately before the beginning of the specified taxation year,

(A) the affiliate or partnership carried on the foreign business,

(B) the foreign business was not, at any time, a taxable Canadian business, and

(C) the foreign business was not described in any of clauses (iii)(A) to (C);

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 133(17), will amend para. 95(2)(k) to read as above, applicable to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after December 20, 2002.

If a taxpayer so elects in writing and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day on which the amending legislation is assented to, the amendment applies to taxation years, of all foreign affiliates of the taxpayer, that begin after 1994, except that in applying cl. 95(2)(k)(iv)(C) for taxation years, of all foreign affiliates of the taxpayer, that begin before December 21, 2002, that clause is to be read in respect of those affiliates as follows:

(C) either

(I) the foreign business was not described in any of clauses (iii)(A) to (C), or

(II) the definition "investment business" in subsection (1) did not apply in respect of the foreign business in the specified taxation year;

In applying subpara. 95(2)(k)(iv) (as enacted, before the amendment above) to taxation years, of foreign affiliates of a taxpayer, that end after 1999 and begin before December 21, 2002, that subpara. is, unless the taxpayer makes a valid election as described above, to be read as follows:

(iv) if the foreign business of the affiliate is a business in respect of which the affiliate would, if the foreign business were carried on in Canada, be required by law to report to a regulating authority in Canada such as the Superintendent of Financial Institutions or a similar authority of a province,

(A) the affiliate is deemed to be required by law to report to and to be subject to the supervision of such regulating authority, and

(B) if the affiliate is a life insurer and the foreign business of the affiliate is a life insurance business, the life insurance policies issued in the conduct of that business are deemed to be life insurance policies in Canada, and

If a taxpayer has made what would, but for this paragraph, be a valid election as described above, and the taxpayer has, on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day that is the third anniversary of the day on which the amending Act

receives Royal Assent, filed with the Minister of National Revenue a notice in writing to revoke the election, the election is deemed, otherwise than for the purpose of this paragraph, never to have been made.

Notwithstanding subsecs. 152(4) to (5) of the Act, any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year shall be made that is necessary to take an election or revocation referred to above into account.

Technical Notes: Paragraph 95(2)(k) provides fresh start rules that, in general terms, are triggered if there is one of two types of changes to the business activities of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada, namely:

- in a particular taxation year, the foreign affiliate of the taxpayer resident in Canada carries on an investment business outside Canada and, in the preceding taxation year, that business was not an investment business (as defined in subsection 95(1)) of the foreign affiliate, or
- in a particular taxation year, the foreign affiliate of the taxpayer resident in Canada is deemed by paragraph 95(2)(a.1), (a.2), (a.3) or (a.4) to carry on a separate business, other than an active business, and, in the preceding taxation year, the foreign affiliate was not deemed by that paragraph to be carrying on that separate business.

Paragraph 95(2)(k) refers to that investment business or that separate business as the "foreign business".

The fresh start rules, set out in paragraph 95(2)(k), also apply where a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada begins to carry on a particular business in the particular year and the particular business was an investment business of the foreign affiliate (or was comprised of activities deemed by paragraph 95(2)(a.1), (a.2), (a.3) or (a.4) to be a separate business, other than an active business, carried on by the foreign affiliate).

These fresh start rules apply for the purpose of computing the foreign accrual property income (FAPI), of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada in respect of the taxpayer, from a foreign business for a particular taxation year of the foreign affiliate and for each subsequent taxation year in which the foreign business is considered to be carried on. In general terms, the fresh start rules provide for the following in computing the foreign affiliate's FAPI in respect of the taxpayer from the foreign business for those years:

- The foreign affiliate is deemed to have begun to carry on the foreign business in Canada at the later of the time the particular taxation year began and the time the foreign affiliate began carrying on the foreign business. The foreign affiliate is also deemed to have carried on the foreign business in Canada throughout that part of the particular taxation year and each subsequent taxation year in which the foreign business is considered to be carried on by the foreign affiliate.
- Where the foreign business is a business in respect of which the foreign affiliate would, if the foreign business were carried on in Canada, be required by law to report to a regulating authority such as the federal Superintendent of Financial Institutions or a similar authority of a province, the foreign affiliate is deemed to have been subject to the supervision of such a regulating authority.
- Paragraphs 138(11.91)(c) to (f) apply to the foreign affiliate in respect of the foreign business as if the foreign affiliate were the insurer referred to in subsection 138(11.91), the particular taxation year were the particular year referred to in those paragraphs and the foreign business were the business of the insurer referred to in those paragraphs.

The fresh start rules in subparagraph 95(2)(k) ensure that the income of the foreign affiliate from the foreign business is calculated using Canadian tax rules. For example, the rule deeming the foreign affiliate to be subject to the supervision of a regulating authority permits the foreign affiliate to claim certain reserves in respect of insurance policies in connection with the foreign business. As well, there is a deemed disposition and reacquisition of property used or held in the foreign business immediately before the beginning of the particular taxation year. The fresh start rules ensure that income or losses accruing in prior periods do not enter into the income calculations for the foreign business in the particular taxation year or in subsequent taxation years.

A number of amendments are made to these fresh start rules. Note that paragraph 95(2)(k) is being divided into amended paragraph 95(2)(k) and new paragraph 95(2)(k.1). Amended paragraph 95(2)(k) defines the circumstances to which the fresh start rules apply, and new paragraph 95(2)(k.1) contains the substantive provisions of the fresh start rules.

Amended paragraph 95(2)(k) provides that new paragraph 95(2)(k.1) applies in respect of a particular taxation year of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada and in respect of a particular fiscal period of a partnership at the end of which a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada is a member of the partnership (which foreign affiliate or partnership is referred to as the "operator" and which particular taxation year or particular fiscal period is referred to as the "specified taxation year") if the following four conditions are met:

- in the specified taxation year, the operator carries on a business (referred to in amended paragraph 95(2)(k) and, subject to new paragraph 95(2)(k.6), in new paragraph 95(2)(k.1), as a "foreign business"),
- the foreign business is not, at any time in the specified taxation year, a "taxable Canadian business",
- in the specified taxation year, the foreign business is
  - — an investment business (clause 95(2)(k)(iii)(A)),
  - — a business the activities of which include activities deemed by any of paragraphs 95(2)(a.1) to (b) to be a separate business, other than an active business, carried on by the foreign affiliate (clause 95(2)(k)(iii)(B)), or
  - — a business the income from which is included by paragraph 95(2)(l) in computing the foreign affiliate's income from property for the specified taxation year (clause 95(2)(k)(iii)(C)),

and

- in the taxation year of the foreign affiliate, or fiscal period of the partnership, that includes the day that is immediately before the beginning of the specified taxation year)
  - — the foreign affiliate or the partnership carried on the foreign business,
  - — the foreign business was not, at any time, a "taxable Canadian business", and
  - — the foreign business was not described in any of clauses 95(2)(k)(iii)(A), (B) and (C).

In connection with the first of these conditions, see the commentary to new subparagraph 95(2)(k.6).

Letter from Dept. of Finance, January 8, 2001:

Dear [xxx]. . .

You have also requested amendments to paragraph 95(2)(k) of the Act. The purpose of these amendments would be to permit a foreign affiliate of a Canadian multinational insurer to deduct reserves in respect of foreign life insurance policies in computing its foreign accrual property income derived from carrying on a foreign life insurance business. We are sympathetic to this request. Consequently, we will recommend such amendments to the Minister of Finance. The amendments will be similar to those suggested in your letter and will be effective for taxation years ending after 1999.

Thank you for bringing these matters to our attention.

Yours sincerely,
Brian Ernewein
Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(A) to have begun to carry on the foreign business in Canada at the beginning of the specified taxation year, and

(B) to carry on the foreign business in Canada throughout that part of the specified taxation year, and of each of those subsequent taxation years or fiscal periods, in which the foreign business is carried on by the operator,

(ii) where, in respect of the foreign business, the operator would, if it were a corporation carrying on the foreign business in Canada, be required by law to report to, and be subject to the supervision of, a regulatory authority that is the Superintendent of Financial Institutions or a similar authority of a province,

(A) the operator is deemed to be required by law to report to, and to have been subject to the supervision of, such regulating authority, and

(B) if the operator is a life insurer and the foreign business is a life insurance business, the life insurance policies issued in the conduct of that business are deemed to be life insurance policies in Canada,

(iii) paragraphs 138(11.91)(c) to (e) apply to the operator for the specified taxation year in respect of the foreign business as if

(A) the operator were the insurer referred to in subsection 138(11.91),

(B) the specified taxation year of the operator were the particular taxation year of the insurer referred to in that subsection,

(C) the foreign business of the operator were the business of the insurer referred to in that subsection, and

(D) the reference in paragraph 138(11.91)(e) to "property owned by it at that time that is designated insurance property in respect of the business" were read as a reference to "property owned or held by it at that time that is used or held by it in the particular taxation year in the course of carrying on the insurance business", and

(iv) if a particular property is deemed, because of the application of subparagraph (iii) and paragraph 138(11.91)(e), to have been disposed of in the preceding taxation year by the operator (which disposition is referred to in this subparagraph as a "particular disposition" of the particular property),

(A) the amount of the foreign affiliate's income, gain or loss (which income, gain or loss is referred to in this subparagraph as the "deferred amount") derived from the operator's income, gain or loss from the particular disposition of the particular property

(I) is to be included in computing the foreign affiliate's income, gain or loss for its taxation year that includes the last day of the operator's taxation year or fiscal period in which the particular property is disposed of by the operator in a disposition that is not the particular disposition, and

(II) is not to be included in computing the foreign affiliate's income, gain or loss for its taxation year that includes the last day of the operator's taxation year that includes the time of the particular disposition of the particular property, and

(B) the portion of the income taxes paid by the foreign affiliate to, or recovered by the foreign affiliate from, the government of a country other than Canada that may reasonably be considered to relate to the deferred amount is not to be included in determining income taxes paid to or recovered in respect of any other income, gain or loss of the foreign affiliate;

Technical Notes: New paragraph 95(2)(k.1) provides that, in computing the operator's income or loss from the foreign business, and in computing the operator's capital gain or capital loss from the disposition of property used or held in the course of carrying on the foreign business, for the specified taxation year and each subsequent taxation year or fiscal period in which the foreign business is carried on by the operator,

- the operator is deemed
  - to have begun to carry on the foreign business in Canada at the beginning of the specified taxation year, and
  - to carry on the foreign business in Canada throughout that part of the specified taxation year, and of each of those subsequent taxation years or fiscal periods, in which the foreign business is carried on by the operator,

  (subparagraph 95(2)(k.1)(i))

- where, in respect of the foreign business, the operator would, if it were a corporation carrying on the foreign business in Canada, be required by law to report to, and be subject to the supervision of, a regulatory authority that is the Superintendent of Financial Institutions or a similar authority of a province,
  - the operator is deemed to have been required by law to report to, and to have been subject to the supervision of, such regulating authority, and
  - if the operator is a life insurer and the foreign business is a life insurance business, the life insurance policies issued in the conduct of that business are deemed to be life insurance policies in Canada,

  (subparagraph 95(2)(k.1)(ii))

- paragraphs 138(11.91)(c) to (e) apply to the operator for the specified taxation year in respect of the foreign business as if
  - the operator were the insurer referred to in subsection 138(11.91),

— the specified taxation year of the operator were the particular taxation year of the insurer referred to in that subsection,

— the foreign business of the operator were the business of the insurer referred to in that subsection, and

— the reference in paragraph 138(11.91)(e) to "property owned by it at that time is designated insurance property in respect of the business" were read as a reference to "property owned or held by it at that time used or held by it in the particular taxation year in the course of carrying on the insurance business", (subparagraph 95(2)(k.1)(iii))

and

- if a particular property is deemed, because of the application of subparagraph 95(2)(k.1)(iii) and paragraph 138(11.91)(e), to have been disposed of in the preceding taxation year by the operator (which disposition is referred to in this subparagraph as a "particular disposition" of the particular property),

  — the amount of the foreign affiliate's income, gain or loss (which income, gain or loss is referred to in this subparagraph as the "deferred amount") derived from the operator's income, gain or loss from the particular disposition of the particular property

    - is to be included in computing the foreign affiliate's income, gain or loss for its taxation year that includes the last day of the operator's taxation year or fiscal period in which the particular property is disposed of by the operator in a disposition that is not the particular disposition, and

    - is not to be included in computing the foreign affiliate's income, gain or loss for its taxation year that includes the last day of the operator's taxation year that includes the time of the particular disposition of the particular property, and

  — the portion of the income taxes paid by the foreign affiliate to, or recovered by the foreign affiliate from, the government of a country other than Canada that may reasonably be considered to relate to the deferred amount is not to be included in determining income taxes paid to or recovered in respect of any other income, gain or loss of the foreign affiliate.

  (subparagraph 95(2)(k.1)(iv))

In general terms, the amendments to paragraphs 95(2)(k) and (k.1) can be summarized as follows:

First, the amendments ensure that the fresh start rules apply not only if the particular business is carried on by a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada, but also if the particular business is carried on by a partnership of which a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada is a member. These amendments ensure, in the case of partnerships, that the fresh start rules will work on the basis of fiscal periods of the partnership and will therefore be relevant in the computation of the foreign affiliate 's foreign accrual property income for the foreign affiliate's taxation year that includes a fiscal period to which the fresh start rules apply. In amended paragraph 95(2)(k) and new paragraph 95(2)(k.1), the expression "operator" refers to the foreign affiliate (if the foreign affiliate directly carries on the particular business) or to the partnership (if the foreign affiliate carries on the particular business through the partnership).

Second, the amendments ensure that the fresh start rules are no longer triggered if the operator begins to carry on the particular business in the specified taxation year and did not carry on the particular business in the preceding taxation year. However, it is possible that, in such a situation, new paragraphs 95(2)(j.1) and (j.2) may apply. For further detail, see the commentary to new paragraphs 95(2)(j.1) and (j.2).

Third, the amendments ensure that the type of change in business activities that triggers the fresh start rules is a change that meets the following conditions:

- in the specified taxation year, the operator carries on a business (a "foreign business"),

- in the specified taxation year, the foreign business is — an investment business,

  — a business whose activities include activities deemed by any of paragraphs 95(2)(a.1) to (b) to be a separate business (other than an active business) carried on by the foreign affiliate, or

  — a business the income from which is included by paragraph 95(2)(l) in computing the foreign affiliate's income from property for the specified taxation year,

- in the preceding taxation year or fiscal period, the foreign affiliate or the partnership carried on the foreign business, and

- in that preceding taxation year or fiscal period, the foreign business was not described in any of clauses 95(2)(k)(iii)(A), (B) and (C).

Fourth, new paragraph 95(2)(k) provides that, in order for the fresh start rules to be triggered, the foreign business of the operator

- cannot, at any time in the specified taxation year, be a taxable Canadian business of the operator, and

- cannot, at any time in the preceding taxation year or fiscal period, have been a taxable Canadian business of the foreign affiliate or the partnership.

For more detail, see the commentary to the new definition "taxable Canadian business" in subsection 95(1).

Fifth, new paragraph 95(2)(k.1) provides that life insurance policies issued by a foreign business of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada in the conduct of that business are deemed to be life insurance policies in Canada if

- the operator would be required by law to report to the Superintendent of Financial Institutions or to a similar authority of a province in respect of the foreign business if the operator were a corporation carrying on the foreign business,

- the foreign business is a life insurance business, and

- the operator is a life insurer.

This new rule ensures that the operator is eligible to claim certain policy reserves in connection with the life insurance business.

Sixth, new paragraph 95(2)(k.1) makes it clear that, in applying paragraph 138(11.91)(e) to the fresh start rules, the reference in paragraph 138(11.91)(e) to "property owned by it at that time that is designated insurance property in respect of the business" is to be read as a reference to "property owned or held by it at that time that is used or held by the insurer in the particular taxation year in the course of carrying on the insurance business".

Seventh, consequential to the repeal of paragraph 138(11.91)(f), the reference, in the fresh start rules, to "paragraphs 138(11.91)(c) to (f)" is changed to read "paragraphs 138(11.91)(c) to (e)". For more detail, see the commentary to subsection 138(11.91).

Eighth, subparagraph 95(2)(k.1)(iv) provides that the income, gain or loss from the deemed disposition of a particular property under subparagraph 95(2)(k.1)(iii) is only to be included in computing the foreign affiliate's income, gain or loss in the taxation year in which the property is disposed of in a transaction other than the deemed disposition. The recognition of foreign income tax recoveries paid or recovered that is related to the deferred income, gain or loss is to matched with the recognition of that income, gain or loss.

New paragraphs 95(2)(k) and (k.1) apply to taxation years of foreign affiliates of a taxpayer resident in Canada that begin after December 20, 2002. These amendments are included in the Fresh Start Section 95 Election package described [under 95(1)"taxable Canadian business" — ed.]

However, note that this set of proposals sets out a number of transitional rules with respect to the application of paragraphs 95(2)(k) and (k.1).

First, in applying new paragraph 95(2)(k.1) for taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, that begin on or before February 27, 2004, that paragraph is to be read without reference to subparagraph 95(2)(k.1)(iv).

Second, in the case where the taxpayer has made a valid Fresh Start Section 95 Election, in applying new clause 95(2)(k)(iv)(C), for taxation years, of all foreign affiliates of the taxpayer, that begin before December 21, 2002, that clause is to be read in respect of those affiliates as follows:

(C) either

(I) the foreign business was not described in any of clauses (iii)(A) to (C), or

(II) the definition "investment business" in subsection (1) did not apply in respect of the foreign business in the specified taxation year;

Third, in applying existing subparagraph 95(2)(k)(iv) to taxation years, of foreign affiliates of a taxpayer, that end after 1999 and begin before December 21, 2002, that subparagraph is, unless the taxpayer makes a valid Fresh Start Section 95 Election, to be read as follows:

(iv) if the foreign business of the affiliate is a business in respect of which the affiliate would, if the foreign business were carried on in Canada, be required by law to report to a regulating authority in Canada such as the Superintendent of Financial Institutions or a similar authority of a province,

(A) the affiliate is deemed to be required by law to report to and to be subject to the supervision of such regulating authority, and

(B) if the affiliate is a life insurer and the foreign business of the affiliate is a life insurance business, the life insurance policies issued in the conduct of that business are deemed to be life insurance policies in Canada, and

Facts

Forco, a wholly-owned foreign affiliate of Canco, is deemed to carry on an investment business. The principal purpose of Forco's business is to derive income from trading or dealing in securities. The particular taxation year of Forco in respect of which paragraphs 95(2)(k) and (k.1) apply to the investment business is its taxation year ended December 31, 1995 (its "1995 taxation year"). Forco had acquired only one security for $10 million. The fair market value of the security was $12 million at the end of its taxation year that ended on December 31, 1994 (its "1994 taxation year"). Assume, for the purposes of this example, that Canco has made a valid Fresh Start Section 95 Election.

Application of paragraphs 95(2)(k) and (k.1)

Forco is deemed to have, at the end of its 1994 taxation year, disposed of all the securities used or held by it in respect of the investment business. The amount of $2 million (i.e., $12 million minus $10 million) would be added to the "earnings" of Forco in the taxation year in which it disposed of the securities. Following the deemed reacquisition of the securities at the beginning of its 1995 taxation year, Forco would have $12 million as the cost of its securities for the purposes of computing its income from the investment business. For additional detail, refer to the commentary to subsection 5907(2.9) of the Regulations.

Regulations: 5907(2.9) (computation of earnings for preceding taxation year); 5907(2.91) (property deemed disposed of and reacquired).

(k.2) [conditions for para. (k.3) to apply] — paragraph (k.3) applies in respect of a particular taxation year of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer or in respect of a particular fiscal period of a partnership at the end of which a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer is a member of the partnership (which foreign affiliate or partnership is referred to in this paragraph and paragraph (k.3) as the "operator" and which particular taxation year or particular fiscal period is referred to in this paragraph and paragraph (k.3) as the "specified taxation year") if

(i) in the taxation year of the affiliate, or fiscal period of the partnership, (which taxation year or fiscal period is referred to in this paragraph and paragraph (k.3) as "the preceding taxation year") that includes the day immediately before the beginning of the specified taxation year, the affiliate or partnership carried on a business (which is referred to in this paragraph and, subject to paragraph (k.6), in paragraph (k.3), as a "foreign business"),

(ii) the foreign business was not, at any time in the preceding taxation year, a taxable Canadian business,

(iii) in the preceding taxation year, the foreign business was

(A) an investment business,

(B) a business whose activities included activities deemed by any of paragraphs (a.1) to (b) to be a separate business, other than an active business, carried on by the affiliate, or

(C) a business the income from which is included by paragraph (l) in computing the affiliate's income from property for the preceding taxation year, and

(iv) either

(A) at any time in the specified taxation year, the operator carries on the foreign business and

(I) the foreign business is an active business that is not a taxable Canadian business, or

(II) all or substantially all of the fair market value of the property of the operator used or held by the operator in the course of carrying on the foreign business is attributable to property of the operator that is excluded property, or

(B) at no time in the specified taxation year does the operator carry on the foreign business;

Technical Notes: New paragraphs 95(2)(k.2) and (k.3) operate together and, in general terms, provide for fresh start rules that are triggered if a business carried on that is not an active business of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada (or a business of a partnership of which the foreign affiliate is a member) becomes, in a particular taxation year of the foreign affiliate or in a particular fiscal period of the partnership (as the case may be), an active business. These fresh start rules apply in computing the foreign affiliate's foreign accrual property income (FAPI) in respect of the taxpayer from that business for the preceding taxation year or fiscal period.

Paragraph 95(2)(k.2) provides that paragraph 95(2)(k.3) applies in respect of a particular taxation year of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer or in respect of a particular fiscal period of a partnership at the end of which a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer is a member of the partnership (which foreign affiliate or partnership is referred to as the "operator" and which particular taxation year or particular fiscal period is referred to as the "specified taxation year") if the following four conditions are met:

- in the preceding taxation year of the foreign affiliate or fiscal period of the partnership (which taxation year or fiscal period is referred to in this paragraph and paragraph (k.3) as the "preceding taxation year") that includes the day immediately before the beginning of the specified taxation year, the foreign affiliate or the partnership carried on a business (which is referred to in paragraph 95(2)(k.2) and, subject to paragraph (k.6), in paragraph 95(2)(k.3), as the "foreign business"),
- the foreign business was not, at any time in the preceding taxation year, a "taxable Canadian business",
- in the preceding taxation year, the foreign business was
  - an investment business (clause 95(2)(k.2)(iii)(A)),
  - a business whose activities included activities deemed by any of paragraphs 95(2)(a.1) to (b) to be a separate business, other than an active business, carried on by the affiliate (clause 95(2)(k.2)(iii)(B)), or
  - a business the income from which is included by paragraph 95(2)(l) in computing the affiliate's income from property for that preceding taxation year or fiscal period (clause 95(2)(k.2)(iii)(C)), and
- either
  - at any time in the specified taxation year the operator carries on the foreign business, and
    - the foreign business is an active business that is not a "taxable Canadian business" (subclause 95(2)(k.2)(iv)(A)(I)), or
    - all or substantially all of the fair market value of the property of the operator used or held by the operator in the course of carrying on the foreign business is attributable to property of the operator that is excluded property (subclause 95(2)(k.2)(iv)(A)(II)), or
  - at no time in the specified taxation year does the operator carry on the foreign business.

In connection with the first of these four conditions, see the commentary on new subparagraph 95(2)(k.6).

For detail on the new definition "taxable Canadian business", see the commentary to subsection 95(1).

The fresh start rules in paragraph 95(2)(k.3) provide that, in computing the operator's income or loss from the foreign business and in computing the operator's capital gain or capital loss from the disposition of property used or held in the course of carrying on the foreign business, for the preceding taxation year or fiscal period referred to in paragraph 95(2)(k.2) and for the specified taxation year of the operator and the operator's subsequent taxation years or fiscal periods,

- the operator is deemed to have ceased to carry on the foreign business in Canada at the beginning of the specified taxation year, and
- subject to subparagraph 95(2)(k.3)(iii), paragraphs 138(11.91)(c) to (e) apply to the operator for the specified taxation year in respect of the foreign business as if
  - the operator were the "insurer" referred to in subsection 138(11.91),
  - the specified taxation year of the operator were the "particular taxation year" of the insurer referred to in that subsection,
  - the foreign business of the operator were the business of the insurer referred to in that subsection,
  - the reference in paragraph 138(11.91)(e) to "property owned by it at that time that is designated insurance property in respect of the business" were read as a reference to "property owned or held by it at that time that is used or held by the insurer in the particular taxation year in the course of carrying on the insurance business", and
  - where, under subparagraph 95(2)(k.3)(iii), the taxpayer elects in prescribed manner and within the prescribed time (see proposed new section 5918 of the Regulations), to have that subparagraph apply in respect of every property that is deemed, because of the application of subparagraph 95(2)(k.3)(ii) and paragraph 138(11.91)(e), to have been disposed of in the specified taxation year by the operator (each such property referred to as the "particular property" and each such disposition referred to as the "particular disposition" of the particular property"), the following rules apply:
    - the amount of the foreign affiliate's income, gain or loss (which income, gain or loss is referred to as the "deferred amount") derived from the operator's income, gain or loss from a particular disposition of a particular property
      - is to be included in computing the foreign affiliate's foreign accrual property income in respect of the taxpayer for the foreign affiliate's taxation year that includes the last of the operator's taxation year or fiscal period in which the particular property is disposed of by the operator in a disposition that is not the particular disposition, and
      - is not to be included in computing the foreign affiliate's foreign accrual property income in respect of the taxpayer for the foreign affiliate's taxation year that includes the last day of the operator's taxation year or fiscal period that includes the time of the particular disposition of the particular property, and
    - the portion, of the income taxes paid by the foreign affiliate to, or recovered by the foreign affiliate from, the government of a country other than Canada that may reasonably be considered to relate to the deferred amount is not to be included in determining income taxes paid to or recovered in respect of any other income, gain or loss of the foreign affiliate.

Paragraphs 95(2)(k.2) and (k.3) ensure that, if a foreign business that is an active business in the specified taxation year was not an active business in the immediately preceding taxation year or fiscal period, as the case may be, any accrued gains will be included in computing the FAPI of the foreign affiliate in that preceding taxation year or fiscal period. The active business income of the foreign affiliate will reflect income, gains and losses accruing in the specified taxation year and in subsequent taxation years or fiscal periods, as the case may be. The reference, in subsection 95(2)(k.3), to paragraphs 138(11.91)(c) to (e), ensures that, immediately before the beginning of the specified taxation year, there is a deemed disposition and deemed reacquisition of property used or held in the foreign business.

New paragraphs 95(2)(k.2) and (k.3) apply to taxation years of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer that begin after December 20, 2002. However, this set of proposals provides that, in applying new paragraph 95(2)(k.2) for taxation years of a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, that begin on or before February 27, 2004, that paragraph is to be read without reference to subclause 95(2)(k.2)(iv)(A)(II).

Example

Facts

Forco, a wholly-owned foreign affiliate of Canco, carried on a particular business that was an investment business throughout its taxation year that ended December 31, 2004. Forco is resident in a country that is a designated treaty country for the purposes of Part LIX of the Regulations. In its taxation year that ended December 31, 2005 (its "2005 taxation year"), business activities constitute an active business.

At the end of its 2004 taxation year, Forco owned capital property with a cost amount of $6 million, and inventory with a cost amount of $2 million, that was property used or held in the course of carrying on this business. At the end of that taxation year, the fair market value of Forco's capital property was $10 million and the fair market value of its inventory was $4 million.

Application of paragraphs 95(2)(k.2) and (k.3)

Forco would be deemed to have, immediately before the end of its 2004 taxation year, disposed of all of its property for proceeds equal to fair market value of that property at that time.

In connection with the deemed disposition of the capital property, Forco would be deemed to have a capital gain of $4 million (i.e., $10 million minus $6 million). Therefore, the taxable capital gain would be $2 million. Subject to a taxpayer election described below, the $2 million of taxable capital gains will be included in computing Forco's FAPI for the 2004 taxation year. Following the deemed reacquisition of the capital property at the end of its 2004 taxation year, Forco would have a cost in the amount of $10 million for the capital property.

Subject to a taxpayer election described below, in connection with the deemed disposition of the inventory, Forco would be deemed to have income of $2 million that would be included in computing the foreign accrual property income of Forco for its 2004 taxation year. Following the deemed reacquisition of the inventory at the end of its 2004 taxation year, Forco would have a cost in the amount of $4 million for the inventory.

For fresh starts in taxation years of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada commencing after December 20, 2002, where the taxpayer elects (subparagraph 95(2)(k.3)(iv)), the gain and income arising because of the application of paragraph 95(2)(k.3) can be recognized by the foreign affiliate in the year the property is disposed of by foreign affiliate in a disposition other a disposition deemed, because of the application of subparagraph 95(2)(k.3)(ii) and paragraph 138(11.91)(e), to have occurred.

Related Provisions: 95(2)(k.7) — Tiers of partnerships.

(k.3) [fresh start rule where business becomes active business] — if this paragraph applies in respect of a specified taxation year of an operator, in computing the operator's income or loss from the foreign business, and in computing the operator's capital gain or capital loss from the disposition of property used or held in the course of carrying on the foreign business, for the preceding taxation year or fiscal period referred to in paragraph (k.2) and for the specified taxation year of the operator and the operator's subsequent taxation years or fiscal periods

(i) the operator is deemed to have ceased to carry on the foreign business in Canada at the beginning of the specified taxation year,

(ii) subject to subparagraph (iii), paragraphs 138(11.91)(c) to (e) apply to the operator for the specified taxation year in respect of the foreign business as if

(A) the operator were the insurer referred to in subsection 138(11.91),

(B) the specified taxation year of the operator were the particular taxation year of the insurer referred to in that subsection,

(C) the foreign business of the operator were the business of the insurer referred to in that subsection,

(D) the reference in paragraph 138(11.91)(e) to "property owned by it at that time that is designated insurance property in respect of the business" were read as a reference to "property owned or held by it at that time that is used or held by it in the particular taxation year in the course of carrying on the insurance business", and

(iii) where the taxpayer so elects, in prescribed manner and within the prescribed time, to have this subparagraph apply in respect of each property that is deemed, because of the application of subparagraph (ii) and paragraph 138(11.91)(e), to have been disposed of in the specified taxation year by the operator (each such property referred to in this subparagraph as a "particular property" and each such disposition of a particular property referred to in this subparagraph as a "particular disposition" of the particular property)

(A) the amount of the foreign affiliate's income, gain or loss (which income, gain or loss is referred to in this subparagraph as the "deferred amount") derived from the operator's income, gain or loss from a particular disposition of a particular property

(I) is to be included in computing the foreign affiliate's foreign accrual property income in respect of the taxpayer for the foreign affiliate's taxation year that includes the last day of the operator's taxation year or fiscal period in which the particular property is disposed of by the operator in a disposition that is not the particular disposition, and

(II) is not to be included in computing the foreign affiliate's foreign accrual property income in respect of the taxpayer for the foreign affiliate's taxation year that includes the last day of the operator's taxation year or fiscal period that includes the time of the particular disposition of the particular property, and

(B) the portion of the income taxes paid by the foreign affiliate to, or recovered by the foreign affiliate from, the government of a country other than Canada that may reasonably be considered to relate to the deferred amount is not to be included in determining income taxes paid to or recovered in respect of any other income, gain or loss of the foreign affiliate;

Technical Notes: See under 95(2)(k.2) above.

Related Provisions: 95(2)(k.7) — Tiers of partnerships; 95(2)(y) — Meaning of "government of a country".

Regulations: 5907(2.91) (property deemed disposed of and reacquired); 5918 (prescribed manner of making election under 95(2)(k.3)(iii)).

(k.4) [fresh start rule where income partly taxed in Canada] — if at any time a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada, or a partnership at the end of the fiscal period of which includes that time a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada is a member of the partnership, (which foreign affiliate or partnership is referred to in this paragraph as the "operator"), carries on a business both outside Canada and in Canada and income from the particular part of that business that is carried on in Canada is income from a taxable Canadian business, the following rules apply for the purposes of paragraphs (k) to (k.3):

(i) the particular part of the business is deemed to be, at that time, a separate business,

(ii) the assets used, or held, at that time primarily in the course of carrying on the particular part of the business are deemed to be, at that time, used or held in the course of carrying on the separate business,

(iii) any liability incurred, and any reserve established, at that time in the course of carrying on the particular part of the business are deemed to be, at that time, incurred or established in the course of carrying on the separate business, and

(iv) the transactions conducted at that time in the particular part of the business are deemed to be transactions conducted, at that time, in the separate business;

Technical Notes: The fresh start rules provided for in new paragraphs 95(2)(k) and (k.1) and in new paragraphs 95(2)(k.2) and (k.3), respectively, do not apply to a business the income from which is subject to tax under Part I of the Act. New paragraph 95(2)(k.4) provides for a rule to deal with the situation where income from part of the business is subject to tax under Part I of the Act.

New paragraph 95(2)(k.4) provides that, if at any time a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada, or a partnership at the end of the fiscal period of which includes that time a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada is a member of the partnership, (which foreign affiliate or partnership is referred to as the "operator"), carries on a business both outside Canada and in Canada and income from that particular part of that business that is carried on in Canada is income from a taxable Canadian business, the following rules apply for the purposes of paragraphs 95(2)(k) to (k.3):

- the particular part of the business is deemed to be, at that time, a separate business,
- the assets used, or held, at that time primarily in the course of carrying on the particular part of the business are deemed to be, at that time, used or held in the course of carrying on the separate business,
- any liability incurred, and any reserve established, at that time in the course of carrying on the particular part of the business are deemed to be, at that time, incurred or established in the course of carrying on the separate business, and
- the transactions conducted at that time in the particular part of the business are deemed to be transactions conducted, at that time, in the separate business.

New paragraph 95(2)(k.4) applies to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after December 20, 2002. This new paragraph is included in the Fresh Start Section 95 Election package described [under 95(1)"taxable Canadian business" — ed.]

Related Provisions: 95(2)(k.7) — Tiers of partnerships; 253 — Whether business carried on in Canada.

(k.5) [conditions for para. (k.6) to apply] — paragraph (k.6) applies for the purposes of paragraphs (k.1) and (k.3) in respect of a particular business of an operator if

(i) the particular business is the operator's foreign business for the specified taxation year described in paragraph (k) or for the preceding taxation year described in subparagraph (k.2)(i), and

(ii) the activities of the particular business for that specified or preceding taxation year include particular activities deemed by any of paragraphs (a.1) to (b) to be a separate business, other than an active business, carried on by the foreign affiliate for that specified or preceding taxation year and the particular activities were not all the activities of the particular business in that specified or preceding taxation year;

Technical Notes: New paragraph 95(2)(k.6), in combination with new paragraph 95(2)(k.5), provides application rules for the purposes of new paragraphs 95(2)(k.1) and (k.3).

New paragraph 95(2)(k.5) provides that new paragraph 95(2)(k.6) applies for the purpose of paragraphs 95(2)(k.1) and (k.3) in respect of a particular business of an operator if

- the particular business is the operator's foreign business for that specified or preceding taxation year, and
- the activities of the particular business for that specified or preceding taxation year include particular activities deemed by any of paragraphs 95(2)(a.1) to (b) to be a separate business, other than an active business, carried on by the foreign affiliate and the particular activities were not all the activities of the particular business in that specified or preceding taxation year.

New subparagraph 95(2)(k.6) provides that, in applying paragraphs 95(2)(k.1) and (k.3),

- the part of the particular business that consists of activities deemed by any of paragraphs 95(2)(a.1) to (b) to be a separate business, other than an active business, carried on by the foreign affiliate for a taxation year or fiscal period referred to in paragraph 95(2)(k.1) or (k.3), of the operator, is deemed to be the operator's foreign business carried on in that taxation year or fiscal period (subparagraph 95(2)(k.6)(i)),
- the assets used or held by the operator primarily in the course of carrying on activities deemed by any of paragraphs 95(2)(a.1) to (b) to be a separate business, other than an active business, carried on by the foreign affiliate for a taxation year or fiscal period, referred to in paragraph 95(2)(k) or (k.2), of the operator, are deemed to be assets used or held by the operator in the course of carrying on the foreign business in that taxation year or fiscal period (subparagraph 95(2)(k.6)(ii)),
- the portion of the liabilities incurred and the portion of the reserves established, in the course of carrying on activities deemed by any of paragraphs 95(2)(a.1) to (b) to be a separate business, other than an active business, carried on by the foreign affiliate for a taxation year or fiscal period, referred to in paragraph 95(2)(k) or (k.2), of the operator, are deemed to be liabilities incurred and reserves established in the course of carrying on the foreign business in that taxation year or fiscal period (subparagraph 95(2)(k.6)(iii)), and
- subject to subparagraphs 95(2)(k.6)(ii) and (iii), the transactions conducted in the course of carrying on activities deemed by any of paragraphs (a.1) to (b) to be a separate business, other than an active business, carried on by the foreign affiliate for a taxation year or fiscal period, referred to in paragraph 95(2)(k) or (k.2), of the operator, are, to the extent that those transactions relate to those activities, deemed to be transactions conducted in the course of carrying on the foreign business in that taxation year or fiscal period (subparagraph 95(2)(k.6)(iv)).

New paragraphs 95(2)(k.5) and (k.6) apply to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after December 20, 2002.

These new paragraphs are included in the Fresh Start Section 95 Election package described [under 95(1)"taxable Canadian business" — ed.]

Related Provisions: 95(2)(k.7) — Tiers of partnerships.

(k.6) [application rule for para. (k.1) or (k.3)] — if this paragraph applies in respect of the particular business of the operator, in applying paragraphs (k.1) and (k.3),

(i) that part of the particular business that consists of activities deemed by any of paragraphs (a.1) to (b) to be a separate business, other than an active business, carried on by the foreign affiliate for a taxation year or for a fiscal period, referred to in paragraph (k.1) or (k.3), of the operator, is deemed to be the operator's foreign business carried on in that taxation year or fiscal period,

(ii) the assets used or held by the operator primarily in the course of carrying on activities deemed by any of paragraphs (a.1) to (b) to be a separate business, other than an active business, carried on by the foreign affiliate for a taxation year or for a fiscal period, referred to in paragraph (k) or (k.2), of the operator, are deemed to be assets used or held by the operator in the course of carrying on the foreign business in that taxation year or fiscal period,

(iii) the portion of the liabilities incurred, and the portion of the reserves established, in the course of carrying onactivities deemed by any of paragraphs (a.1) to (b) to be a separate business, other than an active business, carried on by the foreign affiliate for a taxation year or for a fiscal period, referred to in paragraph (k) or (k.2), of the operator, are deemed to be liabilities incurred and reserves established in the course of carrying on the foreign business in that taxation year or fiscal period, and

(iv) subject to subparagraphs (ii) and (iii), the transactions conducted in the course of carrying on activities deemed by any of paragraphs (a.1) to (b) to be a separate business, other than an active business, carried on by the foreign affiliate for a taxation year or for a fiscal period, referred to in paragraph (k) or (k.2), of the operator, are, to the extent that those transactions relate to those activities, deemed to be transactions conducted in the course of carrying on the foreign business in that taxation year or fiscal period;

Technical Notes: See under para. (k.5) above.

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 133(17), will add paras. 95(2)(k.1) to (k.6), applicable to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after December 20, 2002, except that in applying paras. 95(2)(k.1) and (k.2) for taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, that begin before February 28, 2004, para. (k.1) is to be read without reference to subpara. (iv), and para. (k.2) is to be read without reference to subcl. (iv)(A)(II).

If a taxpayer so elects in writing and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day on which the amending legislation is assented to, paras. (k.1) and (k.4)–(k.6) apply to taxation years, of all foreign affiliates of the taxpayer, that begin after 1994, with the exception noted above for (k.1).

If a taxpayer has made what would, but for this paragraph, be a valid election as described above, and the taxpayer has, on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day that is the third anniversary of the day on which the amending Act receives Royal Assent, filed with the Minister of National Revenue a notice in writing to revoke the election, the election is deemed, otherwise than for the purpose of this paragraph, never to have been made.

Notwithstanding subsecs. 152(4) to (5) of the Act, any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year shall be made that is necessary to take an election or revocation referred to above into account.

Related Provisions: 95(2)(k.7) — Tiers of partnerships.

Proposed Addition — 95(2)(k.7)

(k.7) [tiers of partnerships] — if a person is (or is deemed by this paragraph to be) a member of a partnership and that partnership is a member of another partnership,

(i) in applying paragraphs (a.1) to (b), (j.1) to (k.6) and (l) and the definition "taxable Canadian business" in subsection (1), the person is deemed to be a member of the other partnership, and

(ii) in applying the definition "taxable Canadian business" in subsection (1), the person's share of the income or loss of the other partnership is deemed to be equal to the portion of that income or loss to which the person is directly or indirectly entitled;

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 133(17), will add para. 95(2)(k.7), applicable to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after December 20, 2002.

If a taxpayer so elects in writing and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day on which the amending legislation is assented to, the amendment applies to taxation years, of all foreign affiliates of the taxpayer, that begin after 1994.

If a taxpayer has made what would, but for this paragraph, be a valid election as described above, and the taxpayer has, on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day that is the third anniversary of the day on which the amending Act receives Royal Assent, filed with the Minister of National Revenue a notice in writing to revoke the election, the election is deemed, otherwise than for the purpose of this paragraph, never to have been made.

Notwithstanding subsecs. 152(4) to (5) of the Act, any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year shall be made that is necessary to take an election or revocation referred to above into account.

Technical Notes: New paragraph 95(2)(k.7) contains rules for the purposes of applying paragraphs 95(2)(a.1) to (b), (j.1) and (j.2), (k) to (k.6) and (l) and the definition "taxable Canadian business" in subsection 95(1).

This new paragraph provides that, if a person is (or is deemed by that paragraph to be) a member of a partnership and that partnership is a member of another partnership,

(i) in applying paragraphs 95(2)(a.1) to (b), (j.1) and (j.2), (k) to (k.6) and (l) and the definition "taxable Canadian business" in subsection 95(1), the person is deemed to be a member of the other partnership, and

(ii) in applying the definition "taxable Canadian business" in subsection 95(1), the person's share of the income or loss of the other partnership is deemed to be equal to the portion of that income or loss to which the person is directly or indirectly entitled.

Note that these deeming rules do not deem the actual or previously-deemed member not to be a member, nor do they deem such a member not to have the share of the income or loss.

New paragraph 95(2)(k.7) applies to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after December 20, 2002. This new paragraph is included in the Fresh Start Section 95 Election package described [under 95(1)"taxable Canadian business" — ed.]

(l) [trading or dealing in debt] — in computing the income from property for a taxation year of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer there shall be included the income of the affiliate for the year from a business (other than an investment business of the affiliate) the principal purpose of which is to derive income from trading or dealing in indebtedness (which for the purpose of this paragraph includes the earning of interest on indebtedness) other than

(i) indebtedness owing by persons with whom the affiliate deals at arm's length who are resident in the country in which the affiliate was formed or continued and exists and is governed and in which the business is principally carried on, or

(ii) trade accounts receivable owing by persons with whom the affiliate deals at arm's length, unless

(iii) the business is carried on by the affiliate as a foreign bank, a trust company, a credit union, an insurance corporation or a trader or dealer in securities or commodities, the activities of which are regulated in the country under whose laws the affiliate was formed or continued and exists and is governed and in which the business is principally carried on, and

Proposed Amendment — 95(2)(l)(iii)

(iii) the business is carried on by the affiliate as a foreign bank, a trust company, a credit union, an insurance corporation or a trader or dealer in securities or commodities, the activities of which are regulated under the laws

(A) of each country in which the business is carried on through a permanent establishment (as defined by regulation) in that country and of the country under whose laws the affiliate is governed and any of exists, was (unless the affiliate was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or was last continued,

(B) of the country in which the business is principally carried on, or

(C) if the affiliate is related to a non-resident corporation, of the country under whose laws that non-resident corporation is governed and any of exists, was (unless that non-resident corporation was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or was last continued, if those regulating laws are recognized under the laws of the country in which the business is principally carried on and all of those countries are members of the European Union, and

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 133(18), will amend subpara. 95(2)(l)(iii) to read as above, in force on Royal Assent.

Technical Notes: Paragraph 95(2)(l) includes in the income, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, from property the affiliate's income derived from a business the principal purpose of which is to derive income from trading or dealing in certain indebtedness. Where the business of the affiliate is described in subparagraph 95(2)(l)(iii) and the taxpayer is described in subparagraph 95(2)(l)(iv), paragraph 95(2)(l) does not apply to the affiliate.

Subparagraph 95(2)(l)(iii) refers to a business that is carried on by the affiliate as a foreign bank, a trust company, a credit union, an insurance corporation or a trader or dealer in securities or commodities, the activities of which are regulated in the country under whose laws the affiliate was formed or continued and exists and is governed and in which the business is principally carried on.

Subparagraph 95(2)(l)(iii) is amended to refer to a business that is carried on by the affiliate as a foreign bank, a trust company, a credit union, an insurance corporation or a trader or dealer in securities or commodities, the activities of which are regulated under the laws

- of each country in which the business is carried on through a permanent establishment (as defined by proposed new section 8202 of the Regulations) in that country and of the country under whose laws the affiliate is governed and any of exists, was (unless the affiliate was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or was last continued,
- of the country in which the business is principally carried on, or
- if the affiliate is related to a non-resident corporation, of the country under whose laws that non-resident corporation is governed and any of exists, was (unless that non-resident corporation was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or was last continued, if those regulating laws are recognized under the laws of the country in which the business is principally carried on and all of those countries are members of the European Union.

Amended subparagraph 95(2)(l)(iii) applies to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after 1999.

Related Provisions: 253 — Whether business carried on in Canada.

(iv) the taxpayer is

(A) a bank, a trust company, a credit union, an insurance corporation or a trader or dealer in securities or commodities resident in Canada, the business activities of which are subject by law to the supervision of a regulating authority such as the Superintendent of Financial Institutions or a similar authority of a province,

(B) a subsidiary wholly-owned corporation of a corporation described in clause (A), or

(C) a corporation of which a corporation described in clause (A) is a subsidiary wholly-owned corporation; and

Related Provisions: 95(2)(k.7) — Tiers of partnerships.

Regulations: 8202 (meaning of "permanent establishment" for proposed 95(2)(l)(iii)).

(m) ["qualifying interest"] — a taxpayer has a qualifying interest in respect of a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer at any time if, at that time, the taxpayer owned

(i) not less than 10% of the issued and outstanding shares (having full voting rights under all circumstances) of the affiliate, and

(ii) shares of the affiliate having a fair market value of not less than 10% of the fair market value of all the issued and outstanding shares of the affiliate and for the purpose of this paragraph

(iii) where, at any time, shares of a corporation are owned or are deemed for the purposes of this paragraph to be owned by another corporation (in this paragraph referred to as the "holding corporation"), those shares shall be deemed to be owned at that time by each shareholder of the holding corporation in a proportion equal to the proportion of all such shares that

(A) the fair market value of the shares of the holding corporation owned at that time by the shareholder

is of

(B) the fair market value of all the issued shares of the holding corporation outstanding at that time,

(iv) where, at any time, shares of a corporation are property of a partnership or are deemed for the purposes of this paragraph to be property of a partnership, those shares shall be deemed to be owned at that time by each member of the partnership in a proportion equal to the proportion of all such shares that

(A) the member's share of the income or loss of the partnership for its fiscal period that includes that time

is of

(B) the income or loss of the partnership for its fiscal period that includes that time and for the purpose of this subparagraph, where the income and loss of the partnership for its fiscal period that includes that time are nil, that proportion shall be computed as if the partnership had income for the period in the amount of $1,000,000, and

(v) where, at any time, a person is a holder of convertible property issued by the affiliate before June 23, 1994 the terms of which confer on the holder the right to exchange the convertible property for shares of the affiliate and the taxpayer elects in its return of income for its first taxation year that ends after 1994 to have the provisions of this subparagraph apply to the taxpayer in respect of all the convertible property issued by the affiliate and outstanding at that time, each holder shall, in respect of the convertible property held by it at that time, be deemed to have, immediately before that time,

(A) exchanged the convertible property for shares of the affiliate, and

(B) acquired shares of the affiliate in accordance with the terms and conditions of the convertible property.

Regulations: 5907(1)"exempt loss"(c)(ii)(H)(IV) (exempt loss).

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-392: Meaning of term "share" (archived).

Proposed Addition — 95(2)(n)–(y)

(n) ["qualifying interest"] — in applying paragraphs (2)(a) and (g) and subsections (2.2) and (2.21) and in applying paragraph (d) of the definition "exempt earnings", and paragraph (c) of the definition "exempt loss", in subsection 5907(1) of the Regulations, a non-resident corporation is deemed to be, at any time, a foreign affiliate of a particular corporation resident in Canada, and a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation in respect of which the particular corporation has a qualifying interest, if at that time

(i) the non-resident corporation is a foreign affiliate of another corporation that is resident in Canada and that is related (otherwise than because of a right referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b)) to the particular corporation, and

(ii) that other corporation has a qualifying interest in respect of the non-resident corporation;

Technical Notes: Paragraph 95(2)(a) includes, in computing the income from an active business for a taxation year of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada in respect of which the taxpayer has a "qualifying interest" throughout the year, certain amounts (described in the various subparagraphs of paragraph 95(2)(a)) that would otherwise be the foreign affiliate's income from property.

For example, subparagraph 95(2)(a)(ii) deals with the situation where the foreign affiliate derives income from certain amounts paid or payable to it by another foreign affiliate of the taxpayer in respect of which the taxpayer has a qualifying interest throughout the year (or from a partnership of which that other foreign affiliate is a member at the end of the year).

Paragraph 95(2)(m) determines whether a taxpayer has a "qualifying interest" in respect of a non-resident corporation that is a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer. This paragraph will not apply if the non-resident corporation is not a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer.

New paragraph 95(2)(n) accommodates a wider variety of corporate structures where the taxpayer has an indirect interest in a non-resident corporation.

New paragraph 95(2)(n) provides that, in applying paragraphs 95(2)(a) and (g) and subsections 95(2.2) and (2.21) and in applying paragraph (d) of the definition "exempt earnings", and paragraph (c) of the definition "exempt loss", in subsection 5907(1) of the Regulations, a non-resident corporation is deemed to be, at any time, a foreign affiliate of a particular corporation resident in Canada, and a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation resident in Canada in respect of which the particular corporation resident in Canada has a qualifying interest, if at that time

- the non-resident corporation is a foreign affiliate of another corporation that is resident in Canada and that is related (otherwise than because of a right referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b)) to the particular corporation, and
- that other corporation has a qualifying interest in respect of the non-resident corporation.

New paragraph 95(2)(n) applies to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that end after 1999. Where the taxpayer elects in writing and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day on which these amendments are assented to, this new paragraph applies to the taxation years, of all foreign affiliates of the taxpayer, that begin after 1994.

Example

Facts:

1. Canco1 is a corporation resident in Canada.

2. FA1 is a non-resident corporation. Canco1 owns all of the issued and outstanding shares in FA1.

3. Canco2 is a corporation resident in Canada. Canco1 owns all of the issued and outstanding shares in Canco2.

4. FA2 is a non-resident corporation. Canco2 owns all of the issued and outstanding shares of FA2.

Application of paragraph 95(2)(n):

In the absence of paragraph 95(2)(n), FA1 would not be a "foreign affiliate of Canco2 in respect of which Canco2 has a qualifying interest" because FA1 is not a foreign affiliate of Canco2 within the meaning of the definition "foreign affiliate" in subsection 95(1). Paragraph 95(2)(m) is of no assistance in this regard. Thus, income derived by FA2 from amounts paid or payable to it by FA1 could not satisfy subparagraph 95(2)(a)(ii) in respect of Canco2.

Under paragraph 95(2)(n), and only for the limited purposes outlined in paragraph 95(2)(n), FA1 is deemed to be a foreign affiliate of Canco2 and is deemed to be a foreign affiliate of Canco2 in respect of which Canco2 has a qualifying interest because

- Canco1 and Canco2 are related,
- FA1 is a foreign affiliate of Canco1, and

- Canco1 has, because of paragraph 95(2)(m), a qualifying interest in respect of FA1.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, October 5, 2001:

Dear [xxx]:

I am writing in reply to your letter dated September 6, 2001 to Mr. Wallace G. Conway in which you requested an amendment to subsection 95(2) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act").

Paragraph 95(2)(a) deems certain amounts to be active business income of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer which would otherwise be the affiliate's income from property. In order for income from property to be deemed to be active business income, various tests described in that paragraph must be met. One of the required tests is that the taxpayer's interest in respect of the affiliate must be a "qualifying interest" throughout the affiliate's relevant taxation year. If the affiliate's income is active business income (rather than income from property), then the affiliate's income would not be included in computing foreign accrual property income (FAPI) of the affiliate for the purposes of the FAPI rules in the Act.

In your letter, you expressed the concern that paragraph 95(2)(a) of the Act does not deal with situations where a taxpayer resident in Canada owns its foreign affiliates indirectly through two or more corporations resident in Canada and, as a result, while all the corporations may be related to one another, one or more of non-resident corporations may not be foreign affiliates of a particular corporation resident in Canada. You noted that this may result in certain payments made between non-resident corporations that are related to a taxpayer resident in Canada not having the benefit of the rule in paragraph 95(2)(a). You are asking that we recommend an appropriate amendment to address this issue.

We agree that this issue should be addressed. We are therefore prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that section 95 of the Act be amended. The recommended amendment to section 95 would provide that a non-resident corporation is deemed, for the purpose of paragraph 95(2)(a), to be, at a particular time, a foreign affiliate of a particular corporation resident in Canada in respect of which the particular corporation has a qualifying interest if, at the particular time,

- the non-resident corporation is a foreign affiliate of another corporation that is resident in Canada and that is related (otherwise than because of a right referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b)) to the particular corporation, and
- that other corporation has a qualifying interest in respect of the non-resident corporation.

If this recommendation is acted upon, I would anticipate that the amendment would be included in the next technical bill.

We will recommend that the amendment apply to taxation years of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer that begin after the date of the release of the draft of the technical bill. However, where the taxpayer so elects in respect of all the foreign affiliates of the taxpayer that begin after 1994, the amendments will apply to taxation years of these affiliates of the taxpayer that begin after 1994 and notwithstanding subsections 152(4) and (5) of the Act any assessment of a taxpayer's tax payable under the Act for any of those taxation years shall be made that is necessary to take into account the application of the amendments. The ability to elect to have the amendments apply to these earlier taxation years will be contingent on the taxpayer electing to have other amendments to the foreign affiliate rules to be included in the technical bill apply to the taxpayer's foreign affiliates for these earlier taxation years. We cannot provide any more details regarding the election provisions until the release of the draft of the technical bill.

Thank you for writing.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein

Letter from Dept. of Finance, March 22, 2001:

Dear [xxx]

We are responding to your letter of February 27, 2001 concerning what you feel is an anomaly in paragraph 95(2)(m) of the Act.

Paragraph 95(2)(m) of the Act defines when a taxpayer has a qualifying interest in a foreign affiliate. This is relevant for the purposes of paragraph 95(2)(a) of the Act. You are concerned that although the qualifying interest test in paragraph 95(2)(m) looks through holding corporations to include indirect interests, it does not include any direct or indirect interests in a foreign affiliate of a Canadian parent or sister corporation.

After reviewing your submission and example therein we are prepared to recommend an amendment to the Minister of Finance. The amendment would provide that, for the purposes of paragraph 95(2)(a) of the Act, where a non-resident corporation is a foreign affiliate of two or more corporations resident in Canada that are related (otherwise than because of a right referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b)) and one of those related corporations has a qualifying interest in the foreign affiliate, each of those related corporations will be considered to have a qualifying interest in the foreign affiliate. The amendment would be applicable for the 2001 and subsequent taxation years.

Thank you for bringing this matter to our attention.

Yours sincerely,
Brian Ernewein
Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(o) ["qualifying member"] — a particular person is a qualifying member of a partnership at a particular time if, at that time, the particular person is a member of the partnership and

(i) throughout the period, in the fiscal period of the partnership that includes the particular time, during which the member was a member of the partnership, the particular person is, on a regular, continuous and substantial basis

(A) actively engaged in those activities, of the principal business of the partnership carried on in that fiscal period by the partnership, that are other than activities connected with the provision of or the acquisition of funds required for the operation of that principal business, or

(B) actively engaged in those activities, of a particular business carried on in that fiscal period by the particular person (otherwise than as a member of a partnership) that is similar to the principal business carried on in that fiscal period by the partnership, that are other than activities connected with the provision of or the acquisition of funds required for the operation of the particular business, or

(ii) throughout the period, in the fiscal period of the partnership that includes the particular time, during which the member was a member of the partnership

(A) the total of the fair market value of all partnership interests in the partnership owned by the particular person was equal to or greater than 1% of the total of the fair market value of all partnership interests in the partnership owned by all members of the partnership, and

(B) the total of the fair market value of all partnership interests in the partnership owned by the particular person or persons (other than trusts) related to the particular person was equal to or greater than 10% of the total of the fair market value of all partnership interests in the partnership owned by all members of the partnership;

Technical Notes: New paragraph 95(2)(o) defines the expression "qualifying member" of a partnership. This new definition is relevant for the amended definition "investment business" in subsection 95(1) and for amended subparagraph 95(2)(a)(ii). For more detail, see the commentaries to subsection 95(1) and paragraph 95(2)(a).

The definition "qualifying member" in paragraph 95(2)(o) is also the basis for the new definition "qualifying member" in subsection 248(1). That definition is relevant for the purpose of the new definition "exempt earnings" in new subsection 5907(1) of the Regulations. For more detail, see the commentary to subsection 248(1) and subsection 5907(1) of the Regulations.

New paragraph 95(2)(o) provides that a particular person is a "qualifying member" of a partnership at a particular time if, at the particular time, the particular person is a member of the partnership and

- throughout the period, in the fiscal period of the partnership that includes the particular time, during which the member is a member of the partnership, the particular person is, on a regular, continuous and substantial basis
  - — actively engaged in those activities, of the principal business of the partnership carried on in that fiscal period by the partnership, that are other than activities connected with the provision of or the acquisition of funds required for the operation of that principal business (clause 95(2)(o)(i)(A)), or
  - — actively engaged in those activities, of a particular business carried on in that fiscal period by the particular person (otherwise than as a member of a partnership) that is similar to the principal business carried on in that fiscal period by the partnership, that are other than activities connected with the provision of or the acquisition of funds required for the operation of the particular business (clause 95(2)(o)(i)(B)), or
- throughout the period, in the fiscal period of the partnership that includes the particular time, during which the member was a member of the partnership

Notwithstanding subsecs. 152(4) to (5) of the Act, any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year shall be made that is necessary to take an election or revocation referred to in para. (m), (p), (r), (s) or (t) into account.

Proposed Amendment — Extension of production sharing rules to foreign affiliate systems

Letter from Dept. of Finance, October 23, 2001: See under Reg. 5910.

History: The portion of para. 95(2)(a.3) before subpara. (iii) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 73(5), applicable to taxation years of foreign affiliates that begin after 1999 except that, where a taxpayer so elects in writing and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxation year that includes June 14, 2001, para. 95(2)(a.3) applies to taxation years, of all of the taxpayer's foreign affiliates, that begin after 1994 except that, where there has been a change in the taxation year of a particular foreign affiliate of a taxpayer in 1994 and after February 22, 1994, the enacted provisions apply to taxation years of the particular foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that end after 1994, unless

(a) the particular foreign affiliate had requested that change in the taxation year in writing before February 22, 1994 from the income taxation authority of the country in which it was resident and subject to income taxation; or

(b) the first taxation year of the particular foreign affiliate that began after 1994 began at a time in 1995 that is earlier than the time that it would have begun if there had not been that change in the taxation year of the particular foreign affiliate,

and, notwithstanding subsections 152(4) to (5), any assessment of a taxpayer's tax payable under the Act for any of those taxation years shall be made that is necessary to take into account the application of this amendment. The portion of para. 95(2)(a.3) before subpara. (iii) formerly read:

(a.3) in computing the income from a business other than an active business for a taxation year of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer there shall be included the income of the affiliate for the year derived directly or indirectly from indebtedness (other than a specified deposit with a prescribed financial institution) and lease obligations (which, for the purposes of this paragraph, includes the income of the affiliate for the year from the purchase and sale of indebtedness and lease obligations on its own account)

(i) of persons resident in Canada, or

(ii) in respect of businesses carried on in Canada

unless more than 90% of the gross revenue of the affiliate derived directly or indirectly from indebtedness (other than a specified deposit with a prescribed financial institution) and lease obligations was derived directly or indirectly from indebtedness and lease obligations of non-resident persons with whom the affiliate deals at arm's length and, where this paragraph applies to include income of the affiliate for the year in the income of the affiliate from a business other than an active business,

Para. 95(2)(g) amended by the said c. 17, subsec. 73(6), applicable on the same basis as the repeal of 95(2)(h) below. Para. 95(2)(g) formerly read:

(g) [debt settlement — currency fluctuation] — where, by virtue of a fluctuation in the value of the currency of a country other than Canada relative to the value of the Canadian dollar, a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer has realized a taxable capital gain or an allowable capital loss in a taxation year on the settlement of a debt that was owing to

(i) another foreign affiliate of the taxpayer or any other non-resident corporation with which the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length, or

(ii) the affiliate by another foreign affiliate of the taxpayer or any other non-resident corporation with which the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length, such gain or loss, as the case may be, shall be deemed to be nil;

Para. 95(2)(g.2) added by the said c. 17, subsec. 73(7), applicable to distributions received after 1997 except that the election referred to in para. 95(2)(g.2) is deemed to be filed on a timely basis if it is filed with the Minister of National Revenue before September 12, 2001 (90 days after Royal Assent).

Para. 95(2)(h) repealed by the said c. 17, subsec. 73(8), applicable to taxation years of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer that begin after November 1999 except that, where the taxpayer so elects in writing and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the day of the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxation year that includes June 14, 2001, the amendment applies to taxation years, of all of its foreign affiliates, that began after 1994 and, notwithstanding subsecs. 152(4) to (5), any assessment of a taxpayer's tax payable under the Act for any of those taxation years shall be made that is necessary to take into account the application of the amendment. Para. 95(2)(h) formerly read:

(h) [share transactions — currency fluctuation] — where, by virtue of a fluctuation in the value of the currency of a country other than Canada relative to the value of the Canadian dollar, a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer has realized a taxable capital gain or an allowable capital loss in a taxation year on

(i) the redemption, cancellation or acquisition of a share of the capital stock of, or the reduction of the capital of, another foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, or

(ii) the disposition to a person with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length of a share of the capital stock of another foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, that gain or loss, as the case may be, shall be deemed to be nil;

Para. 95(2)(d) amended by 1999, c. 22, subsec. 25(1), applicable to a taxpayer in respect of a merger or combination of foreign corporations

(a) that occurs after February 24, 1998, or

(b) that occurred

(i) before February 25, 1998 and in a taxation year of the taxpayer for which the taxpayer's normal reassessment period, as defined in subsec. 152(3.1), has not ended before 1999, or

(ii) after 1994 and before February 25, 1998 and in a taxation year of the taxpayer in which the taxpayer was exempt from tax under s. 149, unless the taxpayer elects by notifying the Minister of National Revenue in writing, before January 1, 2000, that the amendment not apply to the taxpayer in respect of the merger or combination.

The para. formerly read:

(d) where there has been a foreign merger in which the shares owned by a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer of the capital stock of a corporation that was a predecessor foreign corporation immediately before the merger were exchanged for or became shares of the capital stock of the new foreign corporation, subsection 87(4) applies to the foreign affiliate as if the references in that subsection to

(2.1) Rule for definition "investment business" — For the purposes of the definition "investment business" in subsection (1), a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, the taxpayer and, where the taxpayer is a corporation all the issued shares of which are owned by a corporation described in subparagraph (a)(i), such corporation described in subparagraph (a)(i) shall be considered to be dealing with each other at arm's length in respect of the entering into of agreements that provide for the purchase, sale or exchange of currency and the execution of such agreements where

(a) the taxpayer is

(i) a bank, a trust company, a credit union, an insurance corporation or a trader or dealer in securities or commodities resident in Canada, the business activities of which are subject by law to the supervision of a regulating authority such as the Superintendent of Financial Institutions or a similar authority of a province, or

(ii) a subsidiary wholly-owned corporation of a corporation described in subparagraph (i);

(b) the agreements are swap agreements, forward purchase or sale agreements, forward rate agreements, futures agreements, options or rights agreements or similar agreements;

(c) the agreements are entered in the course of a business carried on by the affiliate principally with persons with whom the affiliate deals at arm's length in the country under whose laws the affiliate was formed or continued and exists and is governed and in which the business is principally carried on; and

(c) the affiliate entered into the agreements

(i) in the course of carrying on, principally with persons with whom the affiliate deals at arm's length, a business (other than a life insurance business) principally carried on in the country (other than Canada) under whose laws the affiliate is governed and any of exists, was (unless the affiliate was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or was last continued, or

(ii) in the course of a life insurance business carried on by the affiliate principally in a country other than Canada and principally with persons with whom the affiliate deals at arm's length if

(A) that country is

(I) the country in which the business is principally carried on, or

(II) the country under whose laws the affiliate is governed and any of exists, was (unless the affiliate was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or was last continued, and

(B) the business activities of the affiliate are regulated in each of the countries described in clause (A); and

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 133(20), will amend para. 95(2.1)(c) to read as above, in force on Royal Assent. The amendment may also, by election, be applicable to taxation years that begin after 1994: see Application note to 95(2)(a) proposed amendments.

If a taxpayer has made what would, but for this paragraph, be a valid election as described above, and the taxpayer has, on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day that is the third anniversary of the day on which the amending Act receives Royal Assent, filed with the Minister of National Revenue a notice in writing to revoke the election, the election is deemed, otherwise than for the purpose of this paragraph, never to have been made.

Notwithstanding subsecs. 152(4) to (5) of the Act, any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year shall be made that is necessary to take an election or revocation referred to above into account.

Technical Notes: Subsection 95(2.1) provides a rule for the purpose of the arm's length test in paragraph (a) of the definition "investment business" in subsection 95(1). Under this rule, a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, the taxpayer and, in certain circumstances, a regulated financial institution in Canada of which the taxpayer is a subsidiary wholly-owned corporation, are considered to be dealing with each other at arm's length in respect of the entering into (and the execution of) agreements that provide for the purchase or sale, or exchange, of currency where all four of the conditions specified in paragraphs 95(2.1)(a) to (d) are satisfied.

The first condition, as specified in paragraph 95(2.1)(a), is that the taxpayer be (or be a corporation all of the issued shares of which are owned by a corporation that is) a bank, a trust company, a credit union, an insurance corporation or a trader or dealer in securities, the business activities of which are by law subject to the supervision of the Superintendent of Financial Institutions or a similar provincial authority.

The second condition, as specified in paragraph 95(2.1)(b), is that the agreements be swap agreements, forward purchase or sale agreements, forward rate agreements, futures agreements, options or rights agreements or similar agreements.

The third condition, as specified in paragraph 95(2.1)(c), is that the foreign affiliate entered into the agreements in the course of a business carried on principally with arm's length persons in the country in which the affiliate was formed (or continued) and exists and is governed, and in which the business is principally carried on by it.

The fourth condition, as specified in paragraph 95(2.1)(d), is that the terms and conditions of the sale or exchange be arm's length terms and conditions.

Subsection 95(2.1) permits a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer to deal with Canadian financial institutions in currency transactions entered into in the course of a business carried on by the affiliate principally with arm's length persons in the foreign country under whose laws the affiliate was incorporated, exists and is governed, and in which the business is principally carried on. Such currency transactions of the affiliate are afforded the same tax treatment as that given to similar transactions conducted with foreign financial institutions.

Paragraph 95(2.1)(c) is amended to require that the foreign affiliate entered into the agreements

- in the course of carrying on, principally with persons with whom the affiliate deals at arm's length, a business (other than a life insurance business) principally carried on in the country (other than Canada) under whose laws the affiliate is governed and any of exists, was (unless the affiliate was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or was last continued, or
- in the course of a life insurance business carried on by the affiliate principally in a country other than Canada and principally with persons with whom the affiliate deals at arm's length if
  - — that country is the country in which the business is principally carried on or is the country under whose laws the affiliate is governed and any of exists, was (unless the affiliate was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or was last continued (new clause 95(2.1)(c)(ii)(A)), and
  - — the business activities of the affiliate are regulated in each of the countries described in new clause 95(2.1)(c)(ii)(A).

Amended subsection 95(2.1) will, for example, accommodate currency transactions of certain regulated foreign affiliates, of regulated life insurance corporations resident in Canada, that carry on an arm's length foreign life insurance business principally in a country different from their country of incorporation or continuation if the business activities are regulated in the country in which the business is principally carried on and in the country under whose laws the affiliate was incorporated or last continued.

The amendment to paragraph 95(2.1)(c) applies to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after 1999. However, see the commentary to new subsection 95(2.2) for details of an election to apply the amendments to amendment to paragraph 95(2.1)(c) to taxation years, of all foreign affiliates of the taxpayer, that begin after 1994. Note also that the amendment to paragraph 95(2.1)(c) is included in the Global Section 95 Election package described [under 95(2)(a) — ed.]

Letter from Dept. of Finance, October 12, 2000: See under 95(2.41).

(d) the terms and conditions of such agreements are substantially the same as the terms and conditions of similar agreements made by persons dealing at arm's length.

Related Provisions: 95(2.41) — Foreign affiliate of life insurer.

History: Subsec. 95(2.1) added by 1995, c. 21, subsec. 46(6), applicable to taxation years of foreign affiliates of taxpayers that begin after 1994 except that, where there has been a change in the taxation year of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer in 1994 and after February 22, 1994, the new subsection applies to taxation years of such foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that end after 1994, unless

(a) such foreign affiliate had requested that change in the taxation year in writing before February 22, 1994 from the income taxation authority of the country in which it was resident and subject to income taxation; or

(b) the first taxation year of such foreign affiliate that began after 1994 began at a time in 1995 that is earlier than the time that that taxation year would have begun if there had not been that change in the taxation of such foreign affiliate.

(2.2) Rule for subsec. (2) — For the purpose of subsection (2),

Proposed Amendment — 95(2.2) opening words

(2.2) Rule for subsection (2) — For the purpose of subsection (2), other than paragraphs (2)(f) and (f.1),

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 133(21), will amend the opening words of subsec. 95(2.2) to read as above, applicable to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that end after 1999. The amendment may also, by election, be applicable to taxation years that begin after 1994: see Application note to 95(2)(a) proposed amendments.

If a taxpayer has made what would, but for this paragraph, be a valid election as described above, and the taxpayer has, on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day that is the third anniversary of the day on which the amending Act receives Royal Assent, filed with the Minister of National Revenue a notice in writing to revoke the election, the election is deemed, otherwise than for the purpose of this paragraph, never to have been made.

Notwithstanding subsecs. 152(4) to (5) of the Act, any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year shall be made that is necessary to take an election or revocation referred to above into account.

Technical Notes: Subsection 95(2.2) provides rules, in paragraphs 95(2.2)(a) and (b), for the purpose of subsection 95(2).

Paragraph 95(2.2)(a) provides that, in certain circumstances, a non-resident corporation that was not a "foreign affiliate of a taxpayer in respect of which the taxpayer had a qualifying interest throughout a taxation year" but was such a foreign affiliate at the beginning or end of that year is deemed to be such a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer throughout that year. Those circumstances are that a person has, in that year, acquired or disposed of shares of that non-resident corporation or any other corporation and, because of that disposition or acquisition, that non-resident corporation became or ceased to be a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer in respect of which the taxpayer had a qualifying interest.

Paragraph 95(2.2)(b) provides that, in certain circumstances, a non-resident corporation that was not related to a taxpayer and to a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer throughout a taxation year but was so related at the beginning or end of that year is deemed to be related throughout that year to the taxpayer and to the foreign affiliate. Those circumstances are that a person has, in that year, acquired or disposed of shares of that non-resident corporation or any other corporation and, because of that disposition or acquisition, that non-resident corporation became or ceased to be a non-resident corporation that was related to the foreign affiliate and the taxpayer.

Subsection 95(2.2) is amended in the following ways.

First, the "preamble" of subsection 95(2.2) is amended to ensure that that subsection does not apply for the purpose of paragraph 95(2)(f). This amendment is consequential to the introduction of new subsection 95(2.22). For additional detail, see the commentary to subsection 95(2.22).

Second, paragraph 95(2.2)(b) is amended so that the rule in that paragraph also applies if, because of the acquisition, that non-resident corporation would have become (if paragraph 251(5)(b) did not apply to rights contained in the agreement under which the person acquired the shares) a non-resident corporation that was related to the taxpayer or to the taxpayer and the foreign affiliate. The addition of the reference to paragraph 251(5)(b) permits paragraph 95(2.2)(b) to apply where the relevant commercial arrangements involve a right to acquire shares which is then exercised.

The amendments to paragraph 95(2.2)(b) and to the "preamble" of subsection 95(2.2) apply to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that end after 1999. However, if a taxpayer so elects in writing and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day on which this set of amendments is assented to, the following apply to taxation years, of all foreign affiliates of the taxpayer, that begin after 1994:

- the amendments to the portion of paragraph 95(2)(f) after subparagraph (ii) and before subparagraph (iii),
- the amendments to paragraph 95(2.1)(c),
- the amendments to the "preamble" to subsection 95(2.2),
- the amendments to paragraph 95(2.2)(b), and
- new subsection 95(2.21).

This set of proposals provides that, notwithstanding subsections 152(4) to (5), the Minister of National Revenue can make any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year that is necessary to take such an election into account.

Note also that the amendment to the "preamble" of subsection 95(2.2) is included in the Global Section 95 Election package described [under 95(2)(a) — ed.]

Letter from Dept. of Finance, February 12, 2001: See under 95(2.2)(b).

(a) a non-resident corporation that was not a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer in respect of which the taxpayer had a qualifying interest throughout a particular taxation year shall be deemed to be a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer in respect of which the taxpayer had a qualifying interest throughout that year where

(i) a person has, in that year, acquired or disposed of shares of that non-resident corporation or any other corporation and, because of that acquisition or disposition, that non-resident corporation became or ceased to be a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer in respect of which the taxpayer had a qualifying interest, and

(ii) at the beginning of that year or at the end of that year, the non-resident corporation was a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer in respect of which the taxpayer had a qualifying interest; and

(b) a non-resident corporation that was not related to a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer and the taxpayer throughout a particular taxation year shall be deemed to be related to the foreign affiliate of the taxpayer and that taxpayer throughout that year where

(i) a person has, in that year, acquired or disposed of shares of that non-resident corporation or any other corporation and, because of that acquisition or disposition, that non-resident corporation became or ceased to be a non-resident corporation that was related to the foreign affiliate of the taxpayer and the taxpayer, and

(ii) at the beginning of that year or at the end of that year, the non-resident corporation was related to the foreign affiliate of the taxpayer and the taxpayer.

Proposed Amendment — 95(2.2)(b)

(b) a non-resident corporation that was not related to a taxpayer or to a taxpayer and a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, as the case may be, throughout a particular taxation year is deemed to be related to the taxpayer or to the taxpayer and the foreign affiliate of the taxpayer throughout that year if

(i) a person has, in that year, acquired or disposed of shares of the non-resident corporation or any other corporation and, because of that acquisition or disposition, the non-resident corporation became (or would have become, if paragraph 251(5)(b) did not apply to rights contained in the agreement under which the person acquired the shares), or ceased to be, a non-resident corporation that was related to the taxpayer or to the taxpayer and the foreign affiliate of the taxpayer, and

(ii) at the beginning, or at the end, of that year, the non-resident corporation was related to the taxpayer or to the taxpayer and the foreign affiliate of the taxpayer.

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 133(22), will amend para. 95(2.2)(b) to read as above, applicable to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that end after 1999. However, if a taxpayer so elects in writing and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day on which the amending legislation is assented to, the amendment applies to taxation years, of all foreign affiliates of the taxpayer, that begin after 1994.

Notwithstanding subsecs. 152(4) to (5) of the Act, any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year shall be made that is necessary to take an election or revocation referred to above into account.

Technical Notes: See under 95(2.2) opening words above.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, February 12, 2001:

Angelo Nikolakakis, Stikeman Elliott, Toronto

Dear Mr. Nikolakakis:. . .

Relationship between 95(2.2)(b) and 251(5)(b)

You are concerned that the application of paragraph 251(5)(b) to a right to acquire shares makes paragraph 95(2.2)(b) of the Act ineffective once the right is exercised and control of non-resident corporation is acquired in a taxation year. Paragraph 95(2.2)(b) is intended to address the "related throughout the year" requirement in paragraph 95(2)(a) of the Act in respect of certain non-resident corporations which have become, or have ceased to be related to a particular corporation resident in Canada and a foreign affiliate of such a corporation during the taxation year. You are requesting that we amend paragraph 95(2.2)(b) so that it would no longer be subject to paragraph 251(5)(b) as it applies in respect of the right that results in the acquisition of the shares.

We are prepared to recommend to the Minister that paragraph 95(2.2)(b) be amended to deal with this concern. The amendment would ensure that the existence of a right to acquire shares of a non-resident corporation referred to in paragraph 251(5)(b) of the Act that was exercised and the exercise of which resulted in the non-resident corporation becoming related in the year to the corporation resident in Canada would not preclude subsection 95(2.2)(b) from deeming the non-resident to be related to the corporation resident in Canada throughout the year.

Precise effect of 95(2.2)

You are concerned that the scope of paragraph 95(2.2) of the Act is not adequately defined. As a consequence, you are recommending that the subsection be amended to ensure that it does not apply for the purposes of paragraph 95(2)(a) of the Act in respect of transactions occurring before a non-resident corporation actually becomes related to the corporation resident in Canada.

We agree that clarification would be helpful and are prepared to recommend another amendment to subsection 95(2.2) of the Act, whereby transactions described in paragraph 95(2)(a) that occur before a non-resident corporation becomes related are excluded from the scope of subsection 95(2.2). . .

Effective Date

It will be recommended that the amendments be made effective for taxation years commencing after announcement date. It will also be recommended that taxpayer be permitted to elect to have the amendments apply to the 1994 and subsequent taxation years of foreign affiliates where the taxpayer so elects in respect of all the taxpayer's foreign affiliates.

Thank you for taking the time to express your concerns and we trust this letter addresses most of them.

Yours sincerely,
Brian Ernewein
Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Related Provisions: 95(2)(n) — Deemed FA and deemed qualifying interest; 95(2.21) — Exception.

History: The opening words of subsec. 95(2.2) amended by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 73(9) to replace "paragraph (2)(a)" with "subsection (2)", applicable to taxation years of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer that begin after November 1999 except that, where the taxpayer so elects in writing and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue before the day of the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxation year that includes June 14, 2001, the amendment applies to taxation years, of all of its foreign affiliates, that began after 1994 and, notwithstanding subsecs. 152(4) to (5), any assessment of a taxpayer's tax payable under the Act for any of those taxation years shall be made that is necessary to take into account the application of the amendment.

Subsec. 95(2.2) added by 1995, c. 21, subsec. 46(6), applicable to taxation years of foreign affiliates of taxpayers that begin after 1994 except that, where there has been a change in the taxation year of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer in 1994 and after February 22, 1994, the new subsection applies to taxation years of such foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that end after 1994, unless

(a) such foreign affiliate had requested that change in the taxation year in writing before February 22, 1994 from the income taxation authority of the country in which it was resident and subject to income taxation; or

(b) the first taxation year of such foreign affiliate that began after 1994 began at a time in 1995 that is earlier than the time that that taxation year would have begun if there had not been that change in the taxation of such foreign affiliate.

Proposed Addition — 95(2.21)

(2.21) Rule re subsection (2.2) — Subsection (2.2) does not apply for the purpose of paragraph (2)(a) in respect of any income or loss referred to in that paragraph, of a particular foreign affiliate of the taxpayer in respect of which the taxpayer has a qualifying interest throughout the taxation year of that particular affiliate or to which the taxpayer is related throughout the taxation year, to the extent that that income or loss relates to a transaction or event

(a) that occurred before that particular affiliate became, as determined without reference to subsection (2.2), a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer in respect of which the taxpayer had a qualifying interest or to which the taxpayer is related; or

(b) that occurred before a non-resident corporation (other than that particular affiliate), or a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer (other than that particular affiliate), referred to in paragraph (2)(a) became, as determined without reference to subsection (2.2)

(i) a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer in respect of which the taxpayer had a qualifying interest, or

(ii) related to the taxpayer and to that particular affiliate.

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 133(23), will add subsec. 95(2.21), applicable to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that end after 1999. However, if a taxpayer so elects in writing and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day on which the amending legislation is assented to, the amendment applies to taxation years, of all foreign affiliates of the taxpayer, that begin after 1994.

Notwithstanding subsecs. 152(4) to (5) of the Act, any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year shall be made that is necessary to take an election or revocation referred to above into account.

Technical Notes: New subsection 95(2.21) ensures that the application of the rules in subsection 95(2.2) will not result in the provisions of paragraph 95(2)(a) recharacterizing, as an income or a loss from an active business, any income or loss from property of a particular foreign affiliate of the taxpayer in respect of which the taxpayer has a qualifying interest or is related throughout the taxation year of that particular affiliate, that relates to a transaction or event

- that occurred before that particular affiliate became, as determined without reference to subsection 95(2.2), a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer in respect of which the taxpayer had a qualifying interest or to which the taxpayer is related; or
- that occurred before a non-resident corporation (other than that particular affiliate), or a foreign affiliate of the taxpayer (other than that particular affiliate), referred to in paragraph 95(2)(a) became, as determined without reference to subsection 95(2.2),

— a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer in respect of which the taxpayer had a qualifying interest, or — related to the taxpayer and to that particular affiliate.

New subsection 95(2.21) applies to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that end after 1999. However, see the commentary to new subsection 95(2.2) for details of an election to apply new subsection 95(2.21) to taxation years, of all foreign affiliates of the taxpayer, that begin after 1994. Note also that new subsection 95(2.21) is included in the Global Section 95 Election package described [under 95(2)(a) — ed.]

Letter from Dept. of Finance, June 4, 2001:

Dear [xxx]

We are responding to your letter of May 28, 2001, asking us to confirm our intention to recommend to the Minister of Finance that an amendment be made to paragraph 95(2)(f) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act").

We will recommend to the Minister that an amendment be made to paragraph 95(2)(f) of the Act that will, if adopted, have the effect of excluding from the foreign accrual property income (FAPI) of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer the income of the foreign affiliate that was accrued or realized before it becomes a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, whether such FAPI arises from dispositions of capital property or otherwise. It will be recommended that this amendment, if adopted, apply to taxation years of foreign affiliates commencing after 2000.

I trust that this meets your requirements.

Yours sincerely,
Brian Ernewein
Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Letter from Dept. of Finance, February 12, 2001:

Angelo Nikolakakis, Stikeman Elliott, Toronto

Dear Mr. Nikolakakis:. . .

Scope of Paragraph 95(2)(f)

You are also concerned that pre-acquisition transactions on income account rather than on capital account can result in FAPI in the year in which a non-resident corporation becomes a foreign affiliate. You are concerned that paragraph 95(2)(k) does not fully address this concern and as a result you are requesting an amendment to paragraph 95(2)(f) of the Act. You want to extend the scope of paragraph 95(2)(f) so that FAPI will not include income accruing or realised before a particular non-resident corporation becomes a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada.

Your request has merit and, consequently, we will recommend to the Minister of Finance (the "Minister") that an amendment be made to paragraph 95(2)(f) of the Act. This amendment will have the effect of excluding from the FAPI of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer the income of the foreign affiliate that is accrued or realised before it becomes a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer.

[See also under 95(2)(i) — ed.]

. . . . .

Effective Date

It will be recommended that the amendments be made effective for taxation years commencing after announcement date. It will also be recommended that taxpayer be permitted to elect to have the amendments apply to the 1994 and subsequent taxation years of foreign affiliates where the taxpayer so elects in respect of all the taxpayer's foreign affiliates.

Thank you for taking the time to express your concerns and we trust this letter addresses most of them.

Yours sincerely,
Brian Ernewein
Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Related Provisions: 95(2)(n) — Deemed FA and deemed qualifying interest.

(2.3) Application of para. (2)(a.1) — Paragraph (2)(a.1) does not apply to a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer in respect of a sale or exchange of property that is currency or a right to purchase, sell or exchange currency where

(a) the taxpayer is

(i) a bank, a trust company, a credit union, an insurance corporation or a trader or dealer in securities or commodities resident in Canada, the business activities of which are subject by law to the supervision of a regulating authority such as the Superintendent of Financial Institutions or a similar authority of a province, or

(ii) a subsidiary wholly-owned corporation of a corporation described in subparagraph (i);

(b) the sale or exchange was made in the course of a business carried on by the affiliate principally with persons with whom the affiliate deals at arm's length in the country under whose laws the affiliate was formed or continued and exists and is governed and in which the business is principally carried on by it; and

Proposed Amendment — 95(2.3)(b)

(b) the sale or exchange was made by the affiliate in the course of a business conducted principally with persons with whom the affiliate deals at arm's length, if

(i) the business is principally carried on in the country (other than Canada) under whose laws the affiliate is governed and any of exists, was

(unless the affiliate was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or was last continued, or

(ii) the affiliate is a foreign bank, a trust company, a credit union, an insurance corporation or a trader or dealer in securities or commodities and the activities of the business are regulated

(A) under the laws of the country under whose laws the affiliate is governed and any of exists, was (unless the affiliate was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or was last continued, and under the laws of each country in which the business is carried on through a permanent establishment (as defined by regulation) in that country,

(B) under the laws of the country (other than Canada) in which the business is principally carried on, or

(C) under the laws of the country in which a particular corporation related to the affiliate is governed and any of exists, was (unless the particular corporation was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or was last continued, where those laws are recognized under the laws of the country in which the business is principally carried on and all of those countries are members of the European Union; and

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 133(24), will amend para. 95(2.3)(b) to read as above, in force on Royal Assent.

Technical Notes: Subsection 95(2.3) exempts a foreign affiliate from the application of paragraph 95(2)(a.1) with respect to the sale or exchange of property that is currency when the conditions in that subsection are met.

One condition, found in paragraph 95(2.3)(b), is that the sale or exchange of property that is currency is made in course of a business carried on by the affiliate principally with arm's length persons in the country in which the affiliate is formed or organized and exists and is governed and in the country in which the business is principally carried on.

Paragraph 95(2.3)(b) is modified to require the sale or exchange to be made by the foreign affiliate in the course of a business conducted principally with arm's length persons. As well, the following conditions must be met:

- the business must be principally carried on in the country under whose laws the affiliate is governed and any of exists, was (unless the affiliate was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or was last continued, or
- if the affiliate is a foreign bank, a trust company, a credit union, an insurance corporation, or a trader or dealer in securities or commodities and the activities of the business are regulated
  - under the laws of the country under whose laws the affiliate is governed and any of exists, was (unless the affiliate was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or was last continued and under the laws of each country in which the business is carried on through a permanent establishment (as defined by proposed new Regulation 8202) in that country,
  - under the laws of the country in which the business is principally carried on, or
  - if the affiliate is related to a particular corporation, under the laws of the country under the laws of which the particular corporation is governed and any of exists, was (unless the particular corporation was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or was last continued, if those regulating laws are recognized under the laws of the country in which the business is principally carried on and all of those countries are members of the European Union.

Amended paragraph 95(2.3)(b) applies to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after 1999.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, September 19, 2002:

Dear [xxx]

I am writing in reply to your letter dated August 16, 2002, in which you requested amendments to subsection 95(2.3) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act") and to the definition "indebtedness" in subsection 95(2.5) of the Act.

In your letter, you mention that the [xxx] ("Canco") has established a corporation under the [xxx] ("Forco"). We understand that Forco is a controlled foreign affiliate of Canco. Canco is a corporation resident in Canada, and its business activities are subject by law to supervision by the Superintendent of Financial Institutions. You have asked us to assume that Forco is resident in [xxx] for the purposes of the Canada-[xxx] Income Tax Convention and under the common law "mind and management" test. Forco intends to establish a branch in another foreign county, i.e., the United States, through which it will carry on business as a trader or dealer in securities. Forco's business activities will be regulated in that country. Forco's business will be principally carried on in that country and will employ more than [xxx]. You also mention that, as part of its financing arrangements, it is anticipated that Forco will enter into [xxx] foreign exchange swaps with Canco in respect of its Canadian dollar borrowings as the functional currency of Forco is currency of that country.

In your letter, you expressed your concern that, as a result of these foreign exchange swaps, Forco will be considered to have sold property to Canco within the meaning of paragraph 95(2)(a.1) of the Act. The exception given by subsection 95(2.3) will not be available because the requirement in paragraph 95(2.3)(b) will not be met. Paragraph 95(2.3)(b) requires that the sale or exchange of currency was made in the course of a business carried on by Forco principally with persons with whom it deals at arm's length "in the country under whose laws [Forco] was formed or continued and exists and is governed and in which the business is principally carried on by it". This requirement will not be met because Forco carries on business principally in a jurisdiction other than its place of formation (or continuation). From a tax policy point of view, we agree with you that the scope of this requirement is too narrow and could be extended within the parameters established under related provisions in subsection 95. We are, therefore, prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that paragraph 95(2.3)(b) be amended so that the test in that paragraph is satisfied where the sale or exchange was made by the affiliate in the course of a business conducted principally with persons with whom the affiliate deals at arm's length, if

- the business is principally carried on in the country (other than Canada) under whose laws the affiliate is governed and exists, is governed and was (unless the affiliate was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or is governed and was last continued, or
- the affiliate is a foreign bank, a trust company, a credit union, an insurance corporation or a trader or dealer in securities or commodities and one of three alternative conditions is met.

The first of those alternative conditions is that the activities of the business are regulated: under the laws of the country under whose laws the affiliate is governed and exists, is governed and was (unless the affiliate was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or is governed and was last continued; and under the laws of each country in which the business is carried on.

The second of those alternative conditions is that the activities of the business are regulated under the laws of the country (other than Canada) in which the business is principally carried on.

The third of those alternative conditions is that the activities of the business are regulated under the laws of the country in which a corporation related to the affiliate is governed and exists, is governed and was (unless the non-resident corporation was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or is governed and was last continued, where those laws are recognized under the laws of the country in which the business is principally carried on and all of those countries are members of the European Union.

In your letter, you also expressed your concern that these foreign exchange swaps entered into between Forco and Canco may give rise to "indebtedness" of Canco for the purposes of paragraph 95(2)(a.3) of the Act. The exception given by way of the definition "indebtedness" in subsection 95(2.5) will not be available because the test in Paragraph (c) of that definition is not met. That paragraph requires that Forco's agreement with Canco providing for the purchase, sale or exchange of currency was entered into by Forco in the course of a business carried on by Forco principally with persons with whom it deals at arm's length "in the country under whose laws [Forco] was formed or continued and exists and is governed and in which the business is principally carried on by it". This requirement will not be met because Forco carries on business principally in a jurisdiction other than its place of formation (or continuation). From a tax policy point of view, we agree with you that the scope of this requirement is too narrow and could be extended within the parameters established under related provisions in subsection 95. We are, therefore, prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that paragraph (c) of the definition "indebtedness" in subsection 95(2.5) be amended so that the test in that paragraph is met where the agreements are entered into by the non-resident corporation with a person in the course of a business conducted principally with persons with whom the non-resident corporation deals at arm's length, if

- the business is principally carried on in the country (other than Canada) under whose laws the non-resident corporation is governed and exists, is governed and was (unless the non-resident corporation was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or is governed and was last continued, or
- the non-resident corporation is a foreign affiliate of the person and all of three particular conditions are met.

The first particular condition is that the person that entered into the agreement with the non-resident corporation is a taxpayer described in paragraph 95(2.3)(a).

The second particular condition is that the non-resident corporation is a foreign bank, a trust company, a credit union, an insurance corporation or a trader or dealer in securities or commodities.

The third particular condition is that the activities of the business

1. are regulated: under the laws of the country under whose laws the non-resident corporation is governed and exists, is governed and was (unless the non-resident corporation was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or is governed and was last continued; and under the laws of each country in which the business is carried on;

2. are regulated under the laws of the country (other than Canada) in which the business is principally carried on; or

3. are regulated under the laws of the country in which a corporation related to the non-resident corporation is governed and exists, is governed and was (unless the non-resident corporation was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or is governed and was last continued, where those laws are recognized under the laws of the country in which the business is principally carried on and all of those countries are members of the European Union.

We will recommend that these amendments be applicable to taxation years of foreign affiliates of taxpayers that begin after 1999. If the recommendation is acted upon, we anticipate that the amendments would be included in a future technical bill.

Thank you for writing.

Yours sincerely,

Len Farber
General Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

(c) the terms and conditions of the sale or exchange of such property are substantially the same as the terms and conditions of similar sales or exchanges of such property by persons dealing at arm's length.

History: Subsec. 95(2.3) added by 1995, c. 21, subsec. 46(6), applicable to taxation years of foreign affiliates of taxpayers that begin after 1994 except that, where there has been a change in the taxation year of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer in 1994 and after February 22, 1994, the new subsection applies to taxation years of such foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that end after 1994, unless

(a) such foreign affiliate had requested that change in the taxation year in writing before February 22, 1994 from the income taxation authority of the country in which it was resident and subject to income taxation; or

(b) the first taxation year of such foreign affiliate that began after 1994 began at a time in 1995 that is earlier than the time that that taxation year would have begun if there had not been that change in the taxation of such foreign affiliate.

Regulations: 8202 (meaning of "permanent establishment" for 95(2.3)(b)).

(2.4) Application of para. (2)(a.3) — Paragraph (2)(a.3) does not apply to a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer in respect of its income derived directly or indirectly from indebtedness to the extent that

(a) the income is derived by the affiliate in the course of a business conducted principally with persons with whom the affiliate deals at arm's length carried on by it as a foreign bank, a trust company, a credit union, an insurance corporation or a trader or dealer in securities or commodities, the activities of which are regulated in the country under whose laws the affiliate was formed or continued and exists and is governed and in which the business is principally carried on, and

Proposed Amendment — 95(2.4)(a)

(a) the income is derived by the affiliate in the course of a business conducted principally with persons with whom the affiliate deals at arm's length carried on by it as a foreign bank, a trust company, a credit union, an insurance corporation or a trader or dealer in securities or commodities, the activities of which are regulated under the laws

(i) of the country under whose laws the affiliate is governed and any of exists, was (unless the affiliate was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or was last continued and of each country in which the business is carried on through a permanent establishment (as defined by regulation) in that country,

(ii) of the country in which the business is principally carried on, or

(iii) if the affiliate is related to a corporation, of the country under the laws of which that related corporation is governed and any of exists, was (unless that related corporation was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or was last continued, if those regulating laws are recognized under the laws of the country in which the business is principally carried on and all of those countries are members of the European Union, and

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 133(25), will amend para. 95(2.4)(a) to read as above, in force on Royal Assent.

Technical Notes: In general terms, paragraph 95(2)(a.3) deems income of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer from Canadian source indebtedness, or from Canadian source lease obligations, to be income from a business other than an active business. Therefore, this income will be included in computing the affiliate's foreign accrual property income (FAPI).

Subsection 95(2.4) provides that paragraph 95(2)(a.3) will not apply in respect of income derived by a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer directly or indirectly from indebtedness to the extent that

- the income was derived by the affiliate in the course of a business that was conducted principally with persons with whom the affiliate deals at arm's length, and that was carried on by the affiliate as a foreign bank, a trust company, a credit union, an insurance corporation or a trader or dealer in securities or commodities, the activities of which are regulated in the jurisdiction in which it was formed or continued and exists and is governed, and in which the business was principally carried (paragraph 95(2.4)(a)), and
- the income was derived from the trading or dealing in such indebtedness with arm's length persons resident in a country other than Canada in which the affiliate and its similarly regulated competitors compete and have a substantial market presence (paragraph 95(2.4)(b)).

Paragraph 95(2.4)(a) is amended to refer to income derived by the affiliate in the course of a business that was conducted principally with persons with whom the affiliate deals at arm's length, and that was carried on by the affiliate as a foreign bank, a trust company, a credit union, an insurance corporation, or a trader or dealer in securities or commodities, the activities of which are regulated under the laws

- of the country under whose laws the affiliate is governed and any of exists, was (unless the affiliate was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or was last continued and of each country in which the business is carried on through a permanent establishment (as defined by proposed new Regulation 8202) in that country,
- of the country in which the business is principally carried on, or
- if the affiliate is related to a corporation, of the country under the laws of which that related corporation is governed and any of exists, was (unless that related corporation was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or was last continued, if those regulating laws are recognized under the laws of the country in which the business is principally carried on and all of those countries are members of the European Union.

Amended paragraph 95(2.4)(a) applies to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after1999.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, September 19, 2002: See under 95(2.3)(b).

(b) the income is derived by the affiliate from trading or dealing in the indebtedness (which, for this purpose, consists of income from the actual trading or dealing in the indebtedness and interest earned by the affiliate during a short term holding period on indebtedness acquired by it for the purpose of the trading or dealing) with persons (in this subsection referred to as "regular customers") with whom it deals at arm's length who were resident in a country other than Canada in which it and any competitor (which is resident in the country in which the affiliate is resident and regulated in the same manner the affiliate is regulated in the country under whose laws the affiliate was formed or continued and exists and is governed and in which its business is principally carried on) compete and have a substantial market presence, and, for the purpose of this subsection, an acquisition of indebtedness from the taxpayer shall be deemed to be part of the trading or dealing in indebtedness described in paragraph (b) where the indebtedness is acquired by the affiliate and sold to regular customers and the terms and conditions of the acquisition and the sale are substantially the same as the terms and conditions of similar acquisitions and sales made by the affiliate in transactions with persons with whom it deals at arm's length.

History: Subsec. 95(2.4) added by 1995, c. 21, subsec. 46(6), applicable to taxation years of foreign affiliates of taxpayers that begin after 1994 except that, where there has been a change in the taxation year of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer in 1994 and after February 22, 1994, the new subsection applies to taxation years of such foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that end after 1994, unless

(a) such foreign affiliate had requested that change in the taxation year in writing before February 22, 1994 from the income taxation authority of the country in which it was resident and subject to income taxation; or

(b) the first taxation year of such foreign affiliate that began after 1994 began at a time in 1995 that is earlier than the time that that taxation year would have begun if there had not been that change in the taxation of such foreign affiliate.

Regulations: 8202 (meaning of "permanent establishment" for 95(2.4)(a)).

Proposed Addition — 95(2.41)

(2.41) Exception re paragraph (2)(a.3) — Paragraph (2)(a.3) does not apply to a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada in respect of the affiliate's income for a taxation year derived, directly or indirectly, from indebtedness of persons resident in Canada or from indebtedness in respect of businesses carried on in Canada (referred to in this subsection as the "Canadian indebtedness") if

(a) the taxpayer is, at the end of the affiliate's taxation year

(i) a life insurance corporation resident in Canada, the business activities of which are subject by law to the supervision of the Superintendent of Financial Institutions or a similar authority of a province, or

(ii) a corporation resident in Canada that is a subsidiary controlled corporation of a corporation described in subparagraph (i);

(b) the Canadian indebtedness is used or held by the affiliate, throughout the period in the taxation year that that indebtedness was used or held by the affiliate, in the course of carrying on a business (referred to in this subsection as the "foreign life insurance business") that is a life insurance business carried on outside Canada (other than a business deemed by paragraph (2)(a.2) to be a separate business other than an active business), the activities of which are regulated

(i) in the country under whose laws the affiliate is governed and any of exists, was (unless the affiliate was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or was last continued, and

(ii) in the country, if any, in which the business is principally carried on;

(c) more than 90% of the gross premium revenue of the affiliate for the taxation year in respect of the foreign life insurance business was derived from the insurance or reinsurance of risks (net of reinsurance ceded) in respect of persons

(i) that were non-resident at the time that the policies in respect of those risks were issued or effected, and

(ii) that were at that time dealing at arm's length with the affiliate, the taxpayer and all persons that were related at that time to the affiliate or the taxpayer; and

(d) it is reasonable to conclude that the affiliate used or held the Canadian indebtedness

(i) to fund a liability or reserve of the foreign life insurance business, or

(ii) as capital that can reasonably be considered to have been required for the foreign life insurance business.

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 133(26), will add subsec. 95(2.41), in force on Royal Assent. The subsec. may also, by election, be applicable to taxation years that begin after 1994: see Application note to 95(2)(a) proposed amendments.

If a taxpayer has made what would, but for this paragraph, be a valid election as described above, and the taxpayer has, on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day that is the third anniversary of the day on which the amending Act receives Royal Assent, filed with the Minister of National Revenue a notice in writing to revoke the election, the election is deemed, otherwise than for the purpose of this paragraph, never to have been made.

Notwithstanding subsecs. 152(4) to (5) of the Act, any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year shall be made that is necessary to take an election or revocation referred to above into account.

Technical Notes: In general terms, paragraph 95(2)(a.3) deems income of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer from Canadian source indebtedness, or from Canadian source lease obligations, to be income from a business other than an active business. This income will therefore be included in computing the affiliate's FAPI. In general terms, new subsection 95(2.41) provides that paragraph 95(2)(a.3) will not apply to income of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer from Canadian source indebtedness held by that affiliate where that indebtedness is used or held

- to fund a liability or reserve of the foreign life insurance business of the affiliate, or
- as capital that can reasonably be considered to have been required for that life insurance business.

More specifically, new subsection 95(2.41) provides that, where four conditions are met, paragraph 95(2)(a.3) does not apply to a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada in respect of the affiliate's income for a taxation year derived, directly or indirectly, from indebtedness of persons resident in Canada or from indebtedness in respect of businesses carried on in Canada (referred to as the "Canadian indebtedness").

The first condition, set out in paragraph 95(2.41)(a), is that the taxpayer be at the end of the affiliate's taxation year

- a life insurance corporation resident in Canada, the business activities of which are subject by law to the supervision of the Superintendent of Financial Institutions or a similar authority of a province, or
- a corporation resident in Canada that is a subsidiary controlled corporation of such a life insurance corporation.

The second condition, set out in paragraph 95(2.41)(b), is that the Canadian indebtedness be used or held by the affiliate, throughout the period (in the taxation year) that it was used or held by the affiliate, in the course of carrying on a business (referred to as the "foreign life insurance business") that is a life insurance business carried on outside Canada (other than a business deemed by paragraph 95(2)(a.2) to be a "separate business other than an active business"), the activities of which are regulated

- in the country under whose laws the affiliate is governed and any of exists, was (unless the affiliate was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or was last continued, and
- in the country, if any, in which the business is principally carried on.

The third condition, set out in paragraph 95(2.41)(c), is that more than 90% of the gross premium revenue of the affiliate for the taxation year in respect of the foreign life insurance business be derived from the insurance or reinsurance of risks (net of reinsurance ceded) in respect of persons

- that were non-resident at the time that the policies in respect of those risks were issued or effected, and
- that were at that time dealing at arm's length with the affiliate, the taxpayer and all persons that were related at that time to the affiliate or the taxpayer.

The fourth condition, set out in paragraph 95(2.41)(d), is that it be reasonable to conclude that the affiliate used or held the Canadian indebtedness

- to fund a liability or reserve of the foreign life insurance business, or
- as capital that can reasonably be considered to have been required for the foreign life insurance business.

In general terms, new subsection 95(2.41) ensures that a life insurer can hold Canadian source indebtedness in its foreign life insurance business without causing the income from that indebtedness to be treated as FAPI of the foreign affiliate.

New subsection 95(2.41) applies to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after 1999. New subsection 95(2.41) is included in the Global Section 95 Election package described [under 95(2)(a) — ed.]

Letter from Dept. of Finance, December 18, 2000:

Angelo Nikolakakis, Stikeman Elliott, Toronto

Dear Mr. Nikolakakis:

We are responding to your letters of July 19, July 26 and November 20, 2000 concerning paragraph (b) of the definition "investment business" in subsection 95(1), the interaction of subsection 95(2.2) and paragraph 95(2)(f), and the scope of paragraph 95(2)(a.3) of the Income Tax Act (the "Act")...

In your letter of November 20, 2000, you requested that we amend subsection 95(2)(a.3) to preclude its application in respect of an affiliate's income from lease obligations relating to the use of property outside of Canada by persons having no material connection with the relevant taxpayer. You also requested that we confirm our willingness to recommend such an amendment to the Minister of Finance.

We are sympathetic to your request. Therefore, it will be recommended to the Minister of Finance that the Act be amended. The amendment will provide that paragraph 95(2)(a.3) of the Act does not apply to the income derived by a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer from lease obligations of persons (other than the taxpayer or persons that do not deal at arm's length with the taxpayer) relating to the use of property outside of Canada. It will be recommended that the amendment be made effective for taxation years of foreign affiliates that begin after 1999. It will also be recommended that a taxpayer be permitted to elect to have the amendment apply in respect of all the foreign affiliates of the taxpayer in respect of their taxation years commencing after 1994, which was the application date when it was first introduced.

Thank you for bringing these matters to our attention.

Yours sincerely,
Brian Ernewein
Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Letter from Dept. of Finance, October 12, 2000:

Dear [xxx]

I am responding to your letters of August 6, 1999, April 27, 2000, June 7, 2000, June 20, 2000 and July 10, 2000 regarding proposed amendments to section 95 of the Income Tax Act (the "Act").

First, you have proposed a new exception from paragraph 95(2)(a.3) of the Act for certain regulated foreign affiliates of certain regulated life insurance corporations resident in Canada. This exception would apply in respect of the income of those affiliates that is derived from certain Canadian indebtedness used or held in the course of carrying on a foreign life insurance business.

Second, you have requested that paragraph 95(2.1)(c) of the Act be amended to accommodate certain regulated foreign affiliates of certain regulated life insurance corporations resident in Canada where those affiliates carry on a foreign life insurance business in a country different from their country of incorporation or continuation.

We have reviewed your submissions and have concluded that they have merit. Consequently, we are prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that section 95 of the Act be amended to add a proposed new subsection 95(2.41) and a proposed new paragraph 95(2.1)(c). The specific changes we are contemplating in this connection are along the lines of the draft outline prepared by Wally Conway, and attached [changed slightly on public release of draft legislation — ed.] for your comment.

Thank you for bringing these matters to our attention.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein
Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

Proposed Amendment — 95(2.5)"indebtedness"(c)

(c) the agreements are entered into by the non-resident corporation in the course of a business conducted principally with persons with whom the non-resident corporation deals at arm's length, if

(i) the business is principally carried on in the country (other than Canada) under whose laws the non-resident corporation is governed and any of exists, was (unless the non-resident corporation was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or was last continued, or

(ii) the non-resident corporation is a foreign affiliate of the person and

(A) the person is a taxpayer described in paragraph (2.3)(a),

(B) the non-resident corporation is a foreign bank, a trust company, a credit union, an insurance corporation or a trader or dealer in securities or commodities, and

(C) the activities of the business are regulated

(I) under the laws of the country under whose laws the non-resident corporation is governed and any of exists, was (unless the non-resident corporation was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or was last continued and under the laws of each country in which the business is carried on through a permanent establishment (as defined by regulation) in that country,

(II) under the laws of the country (other than Canada) in which the business is principally carried, or

(III) under the laws of the country under whose laws a corporation related to the non-resident corporation is governed and any of exists, was (unless that related corporation was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or was last continued, where those laws are recognized under the laws of the country in which the business is principally carried on and all of those countries are members of the European Union, and

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 133(27), will amend para. (c) of the definition "indebtedness" in subsec. 95(2.5) to read as above, in force on Royal Assent.

Technical Notes: The definition "indebtedness" in subsection 95(2.5) provides an exception for a foreign affiliate of a certain Canadian taxpayers from the rules in subsection 95(2)(a.3) for indebtedness arising under agreements providing for the purchase, sale or exchange of currency if the conditions set out that definition are met.

One condition, found in paragraph (c) of the definition, is that agreements providing for the purchase, sale or exchange of currency must be entered into in the course of a business carried on by the foreign affiliate principally with arm's length persons in the country under whose laws the affiliate is formed or organized and exists and is governed and in the country in which the business is principally carried on.

Paragraph (c) is modified to require that the agreements providing for the purchase, sale or exchange of currency must be entered into in the course of a business conducted principally with arm's length persons. As well, the following conditions must be met:

- the business must be carried on principally in the country under whose laws the foreign affiliate is governed and any of exists, was (unless the affiliate was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or was last continued; or
- the foreign affiliate must be a foreign affiliate of a person described in paragraph 95(2.3)(a), and that person must be a foreign bank, a trust company, a credit union, an insurance corporation, or a trader or dealer in securities or commodities, and the activities of the business must be regulated
  - — under the laws of the country under whose laws the affiliate is governed and any of exists, was (unless the affiliate was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or was last continued and under the laws of each country in which the business is carried on through a permanent establishment (as defined by proposed new Regulation 8202) in that country,
  - — under the laws of the country in which the business is principally carried on, or
  - — under the laws of the country under whose laws a corporation related to the non-resident corporation is governed and any of exists, was (unless that related corporation was continued in any jurisdiction) formed or organized, or was last continued, if those regulating laws are recognized under the laws of the country in which the business is principally carried on and all of those countries are members of the European Union.

The amendments apply to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after 1999.

Letter from Dept. of Finance, September 19, 2002: See under 95(2.3)(b).

(d) the terms and conditions of such agreements are substantially the same as the terms and conditions of similar agreements made by persons dealing at arm's length;

"specified deposit" means a deposit of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer resident in Canada with a prescribed financial institution resident in Canada where

(a) the income from the deposit is income of the affiliate for the year that would, but for paragraph (2)(a.3), be income from an active business carried on by it in a country other than Canada (other than a business the principal purpose of which is to derive income from property including interest, dividends, rents, royalties or similar returns or substitutes therefor or profits from the disposition of investment property), or

(b) the income from the deposit is income of the affiliate for the year that would, but for paragraph (2)(a.3), be income from an active business carried on by the affiliate principally with persons with whom the affiliate deals at arm's length in the country under whose laws the affiliate was formed or continued and exists and is governed and in which the business is principally carried on by it and the deposit was held by the affiliate in the course of carrying on that part of the business conducted with non-resident persons with whom the affiliate deals at arm's length or that part of the business conducted with a person with whom the affiliate was related where it can be demonstrated that the related person used or held the funds deposited in the course of a business carried on by the related person with non-resident persons with whom the related person and the affiliate deal at arm's length.

History: The definitions "excluded income" and "excluded revenue" added to subsec. 95(2.5) by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 73(10), applicable to taxation years of foreign affiliates that begin after 1999 except that, where a taxpayer so elects in writing and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxation year that includes June 14, 2001, subsec. 95(2.5) applies to taxation years, of all of the taxpayer's foreign affiliates, that begin after 1994 except that, where there has been a change in the taxation year of a particular foreign affiliate of a taxpayer in 1994 and after February 22, 1994, the enacted provisions apply to taxation years of the particular foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that end after 1994, unless

(a) the particular foreign affiliate had requested that change in the taxation year in writing before February 22, 1994 from the income taxation authority of the country in which it was resident and subject to income taxation; or

(b) the first taxation year of the particular foreign affiliate that began after 1994 began at a time in 1995 that is earlier than the time that it would have begun if there had not been that change in the taxation year of the particular foreign affiliate,

and, notwithstanding subsections 152(4) to (5), any assessment of a taxpayer's tax payable under the Act for any of those taxation years shall be made that is necessary to take into account the application of this amendment.

Subsec. 95(2.5) added by 1995, c. 21, subsec. 46(6), applicable to taxation years of foreign affiliates of taxpayers that begin after 1994 except that, where there has been a change in the taxation year of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer in 1994 and after February 22, 1994, the new subsection applies to taxation years of such foreign affiliate of the taxpayer that end after 1994, unless

(a) such foreign affiliate had requested that change in the taxation year in writing before February 22, 1994 from the income taxation authority of the country in which it was resident and subject to income taxation; or

(b) the first taxation year of such foreign affiliate that began after 1994 began at a time in 1995 that is earlier than the time that that taxation year would have begun if there had not been that change in the taxation of such foreign affiliate.

Regulations: 7900 (prescribed financial institution).

(3) Definition of "services" — For the purposes of paragraph (2)(b), "services" includes the insurance of Canadian risks but does not include

(a) the transportation of persons or goods; or

(b) services performed in connection with the purchase or sale of goods.

Proposed Addition — 95(3)(c), (d)

(c) the transmission of electronic signals or electricity along a transmission system located outside Canada; or

(d) the manufacturing or processing outside Canada, in accordance with the taxpayer's specifications and under a contract between the taxpayer and the affiliate, of tangible property that is owned by the taxpayer if the property resulting from the manufacturing or processing is used or held by the taxpayer in the ordinary course of the taxpayer's business carried on in Canada.

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 133(28), will add paras. 95(3)(c) and (d), applicable to 2001 et seq. of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer. The paras. may also, by election, be applicable to taxation years that begin after 1994: see Application note to 95(2)(a) proposed amendments.

If a taxpayer has made what would, but for this paragraph, be a valid election as described above (re para. (d)), and the taxpayer has, on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day that is the third anniversary of the day on which the amending Act receives Royal Assent, filed with the Minister of National Revenue a notice in writing to revoke the election, the election is deemed, otherwise than for the purpose of this paragraph, never to have been made.

Notwithstanding subsecs. 152(4) to (5) of the Act, any assessment of a taxpayer's tax, interest and penalties payable under the Act for any taxation year shall be made that is necessary to take an election or revocation referred to above into account.

Technical Notes: Paragraph 95(2)(b) provides that service income of a controlled foreign affiliate of a taxpayer will, under certain circumstances, be treated as income from a business other than an active business.

Subsection 95(3) provides that, for the purpose of paragraph 95(2)(b), "services" includes the insurance of Canadian risks but does not include

- the transportation of persons or goods (paragraph 95(3)(a)), or
- services performed in connection with the purchase or sale of goods (paragraph 95(3)(b)).

New paragraph 95(3)(c) ensures that, for the purpose of paragraph 95(2)(b), the transmission of electronic signals or electricity along a transmission system located outside Canada does not constitute "services".

New paragraph 95(3)(d) accommodates certain types of contract manufacturing services provided by a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer. That paragraph ensures that, for the purpose of paragraph 95(2)(b), manufacturing or processing does not constitute "services" where it consists of manufacturing or processing outside Canada, in accordance with the taxpayer's specifications and under a contract between the taxpayer and the affiliate, of tangible property that is owned by the taxpayer if the property resulting from the manufacturing or processing is used or held by the taxpayer in the ordinary course of the taxpayer's business carried on in Canada.

New paragraphs 95(3)(c) and (d) apply to the 2001 and subsequent taxation years of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer. However, if the taxpayer elects in writing and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day on which these amendments are assented to, new paragraphs 95(3)(c) and (d) apply to the taxation years, of all foreign affiliates of the taxpayer, that begin after 1994. Note, also, that new paragraph 95(3)(d) is included in the Global Section 95 Election package described [under 95(2)(a) — ed.]

Letter from Dept. of Finance, September 14, 2001:

Dear [xxx]

I am writing in reply to your letter to Mr. Wally Conway dated July 18, 2001 in which you requested an amendment to the Income Tax Act (the "Act") to extend the scope of paragraph 95(3)(a) of the Act.

In your letter, you argue the following:

- Paragraph 95(2)(b) of the Act can apply, inter alia, to the provision of services provided by a controlled foreign affiliate of a taxpayer where the amount paid or payable in consideration for those services is deducted in computing the income from a business carried on in Canada by any person in relation to whom the affiliate is a controlled foreign affiliate or a person related to the controlled foreign affiliate.
- Where applicable, paragraph 95(2)(b) of the Act deems the provision of such services to be a separate business other than an active business carried on by the affiliate. The main consequence of this characterization is that the income earned by the affiliate from the provision of the services is deemed to be foreign accrual property income (FAPI) of the affiliate.
- Subsection 95(3) provides an exception to paragraph 95(2)(b). Subsection 95(3) excludes certain activities from constituting "services" for the purpose of paragraph 95(2)(b).
- In particular, paragraph 95(3)(a) ensures that "the transportation of persons or goods" is excluded from constituting "services" for the purpose of paragraph 95(2)(b). The provisions of paragraph 95(3)(a) do not offend paragraph 95(2)(b), as there is no erosion of the tax base or diversion of income from Canada if the services are required by their very nature to be performed outside Canada. Specifically, the transportation of persons or goods outside Canada is, by its very nature, a service that must be performed outside Canada and is therefore markedly different from services that otherwise could have been performed in Canada.

Based on this policy rationale underlying paragraph 95(3)(a), you submit in your letter that subsection 95(3) should be expanded in scope to ensure also that the transmission of electronic signals or electricity along a transmission system located outside Canada be excluded from being "services" for the purpose of paragraph 95(2)(b). We agree with this submission from a tax policy standpoint, and are therefore prepared to recommend to the Minister of Finance that paragraph 95(3)(a) be amended to ensure that the transmission of electronic signals or electricity along a transmission system located outside Canada be excluded from being "services" for the purpose of paragraph 95(2)(b). We will recommend that the amendment be effective for the 2001 and subsequent taxation years of foreign affiliates. If the recommendation is acted upon, I would anticipate that such an amendment would be included in the next technical bill.

Yours sincerely,

Brian Ernewein
Director, Tax Legislation Division, Tax Policy Branch

- the partnership or trust, as the case may be, is deemed to be a non-resident corporation having capital stock of a single class divided into 100 issued shares,
- the holder is deemed to own at that time that proportion of the issued shares of that class that the fair market value of the holder's partnership interest in the partnership or of the holder's beneficial interest in the trust, as the case may be, is of the fair market value at that time of all partnership interests in the partnership or of all beneficial interests in the trust, as the case may be, and
- the fair market value, at any time, of the holder's beneficial interest in a trust (other than a non-discretionary trust within the meaning assigned by subsection 17(15)) is deemed to be the fair market value, at that time, of all beneficial interests in the trust.

Subsection 95(3.6) applies after December 20, 2002.

Related Provisions: 95(3.2) — Definitions.

(3.7) Anti-avoidance — 150 beneficiaries — If it can be reasonably considered that one of the main reasons that an entity holds, at any time, a capital interest in a trust is to cause the trust to satisfy the condition in paragraph (b) of the definition "exempt trust" in subsection (3.2), the trust is deemed not to have satisfied at that time that condition.

Technical Notes: New subsection 95(3.7) provides that if it can be reasonably considered that one of the main reasons that an entity holds, at any time, a capital interest in a trust is to cause the trust to satisfy the condition in paragraph (b) of the definition "exempt trust" in subsection 95(3.2), the trust is deemed not to have satisfied at that time that condition.

Subsection 95(3.7) applies after December 20, 2002.

(3.8) Computing exempt surplus — No amount is to be included in computing the exempt surplus of a foreign affiliate (other than a controlled foreign affiliate) of a particular corporation resident in Canada in respect of a gain of that foreign affiliate arising on a disposition, described in any of paragraphs (2)(d) and (e) and (e.3) to (e.5), of excluded property if it may reasonably be considered that one of the main reasons for the claiming of a relevant cost base, or for electing proceeds of disposition, in excess of the adjusted cost base of the excluded property disposed of was the creation of exempt surplus of that foreign affiliate in respect of the particular corporation resident in Canada (or in respect of a corporation resident in Canada with which the particular corporation resident in Canada does not deal at arm's length), having regard to, amongst other things, the following:

(a) the amount of any foreign income tax paid by that foreign affiliate in respect of the gain arising on the disposition;

(b) the amount of any distribution made, or dividend paid, on or after the disposition, to the particular corporation resident in Canada or a corporation resident in Canada with which the particular corporation resident in Canada does not deal at arm's length; and

(c) the amount of any election under section 93 made in respect of a disposition of a share of a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation resident in Canada or of a share of a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada with which the particular corporation resident in Canada does not deal at arm's length.

Technical Notes: New subsection 95(3.8) is an anti-avoidance rule to prevent the premature recognition of exempt surplus (the non-taxable portion of a capital gain) on an internal sale of excluded property to which any of proposed new paragraphs 95(2)(d) and (e) and (e.3) to (e.5) applies. Although capital gains on internal sales of excluded property, to which those paragraphs apply, create foreign accrual property income, where the foreign affiliate is not a controlled foreign affiliate of the particular corporation resident in Canada the particular corporation resident in Canada is not subjected to Canadian tax on that foreign accrual property income. Therefore, the particular corporation resident in Canada can be advantaged on an internal disposition of excluded property by claiming a relevant cost base, or electing proceeds of disposition, greater than the adjusted cost base of the property disposed of, in particular where the foreign jurisdiction does not tax capital gains. Where the foreign jurisdiction does tax capital gains, the particular corporation resident in Canada may wish to recognize gains because of the foreign taxes paid and the desire to create taxable surplus to match the related taxes, which would be appropriate where the amount of tax reflects Canadian tax rates on capital gains.

New subsection 95(3.8) provides that no amount may be added to the exempt surplus of a foreign affiliate of a particular corporation resident in Canada in respect of the gain arising on the internal disposition of excluded property if it is reasonable to conclude that one of the main reasons for claiming a relevant cost base, or electing proceeds of disposition, greater than the adjusted cost base of the property disposed of on that internal disposition was the creation of exempt surplus in respect of the particular corporation resident in Canada or in respect of a corporation resident in Canada with which the particular corporation resident in Canada does not deal at arm's length.

The factors to consider in making this determination include the following:

- the amount of foreign income tax paid,
- the amount of distribution made, or dividend paid, to the particular corporation resident in Canada or to a corporation resident in Canada with which the particular corporation resident in Canada does not deal at arm's length, and
- the amount of any election under section 93 made in respect of a disposition of a share of a foreign affiliate of the particular corporation resident in Canada or of a share of a foreign affiliate of a corporation resident in Canada with which the particular corporation resident in Canada does not deal at arm's length.

Subsection 95(3.8) applies after December 20, 2002.

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 133(29), will add subsecs. 95(3.1) to (3.8), applicable as follows:

(i) subsec. (3.1), to taxation years, of a foreign affiliate of a taxpayer, that begin after December 20, 2002. However, if a taxpayer so elects in writing and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year that includes the day on which this Act is assented to, the subsec. applies to taxation years, of all foreign affiliates of the taxpayer, that begin after 1994;

(ii) subsecs. (3.2) to (3.7), after December 20, 2002; and

(iii) subsec. (3.8), to dispositions that occur after February 27, 2004.

(4) Definitions — In this section,

"direct equity percentage" at any time of any person in a corporation is the percentage determined by the following rules:

(a) for each class of the issued shares of the capital stock of the corporation, determine the proportion of 100 that the number of shares of that class owned by that person at that time is of the total number of issued shares of that class at that time, and

(b) select the proportion determined under paragraph (a) for that person in respect of the corporation that is not less than any other proportion so determined for that person in respect of the corporation at that time, and the proportion selected under paragraph (b), when expressed as a percentage, is that person's direct equity percentage in the corporation at that time;

Interpretation Bulletins: IT-392: Meaning of term "share" (archived).

"equity percentage" at any time of a person, in any particular corporation, is the total of

(a) the person's direct equity percentage at that time in the particular corporation, and

(b) all percentages each of which is the product obtained when the person's equity percentage at that time in any corporation is multiplied by that corporation's direct equity percentage at that time in the particular corporation except that for the purposes of the definition "participating percentage" in subsection (1), paragraph (b) shall be read as if the reference to "any corporation" were a reference to "any corporation other than a corporation resident in Canada";

Related Provisions: 94(1)(d) — Deemed ownership in trust deemed to be corporation for FAPI purposes.

"relevant cost base" to a foreign affiliate of property at any time means the adjusted cost base to the affiliate of the property at that time or such greater amount as the taxpayer claims not exceeding the fair market value of the property at that time.

(b) where a person or partnership acquires or disposes of shares of the capital stock of a corporation or interests in a partnership, either directly or indirectly, and it can reasonably be considered that the principal purpose for the acquisition or disposition is to permit a person to avoid, reduce or defer the payment of tax or any other amount that would otherwise be payable under this Act, that acquisition or disposition is deemed not to have taken place, and where the shares or partnership interests were unissued by the corporation or partnership immediately before the acquisition, those shares or partnership interests, as the case may be, are deemed not to have been issued.

(a) the foreign affiliate had requested the change in writing before February 22, 1994 from the income taxation authority of the country in which the foreign affiliate was resident and subject to income taxation; or

(b) the foreign affiliate's first taxation year that began after 1994 began at a time in 1995 that is earlier than the time at which that taxation year would have begun if the change had not occurred.

Paragraph 96(1)(d) is amended so that, where at any time in a particular taxation year of the partnership the partnership's property includes a participating interest in a particular non-resident entity, sections 94.1 to 94.4 apply to the partnership — in computing its income from property from a property that is the participating interest — for the particular taxation year in respect of the participating interest as if

- The exemption in paragraph (a) of the definition "exempt interest" for controlled foreign affiliates is treated as if it referred only to controlled foreign affiliates of the Canadian taxpayer;
- A "fresh-start year" (relevant in computing the partnership's "income allocation" and "loss allocation" under the accrual regime in section 94.3) of the particular non-resident entity in respect of the partnership were its taxation year (at the end of which the partnership holds an interest in it and it is a foreign investment entity) that ends in a taxation year of the particular affiliate that begins after 2002 and that immediately follows a taxation year of the particular non-resident entity in respect of which subsection 94.1(3) would not have been applicable to the particular;

- A member of the partnership (rather than the partnership) is required to make a number of the elections, designations, notifications and provisions of information under sections 94.1 to 94.4 in connection with the partnership's participating interests in foreign investment entities. In addition, the Minister in sending a demand for information to the particular affiliate under subparagraph 94.1(2)(e)(iii) or 94.3(2)(b)(iii), or any of paragraphs 94.1(2)(p) to (r) or 94.2(2)(e), is required to send the demand also to the member in connection with the partnership's participating interests in foreign investment entities.
- The definition "income allocation" in subsection 94.3(1) were read without reference to paragraph (i) of the description of "A"; and
- In applying subparagraph 94.3(2)(b)(ii), the partnership were not a foreign investment entity, so that a controlled foreign affiliate that is a foreign investment entity can use the accrual rules in section 94.3.

Proposed Addition — 96(1.01)

(1.01) Income allocation to former member — If, at any time in a fiscal period of a partnership, a taxpayer ceases to be a member of the partnership

(a) for the purposes of subsection (1) and sections 34.1, 34.2, 101, 103 and 249.1, and notwithstanding paragraph 98.1(1)(d), the taxpayer is deemed to be a member of the partnership at the end of the fiscal period; and

(b) for the purposes of the application of paragraph (2.1)(b) and subparagraphs 53(1)(e)(i) and (2)(c)(i) to the taxpayer, the fiscal period of the partnership is deemed to end

(i) immediately before the time at which the taxpayer is deemed by subsection 70(5) to have disposed of the interest in the partnership, where the taxpayer ceased to be a member of the partnership because of the taxpayer's death, and

(ii) immediately before the time that is immediately before the time that the taxpayer ceased to be a member of the partnership, in any other case.

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 40(1), will add subsec. 96(1.01), applicable in respect of a taxpayer, in the case where the taxpayer ceases to be a member of a partnership because of the taxpayer's death, to 2003 et seq.; and in any other case, to 1995 et seq.

Technical Notes (December 20, 2002): New subsection 96(1.01) generally applies to the 1995 and subsequent taxation years. Paragraph 96(1.01)(a) deems a taxpayer who is a former member of a partnership to be a member at the end of the fiscal period in which the taxpayer ceased to be a member, for the purpose of allocating partnership income or loss for that period. This new provision clarifies that, although a taxpayer may have ceased to be a member of a partnership before the end of the partnership's fiscal period, an amount of the income or loss of the partnership is allocable to the taxpayer under subsection 96(1). The amount so allocated is relevant to certain calculations relating to partnership income or loss, including the calculation of the adjusted cost base of the former member of the partnership immediately before the taxpayer ceased to be member.

New subsection 96(1.01) applies notwithstanding the rule in paragraph 98.1(1)(d) that would otherwise deem a former partnership member with a residual interest not to be a member of the partnership for the purposes of certain provisions of the Act.

New paragraph 96(1.01)(a) does not require that partnership income or loss be calculated immediately after a member leaves the partnership. The income or loss allocation, including that of the former member, continues to be calculated after the end of the partnership's fiscal period. In some circumstances the fiscal period of a partnership may end in a taxation year of the former member that is after the taxation year in which the partnership interest was disposed of. It is, therefore, possible that a member will not be required to report a partnership income allocation until the taxation year following that in which a capital gain or loss on the disposition of the partnership interest is required to be reported.

New paragraph 96(1.01)(b) clarifies that an income or loss allocation for the "stub period" during which a taxpayer was a member is included in the calculation of the adjusted cost base of the partnership interest at the time the former member disposes of the interest or a residual interest. The income or loss allocation will affect the calculation of a capital loss under paragraph 98.1(1)(c) or subsection 100(2). Subsection 96(1.01) may ameliorate certain situations where, under the existing provisions of the Act, a former member may have been required to report a capital gain in the year that the person left the partnership, only to be offset by a capital loss in a subsequent year.

Example

Ms. Brown was a partner in XYZ Partnership until June 30. The fiscal period end of the partnership ends December 31. The adjuste d cost base of her partnership interest on January 1 was Nil. From January to June 30 she withdre w $16,000 in capital.

Just before the end of the partnership's fiscal period, all the partners agree that Ms. Brown's share of income for the period was $20,000. On December 30 she was paid $4,000 in satisfaction of her residual interest.

A summary of Ms. Brown's adjusted cost base is as follows:

		Adjusted Cost Base
January 1, Year 1		Nil
January 31, Drawings	$<16,000>	<16,000>
Retirement of Ms. Brown, June 30
December 30
— Share of income for 6 months	20,000	4,000
— Payout of rights to equity	4,000	Nil
December 31 — Fiscal period ends

In the result, Ms. Brown is allocated $20,000 income under subsection 96(1.01). The adjusted cost base of her interest immediately before she retired on June 30 was $4,000 (i.e., $20,000 less $16,000). She is deemed by paragraph 98.1(1)(b) to have disposed of her residual interest on December 31 for proceeds of disposition of $4.000, such that she has no capital gain or loss on the disposition.

Subparagraph 53(1)(e)(v) requires that "rights or things" (referred to in subsection 70(2)) in respect of the partnership interest of a deceased partner be included in the adjusted cost base of the partnership interest of the deceased. This provision is no longer relevant to income of the partnership to which a partner is entitled at the time of death, since new subsection 96(1.01) applies to the allocation of partnership income for the fiscal period in which the taxpayer dies. However, subparagraph 53(1)(e)(v) continues to apply in respect of other rights or things, if any, to which the deceased taxpayer is entitled through the partnership that are required to be included in the income of the deceased taxpayer under subsection 70(2).

Related Provisions: 96(3) — Election by members of partnership.

(b) all amounts each of which is an amount equal to the share of the income or loss referred to in this subsection allocated to a taxpayer from a partnership in respect of a particular fiscal period of the partnership shall, notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, be included in computing the taxpayer's income for the taxation year in which that fiscal period of the partnership ends.

Proposed Amendment — Election that 96(1.7) not apply for 2000

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 40(5), will enact the transitional rule below for subsec. 96(1.7).

40. (5) If a taxpayer, who is a member of a partnership at the end of a particular fiscal period, of the partnership, that ends in the taxpayer's 2000 taxation year, so elects in writing and files the election with the Minister of National Revenue on or before the taxpayer's filing-due date for the taxpayer's taxation year in which the amending legislation is assented to,

(a) subsection 96(1.7) of the Income Tax Act does not apply to the taxpayer's 2000 taxation year;

(b) the taxpayer is deemed to have a capital gain, a capital loss or a business investment loss in respect of the partnership for the particular fiscal period equal to the amount of the taxable capital gain, the allowable capital loss or the allowable business investment loss in respect of the partnership for the particular fiscal period, as the case may be, multiplied by the reciprocal of the fraction in paragraph 38(a) of the Income Tax Act that applies to the partnership for the particular fiscal period;

(c) the amount of a capital gain, a capital loss or a business investment loss determined under paragraph (b) is deemed to be a capital gain, a capital loss or a business investment loss, as the case may be, of the taxpayer from a disposition of a capital property on the day that the particular fiscal period ends; and

(d) except as provided by this subsection, no amount shall be included in computing the taxpayer's taxable capital gains, allowable capital losses and allowable business investment losses in respect of the taxable capital gains, allowable capital losses and allowable business investment losses of the partnership for the particular fiscal period.

Technical Notes (December 20, 2002): The calculation of the capital gains inclusion rate of a taxpayer for the 2000 taxation year takes into account the net capital gains or losses of the taxpayer for the year 2000 other than those allocated by a partnership. It is the inclusion rate of the taxpayer, determined without reference to the allocated partnership gains, that is applied to the taxpayer's share of the partnership gains in determining the taxable capital gains of the taxpayer derived from the partnership capital gains. As a result, taxpayers with different inclusion rates report different amounts of taxable capital gains in respect of capital gains allocated to the taxpayer by a partnership.

Subclause 40(7) [now 40(5) — ed.] of the legislation introduces a special transitional rule under which members of a partnership may elect to treat capital gains and losses allocated to them by a partnership as their own capital gains and losses for the purpose of calculating the taxpayer's capital gains inclusion rate for the year 2000. The gains and losses will be considered to have been realized by the taxpayer on the day on which the fiscal period of the partnership ends.

If a taxpayer so elects, subsection 96(1.7) will not apply. The taxpayer will be deemed to have realized (on the day on which the fiscal period of the partnership ends in the taxpayer's 2000 taxation year) a capital gain, a capital loss or a business investment loss in respect of the partnership equal to the amount of the taxable capital gain, the allowable capital loss or the allowable business investment loss, as the case may be, of the partnership allocated to the taxpayer, multiplied by the reciprocal of the fraction in paragraph 38(a) that applied to the partnership for the particular fiscal period. Where the inclusion rate for the partnership cannot be determined, the rules in subsection 96(1.7) apply to determine the inclusion rate of the partnership. This capital gain, capital loss or business investment loss is deemed to be a capital gain, capital loss or business investment loss, as the case may be, of the taxpayer from a disposition of a capital property on the day that the particular fiscal period ends.

Interpretation Bulletins: See list at end of s. 96.

(1.71) Application — Where the fraction referred to in the description of C in subsection (1.7) cannot be determined by a taxpayer in respect of a fiscal period of a partnership that ended before February 28, 2000, or includes February 28, 2000 or October 17, 2000, for the purposes of subsection (1.7), the fraction is deemed to be

(a) where the fiscal period ended before or began before February 28, 2000, 3/4;

(b) where the fiscal period began after February 27, 2000 and before October 18, 2000, 2/3; and

(c) in any other case, 1/2.

History: Subsec. 96(1.71) added by 2001, c. 17, subsec. 74(4), applicable to fiscal periods that begin after 2000.

(1.8) Loan of property — For the purposes of subsection 56(4.1) and sections 74.1 and 74.3, where an individual has transferred or lent property, either directly or indirectly, by means of a trust or by any other means whatever, to a person and the property or property substituted therefor is an interest in a partnership, the person's share of the amount of any income or loss of the partnership for a fiscal period in which the person was a specified member of the partnership shall be deemed to be income or loss, as the case may be, from the property or substituted property.

Related Provisions: 248(5) — Substituted property.

Proposed Addition — 96(1.9)

(1.9) Application of sections 94.1 and 94.2 — If an exempt taxpayer (as defined in subsection 94.1(1)) for a taxation year is a member of a partnership at any time in the year, in applying paragraphs (1)(f) and (g) and 53(1)(e) and (2)(c) to the taxpayer for a fiscal period of the partnership that ends in the year this Act is to be read without reference to sections 94.1 to 94.4.

Application: The October 30, 2003 Notice of Ways and Means Motion (NRTs and FIEs), subsec. 18(2), will add subsec. 96(1.9), applicable to fiscal periods that begin after 2002.

Technical Notes: New subsection 96(1.9) is relevant where an "exempt taxpayer" (in general, an individual who has been resident in Canada for fewer than 60 months) is a member of a partnership and the partnership invests in a foreign investment entity. In these circumstances, the exempt taxpayer's share of the partnership's income or loss is computed without regard to sections 94.1 to 94.4. For further details on the application of section 94.2 to partnerships, see the commentary on new subsections 94.2(6) to (8).

(2) Construction — The provisions of this subdivision shall be read and construed as if each of the assumptions in paragraphs (1)(a) to (g) were made.

(a) the total of all amounts each of which is the taxpayer's share of the amount of any loss of the partnership, determined in accordance with subsection (1), for a fiscal period of the partnership ending in the taxation year from a business (other than a farming business) or from property

(b) the amount, if any, by which

(i) the taxpayer's at-risk amount in respect of the partnership at the end of the fiscal period exceeds the total of

(ii) the amount required by subsection 127(8) in respect of the partnership to be added in computing the investment tax credit of the taxpayer for the taxation year,

(iii) the taxpayer's share of any losses of the partnership for the fiscal period from a farming business, and

(iv) the taxpayer's share of

(A) the foreign resource pool expenses, if any, incurred by the partnership in the fiscal period,

(B) the Canadian exploration expense, if any, incurred by the partnership in the fiscal period,

(C) the Canadian development expense, if any, incurred by the partnership in the fiscal period, and

(D) the Canadian oil and gas property expense, if any, incurred by the partnership in the fiscal period, shall

(c) not be deducted in computing the taxpayer's income for the year,

(d) not be included in computing the taxpayer's non-capital loss for the year, and

(e) be deemed to be the taxpayer's limited partnership loss in respect of the partnership for the year.

(2.3) Idem — For the purposes of subsection (2.2), where a taxpayer has acquired the taxpayer's partnership interest at any time from a transferor other than the partnership, the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of that interest shall be computed as if the cost to the taxpayer of the interest were the lesser of

(a) the taxpayer's cost otherwise determined, and

(b) the greater of

(i) the adjusted cost base of that interest to the transferor immediately before that time, and

(ii) nil,

and where the adjusted cost base of the transferor cannot be determined, it shall be deemed to be equal to the total of the amounts determined in respect of the taxpayer under paragraphs (2.2)(c) and (d) immediately after that time.

(2.4) Limited partner — For the purposes of this section and sections 111 and 127, a taxpayer who is a member of a partnership at a particular time is a limited partner of the partnership at that time if the member's partnership interest is not an exempt interest (within the meaning assigned by subsection (2.5)) at that time and if, at that time or within 3 years after that time,

(a) by operation of any law governing the partnership arrangement, the liability of the member as a member of the partnership is limited (except by operation of a provision of a statute of Canada or a province that limits the member's liability only for debts, obligations and liabilities of the partnership, or any member of the partnership, arising from negligent acts or omissions or misconduct that another member of the partnership or an employee, agent or representative of the partnership commits in the course of the partnership business while the partnership is a limited liability partnership);

Proposed Amendment — 96(2.4)(a)

(a) by operation of any law governing the partnership arrangement, the liability of the member as a member of the partnership is limited (except by operation of a provision of a statute of Canada or a province that limits the member's liability only for debts, obligations and liabilities of the partnership, or any member of the partnership, arising from negligent acts or omissions, from misconduct or from fault of another member of the partnership or an employee, an agent or a representative of the partnership in the course of the partnership business while the partnership is a limited liability partnership);

Application: The February 27, 2004 draft legislation, subsec. 40(2), will amend para. 96(2.4)(a) to read as above, applicable after June 20, 2001.

Technical Notes (December 20, 2002): Paragraph 96(2.4)(a) provides that a member of a partnership is a "limited partner" if, by operation of law governing the partnership agreement, the liability of the member as a member is limited. However, paragraph 96(2.4)(a) does not apply in cases where a member's liability is limited by operation of a statutory provision of Canada or of a province that limits the member's liability only for the debts, obligations and liabilities of a limited liability partnership (or of any member of the partnership) arising from negligent acts or omissions of another member of the partnership (or of an employee, agent or representative of the partnership) in the course of the partnership business and while the partnership is a limited liability partnership.

The Province of Quebec has amended its legislation concerning partnerships to allow partners to carry on their activities within a limited liability partnership. That legislation refers to the civil law concept of "fault/fautes". The English version of paragraph 96(2.4)(a) does not refer to the civil law concept of "fault" and is amended to do so, effective after June 20, 2001.

Proposed Amendment — 96(2.4)(a) — ACB adjustment

Letter from Dept. of Finance, July 11, 2003: See under 40(3.1).

(b) the member or a person not dealing at arm's length with the member is entitled, either immediately or in the future and either absolutely or contingently, to receive an amount or to obtain a benefit that would be described in paragraph (2.2)(d) if that paragraph were read without reference to subparagraphs (ii) and (vi);

(c) one of the reasons for the existence of the member who owns the interest

(i) can reasonably be considered to be to limit the liability of any person with respect to that interest, and

(ii) cannot reasonably be considered to be to permit any person who has an interest in the member to carry on that person's business (other than an investment business) in the most effective manner; or

(d) there is an agreement or other arrangement for the disposition of an interest in the partnership and one of the main reasons for the agreement or arrangement can reasonably be considered to be to attempt to avoid the application of this subsection to the member.

Subsec. 96(2.4) amended by 1998, c. 19, subsec. 123(5), applicable to fiscal periods that end after November 1994. The subsec. formerly read:

(2.4) For the purposes of this section and sections 111 and 127, a taxpayer who is a member of a partnership at a particular time is a limited partner of that partnership at that time if the taxpayer's partnership interest is not an exempt interest at that time (within the meaning assigned by subsection (2.5)) and if, at that time or within three years after that time,

(a) by operation of any law which governs the partnership arrangement, the liability of the taxpayer in the taxpayer's capacity as a member of the partnership, is limited;

(b) the taxpayer or a person with whom the taxpayer does not deal at arm's length is entitled to receive an amount or obtain a benefit that would be described in paragraph (2.2)(d) if it were read without reference to subparagraphs (2.2)(d)(ii) and (vi);

(c) one of the reasons for the existence of the taxpayer who owns the interest

(i) may reasonably be considered to be to limit the liability of any other person with respect to that interest, and

(ii) may not reasonably be considered to be to permit any person who has an interest in the taxpayer to carry on that person's business (other than an investment business) in the most effective manner; or

(d) there is an agreement or other arrangement for the disposition of an interest in the partnership and one of the main reasons for the agreement or arrangement may reasonably be considered to be to attempt to avoid the application of this subsection to the taxpayer.

(8) Foreign partnerships — For the purposes of this Act, where at a particular time a person resident in Canada becomes a member of a partnership, or a person who is a member of a partnership becomes resident in Canada, and immediately before the particular time no member of the partnership is resident in Canada, the following rules apply for the purpose of computing the partnership's income for fiscal periods ending after the particular time:

(a) where, at or before the particular time, the partnership held depreciable property of a prescribed class (other than taxable Canadian property),

(i) no amount shall be included in determining the amounts for any of A, C, D and F to I in the definition "undepreciated capital cost" in subsection 13(21) in respect of the acquisition or disposition before the particular time of the property, and

(ii) where the property is the partnership's property at the particular time, the property shall be deemed to have been acquired, immediately after the particular time, by the partnership at a capital cost equal to the lesser of its fair market value and its capital cost to the partnership otherwise determined;

(d).

(9) Idem — For the purpose of applying subsection (8), where it can reasonably be considered that one of the main reasons that there is a member of the partnership who is resident in Canada is to avoid the application of that subsection, the member shall be deemed not to be resident in Canada.

Proposed Amendment — 96(9)

(9) Application of foreign partnership rule — For the purposes of applying subsection (8) and this subsection,

(a) where it can reasonably be considered that one of the main reasons that a member of a partnership is resident in Canada is to avoid the application of subsection (8), the member is deemed not to be resident in Canada; and

Application: The October 30, 2003 Notice of Ways and Means Motion (NRTs and FIEs), subsec. 18(4), will amend subsec. 96(9) to read as above, applicable to fiscal periods that begin after June 22, 2000.

Technical Notes: Subsection 96(8) provides rules that apply where, at a particular time, a Canadian resident becomes a member of a partnership, or a person who is a member of such a partnership becomes a resident of Canada. Where, immediately before the particular time no member of the partnership was resident in Canada, these rules apply in computing the income of the partnership for fiscal periods ending after the particular time. In general terms, the rules in subsection 96(8) are designed to prevent losses accrued while a partnership had no Canadian resident partners from being used to reduce Canadian income tax liabilities.

Subsection 96(9) provides that, where one of the main reasons that there is a member of the partnership who is resident in Canada is to avoid the application of subsection 96(8), that member will, for the purpose of applying subsection 96(8), be considered not to be resident in Canada.

Subsection 96(9) is amended to provide an explicit look-through rule for the purposes of subsection 96(8) so that members of partnerships may be identified through one or more tiers of partnerships which are members of other partnerships. Amended subsection 96(9) is consistent with new subsection 94.2(8).

Proposed Amendment — 97(2) opening words

(2) Rules where election by partners — Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act other than subsection 13(21.2), where a taxpayer at any time in a taxation year disposes of any property (other than a specified participating interest) that is a capital property, Canadian resource property, foreign resource property, eligible capital property or inventory of the taxpayer to a partnership that immediately after that time is a Canadian partnership of which the taxpayer is a member, if the taxpayer and all the other members of the partnership jointly so elect in prescribed form within the time referred to in subsection 96(4),

Application: The October 30, 2003 Notice of Ways and Means Motion (NRTs and FIEs), s. 19, will amend the opening words of subsec. 97(2) to read as above, applicable to dispositions that occur in taxation years that begin after 2002.

Technical Notes: Subsection 97(2) provides rules that allow a person to transfer certain types of property on a tax-deferred "rollover" basis to a partnership.

Subsection 97(2) is amended so that it does not apply to a transfer of property that is a specified participating interest. The concept of a specified participating interest is generally relevant in the context of the foreign investment entity rules in sections 94.1 to 94.4. For more information on the definition "specified participating interest" in subsection 248(1), see the commentary on that definition.

(a) the provisions of paragraphs 85(1)(a) to (f) apply to the disposition as if

(i) the reference therein to "corporation's cost" were read as a reference to "partnership's cost",

(ii) the references therein to "other than any shares of the capital stock of the corporation or a right to receive any such shares" and to "other than shares of the capital stock of the corporation or a right to receive any such shares" were read as references to "other than an interest in the partnership",

(iii) the references therein to "shareholder of the corporation" were read as references to "member of the partnership",

(iv) the references therein to "the corporation" were read as references to "all the other members of the partnership", and

(v) the references therein to "to the corporation" were read as references to "to the partnership";

(b) in computing, at any time after the disposition, the adjusted cost base to the taxpayer of the taxpayer's interest in the partnership immediately after the disposition,

(i) there shall be added the amount, if any, by which the taxpayer's proceeds of disposition of the property exceed the fair market value, at the time of the disposition, of the consideration (other than an interest in the partnership) received by the taxpayer for the property, and

(ii) there shall be deducted the amount, if any, by which the fair market value, at the time of the disposition, of the consideration (other than an interest in the partnership) received by the taxpayer for the property so disposed of by the taxpayer exceeds the fair market value of the property at the time of the disposition; and

(c) where the property so disposed of by the taxpayer to the partnership is taxable Canadian property of the taxpayer, the interest in the partnership received by the taxpayer as consideration therefor shall be deemed to be taxable Canadian property of the taxpayer.

Related Provisions: 13(21.2)(d) — No election allowed on certain transfers of depreciable property where u.c.c. exceeds fair market value; 40(3.3), (3.4) — Limitation on loss where share acquired by affiliated person; 53(4) — Effect on ACB of share, partnership interest or trust interest; 96(2) — Construction; 96(3) — Election by members; 96(4)–(7) Elections; 97(4) — Where capital cost to partner exceeds proceeds of disposi-
